MEANING OF TERMS

USED IN CLASSIFYING ANNOTATING CASES.

THE different expressions used to describe the effect of the annotating cases have the following meanings, and the classification of the annotating cases has been done strictly in accordance with these meanings. The annotating cases, except such as are classified as "Mentioned," are grouped according to the points in the case which they annotate: within these groups they are listed chronologically, except such as are classified as "Referred to," which come at the end of the group and are arranged inter se in chronological order. Cases which annotate the annotated case generally are grouped together after cases which annotate specific points, similarly arranged, and are followed by cases classified as "Mentioned" arranged chronologically inter se. The terms used in classifying the annotating cases are as follows:—

"APPLIED" (Apld.).—This expression is used to denote the fact that the principle of law enunciated in the annotated case has been applied to a new set of facts and circumstances in the annotating case.

"APPROVED" (Apprvd.).—This expression is used to denote the fact that the annotated case has been considered to be good law in the annotating case where the latter is in a higher court than the former.

"CONSIDERED" (Consd.).—This expression is used where the remarks in the annotating case are devoid of adverse criticism and merely denote the giving of more or less careful consideration to the annotated case.

"DISTINGUISHED" (Distd.).—This expression is used where the earlier case is not necessarily doubted, but where some essential difference (either on the facts or in law) between it and the annotated case is pointed out.

"DOUBTED" (Dbtd.).—This expression is used where the court in the annotating case without definitely going to the length of saying that the annotated case is wrong, adduces reasons which seem to show that it is not accurate.

"EXPLAINED" (Expld.).—This expression is used where the earlier case is not necessarily doubted, but the decision arrived at is justified or accounted for by calling attention to some point of fact or of law which is usually, but not necessarily, one not obvious on the face of the report.

"EXTENDED" (Extd.).—Compare "APPLIED," supra.

"FOLLOWED" (Folld.).—This expression is used to denote that the same principles of law are applied in the two cases. It does not necessarily imply that the facts are substantially identical in the two cases.

"NOT FOLLOWED" (N.F.).—Compare "FOLLOWED," supra, to which it is the adverse.

"OVERRULED" (Overd.).—This expression is used where the annotating case is on substantially identical facts with the annotated case and in a higher court and the rule in the latter case is held to be wrong.

"REFERRED" (Refd.).—This expression is used only where the annotating case deals with the point of the Digest paragraph and is without comment of any definite character on the case annotated, and where there is no delicate shade of approval or disapproval which would justify the use of any of the foregoing words.

"MENTIONED" (Mentd.).—This expression is used only where none of the foregoing terms apply. In other words, it is used only where the case annotated is cited on a point having nothing to do with the point in the Digest paragraph.

SECT. 1.—WHAT CONSTITUTE "SEWERS" AND "DRAINS."

SUB-SECT. 1.—OUTSIDE THE METROPOLIS.

A. Drains.

See Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 4; Public Health Acts (Amendment) Act, 1890 (c. 59), s. 19.

1. Reservoirs.]—A local board of health has no power, under Public Health Act, 1848 (c. 63), ss. 43–46 & 145, to enter land in invitos, upon report & notice, for the purpose of making a tank, reservoir or deposit bed, to retain sewage & will be restrained by injunction accordingly.

The word "drain" in Public Health Act, 1848 (c. 63), means a passage for sewage from a single house; the word "sewer" extends to any system of drainage; but neither words include reservoirs or cesspools.—SUTTON v. NORWICH CORPN. (1858), 27 L. J. Ch. 739; 31 L. T. O. S. 389; 22 J. P. 353; 6 W. R. 432.

4. Drain "used for drainage of one building only"—Passage for sewage from single house.]—SUTTON v. NORWICH CORPN., No. 1, ante.

5. —— Question of fact—Pair of semi-detached houses.]—Pltf. & deft. were the owners respectively of two plots of land adjoining a road in which there was a public sewer vested in the local authority. Each of them was also the owner of one-half of the road so far as it ran with his plot. Deft. first acquired his plot, & built thereon a pair of semi-detached houses. The drains from each of the houses joined at a point on deft.'s land, & from that point the sewage was carried by one culvert into the public sewer. Part of the culvert was carried through the portion of the road which then belonged to pltf.'s predecessor in title, & was constructed under circumstances which made its construction a trespass. Pltf., having purchased his plot, & the adjoining half of the road, required deft. to remove the portion of the culvert which lay under the latter:—Held: (1) deft.'s pair of semi-detached houses constituted "one building only" within Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 4, & the culvert, from the point of junction of the drainage of the two houses, was a "drain" & not a "sewer" within Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 4; (2) even if the culvert was a sewer deft. could not by his wrongful act vest in the local authority the part of it which lay in pltf.'s land, & pltf. was entitled to have that part removed.—HEDLEY v. WEBB, [1901] 2 Ch. 126; 84 L. T. 526; 65 J. P. 425; 17 T. L. R. 393; sub nom. WEBB v. KNIGHT, HEDLEY v. WEBB, 70 L. J. Ch. 663.

6. —— —— ——.]—By Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 4, "'Drain' means any drain of & used for the drainage of one building only." No general rule can be laid down as to whether a pair of semi-detached houses are "one building only" within Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 4, or not, even though they be under one continuous roof. It is in each case a question of fact.—HUMPHERY v. YOUNG, [1903] 1 K. B. 44; 72 L. J. K. B. 6; 87 L. T. 551; 67 J. P. 34; 51 W. R. 298; 19 T. L. R. 20; 1 L. G. R. 142, D. C.

7. Drain "used for drainage of premises within the same curtilage"—Group of houses around open space of ground—Common access & common accommodation to certain extent—Side channels receiving drainage from cross channels.]—Eighteen dwelling-houses, with pavements in front of them, stood grouped about an open space of ground. At one side of the space there was a boundary wall. Access could be obtained to the space or court by means of a main entrance from a main thoroughfare through a partially inclosed space of ground, & also by means of two narrow passages between certain of the houses. There was certain common accommodation for the tenant of the houses—two ashpits & thirteen water-closets. The slop water from the sinks of each of these houses was carried by open cross channels cut in the pavement at right angles to each house into open side channels at the side of the pavements, & thence through gullies into the main sewer outside. There was one cross channel for each house, but the side channels drained more than one building:—Held: the eighteen dwelling-houses were not premises within the same curtilage within Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 4, & therefore the side channels, being used for the drainage of more than one building, were sewers within the meaning of the definition of that word in Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 4. A number of houses separately occupied, with common access & to some extent common accommodation, are not premises within the same curtilage within Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 4.

I do not think that two separate houses occupied by two separate sets of people, so as to be separate & independent dwelling-houses, can be considered as premises within the same curtilage (PHILLIMORE, J.).—HARRIS v. SCURFIELD (1904), 91 L. T. 536; 68 J. P. 516; 20 T. L. R. 659; 2 L. G. R. 974, D. C.

8. —— Separate houses—Occupied by separate sets of people.]—HARRIS v. SCURFIELD, No. 7, ante.

9. —— —— ——.]—Several houses of different owners stood in a row & were drained in pairs; each house of each pair was drained by a separate pipe into a pipe common to both houses, & each of these common pipes discharged into a line of pipes laid in private ground which discharged into a public sewer. The "common pipes" were admittedly "sewers" within Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55):—Held: the "line of pipes" which discharged into the public sewer was not "a single private drain" within Public Health Acts (Amendment) Act, 1890 (c. 59), s. 19, & therefore proceedings could not be taken under

10. "Single private drain"—Pipe carrying drainage of two or more houses—Belonging to different owners.]—By a system of drainage established before 1848, a single brick drain on resp.'s premises conveyed the drainage of his house, & of other houses belonging to different owners, into an adjacent ditch. In 1853, the local authority of the district substituted for the ditch a public sewer, & the brick drain was connected with it. In 1887 a local Act was passed, which provided that where two or more houses or premises were connected with a single private drain which conveyed their sewage into a public sewer, the local authority should have all the powers conferred by Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 41. The local authority had adopted Public Health Acts (Amendment) Act, 1890 (c. 50), s. 19, which contains provisions with respect to "single private drains" similar to those in the local Act:—Held: the brick drain was not a "single private drain" within the local Act or Public Health Acts (Amendment) Act, 1890 (c. 50), s. 19, because on the passing of Public Health Act, 1848 (c. 63), such drain became, & had ever since been, a sewer vested in the local authority & repairable by them, & therefore they were not entitled to exercise against resp. the powers conferred upon them by Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 41.—HILL v. HAIR, [1895] 1 Q. 11. —— —— ——.]—A drain pipe passing through private property had, from a date prior to 1890, received the drainage of several houses belonging to different owners before it joined the public sewer. The pipe having become a nuisance, the local authority of the district, who had adopted Public Health Acts (Amendment) Act, 1890 (c. 59), gave the owners of the said houses notice under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 41, to repair it, & on failure of the owners to comply with the notice, executed the necessary work themselves, & claimed to recover from the owners the expenses incurred by them in so doing:—Held: the pipe in question was a "single private drain" within Public Health Acts (Amendment) Act, 1890 (c. 59), s. 19, & the local authority were entitled to recover.—BRADFORD v. EASTBOURNE CORPN., [1896] 2 Q. 15. —— —— —— Local Act.]—By a local Act, s. 49 (1), "Where two or more houses or premises are connected with a single private drain which conveys their drainage into a public sewer, the corpn. shall have all the powers conferred by Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 41." Local Act, s. 49 (2), provided that Public Health Acts (Amendment) Act, 1890 (c. 59), s. 19, should cease to be in force in the locality, & local Act, s. 49 (3), that the expression "drain" should include a drain used for the drainage of more than one building, whether owned or occupied by the same person or not. Local Act, s. 4, provided that words to which meanings were assigned by Public Health Acts should have those meanings, unless there was something repugnant or inconsistent in the subject or context. By Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 4, the word "premises" includes "messuages buildings lands easements & hereditaments of any tenure."

Defts. were the proprietors of a roadway & of a row of cottages on each side of it. The roadway was a cul de sac. As the result of a notice under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 23, served on defts. in 1876, they laid a conduit under the whole length of the roadway, a great part of which was outside the limit mentioned in Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 23, of 100 feet from the public sewer with which it connects. This conduit was used for surface drainage only, & was fed by conduits from gullies in the backyards of the cottages & by other conduits from gullies in the roadway:—Held: there was no sufficient evidence that the roadway had been dedicated to the public, but that, whether it had or not, the conduit under the roadway was a "single private drain" within local Act, s. 49, the conduit being an exclusive & private system of drainage for defts.' cottages & land on each side of the roadway & the roadway itself, the soil of which was vested in defts.

"Premises" in local Act, s. 49, must be taken to mean premises in the same ownership as one or more of the houses connected with the single private drain."—KINGSTON-UPON-HULL CORPN. v. NORTH EASTERN RY. 16. General rule—"Sewer" given generous interpretation.]—A sewer made by the owner of some only of the houses in a street not yet a highway, though made for the purpose of draining his own amongst other houses, is not a sewer made by a person "for his own profit" within the exception in Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 13.

The word "sewer" in that Act should receive the largest possible interpretation, & a drain is a "sewer" within sect. 13 when more than one house has been connected with it.—ACTON LOCAL BOARD v. BATTEN (1884), 28 Ch. D. 283; 54 L. J. Ch. 251; 52 L. T. 17; 49 J. P. 357.

17. Question of fact.]—In an indictment for obstructing a "public sewer" framed under a local Act, which incorporates Towns Improvement Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 34), it is not necessary to show that the channel obstructed is one that communicates directly with a navigable river.

At the trial of such an indictment the evidence showed that the channel obstructed was one through which a natural stream had always flowed, originally in a curve line; that at the particular spot it had been made straight by art, & built over; & that it was used as a drain to carry off offensive matter generally from all the houses near it:—Held: the jury were rightly directed to say whether this was a public sewer in fact, without instruction from the judge what a "sewer" in law was.—R. v. PARKINSON (1852), 16 J. P. 729.

18. Any system of drainage.]—SUTTON v. NORWICH CORPN., No. 1, ante.

19. Pipe carrying away sewage.]—M. built ten houses, laid down a large pipe drain at the back of them, & made a drain into it from each house. The large drain ran into a cesspool on M.'s land, near the houses, & was then carried on for a few yards through M.'s land till it reached the foreshore of a tidal river, & then, after passing for a short distance through the foreshore, discharged into the river. No license to drain through the foreshore had been obtained, & it was not proved that M.'s scheme of drainage had been approved by the local board. After some time the lessee of the foreshore built upon it, & stopped the mouth of the drain, which it was admitted he was entitled to do. The overflow from the cesspool being thus stopped, the cesspool caused a serious nuisance. M. brought his action against the local board to restrain them from permitting the nuisance to continue, alleging that the structure was a "sewer," & the cesspool a "thing belonging thereto," within Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), & was therefore vested in the local board, & that they were bound to keep it in order:—Held: this was not a sewer within Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), for that the continuation through the foreshore, which M. had no right to make, must be left out of account, & then there was nothing left but a set of pipes terminating in a pit on M.'s own ground, &, as they did not carry the sewage away, they could not be considered a sewer.

If we turn to the Act of Parliament [Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55)], this cesspool is not a drain, & it is not a sewer within the definition of that expression. It might be a work or thing belonging to a sewer within sect. 13 (LINDLEY, L.J.).—MEADER v. WEST COWES LOCAL BOARD, [1892] 3 Ch. 18; 61 L. J. Ch. 561; 67 L. T. 454; 40 W. R. 676; 8 T. L. 22. ——.]—No doubt, seeing that several houses are drained into this one drain, the drain comes within the definition of a "sewer" in the Act, [Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55)], & vests in the local board; but that does not decide the question one way or the other. The question is, whether this sewer, I call it a sewer because it does fall within the definition of a sewer, was a sewer of part of the street within sect. 150, & as such was treated by the board as a sewer satisfactory to them under that sect. I have come to the conclusion that this part of the street never was sewered to the satisfaction of the board before they made the sewer, the expenses of which they now seek to charge against the frontagers in this action & for these reasons the action succeeds (ROMER, J.).—HANDSWORTH LOCAL BOARD v. TAYLOR (1893), [1897] 2 Ch. 442, n.; 69 L. 24. —— At what point drain becomes sewer—Junction where drainage is received.]—A pipe or line of pipes receiving the drainage of more than one building not being premises within the same curtilage, although a sewer within Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 4, from & below the point where it receives the drainage of more than one such building is a drain & not a sewer within that sect. above that point.

A main sewer may be laid down by the local authority in a new street where no houses are built but where it is intended houses shall be built. Subsequently, the buildings may be commenced at the lower end of the street, & where the drains of one house are connected with the main sewer the connecting pipes will be drains & not sewers, but the sewer itself will no less continue to be a sewer, although it receives only the drainage of that one house. Consequently, a sewer without a drain at all will be a sewer (CAVE, J.).—BECKENHAM URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL v. WOOD (1896), 60 J. P. 490, D. C.

32. —— ——.]—When a landowner pursuant to the bye-laws of a local authority gives notice of his intention to lay out a new street & to construct therein a line of pipes as a sewer, & his deposited plans are passed, & the line of pipes or sewer is constructed under the supervision of the local authority & is on completion approved & duly authorised to be covered in, such line of pipes, though unused, immediately thereupon becomes a "sewer" which vests in the local authority under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 13, & they have power under sect. 16 of the Act to connect it with their sewerage system.—TURNER v. HANDSWORTH URBAN COUNCIL, [1909] 1 Ch. 381; 78 L. 33. —— Connection with some of adjacent houses—Houses built after pipes laid.]—A road having been made by the owners of a building estate about 1859, a 12 inch pipe was laid by them along it from end to end. Houses were built from time to time in the neighbourhood of the road, & some of their owners connected their drains with the 12 inch pipe; but certain of the houses which were first built had a separate system of drainage into cesspools in a wood at the back of their premises. Drainage into the 12 inch pipe commenced at least as early as 1876. The 12 inch pipe discharged into a culvert, & thence into a river. Pltfs.' predecessors, the Wilmslow Local Board of Health, were constituted in 1878, & could in that year have put into operation Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 150. There was evidence that in 1882 their surveyor knew of at least one connection of drains with this pipe, & that complaint having been made in 1892 or 1893 as to the outfall of the pipe's contents into the river, the local authority subsequently proposed a scheme of drainage by which the drainage was to be diverted from the 12 inch pipe & carried into septic tanks:—Held: the pipe was a sewer within Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 4, & had vested in pltfs.

I think the definition of sewer, which is to be found in Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 4, is clear, & I think that apart from any other circumstances in the case I should be bound to hold that this was a sewer. . . . It was laid for the purpose both of carrying off the surface water & of draining such houses, when required, as might be built on either side of it (NEVILLE, J.).—WILMSLOW URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL v. SIDEBOTTOM (1906), 70 J. 34. Pipes having no proper outlet—Carrying sewage into cesspool.]—MEADER v. WEST COWES LOCAL BOARD, No. 19, ante.

35. —— ——.]—The fact that a pipe which has no lawful outlet for sewage receives sewage from a house as well as surface water from a highway is not of itself proof that the pipe is a sewer. If a nuisance arises solely in consequence of a person's own act in sending sewage down such a pipe, he is responsible under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), ss. 94, 95, as a person causing or continuing the nuisance by his "act default or sufferance."—WINCANTON RURAL COUNCIL v. PARSONS, [1905] 2 K. 36. —— ——.]—In 1896 a low lying estate near the sea was purchased by D. for the purpose of being developed as a seaside resort, & forty-eight houses were built. The drainage system adopted by D. was disclosed to & approved of by the rural district council of the locality. It provided two methods for dealing with the sewage, the one by means of the ordinary cesspit, & the other by discharging the contents of the drains from the houses along three lines of pipes into settling tanks, & then raising the liquid therefrom to the surface by means of pumping, & finally disposing of it through sub-soil pipes radiating from a distributing chamber. The pumps were driven partly by an automatic windmill & partly by an electric motor. This drainage scheme was completed in 1902 & worked satisfactorily until 1912, when deft. purchased from D. the unsold part of the estate, & subsequently built sixteen further houses. No proper outfall for the solid matter of the sewage had ever been provided. In 1917 the pipes had gradually become blocked, & the pumping was then finally abandoned as useless. In 1918 sewage matter flooded some of the houses, & notice was served on deft. under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), requiring him to abate the nuisance. He endeavoured to do so by inserting on his own land some lines of pipes at certain manholes connected to surface water channels. As the result of a visit from an inspector of the Ministry of Health to the estate a letter was written on Feb. 10, 1921, informing the council that it was their duty, under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 19, to cleanse the pipes, as they were public sewers vested in them. The council denied their liability, & in 1923 an action was brought by the A.-G. at the relation of the council against deft. claiming an injunction to restrain him from continuing a public nuisance caused by the accumulation of sewage of his estate:—Held: the case did not come within Meader v. West Cowes Local Board, No. 19, ante, & these lines of pipes laid with the approval of the relators were "sewers" within Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), & vested in them at the end of 1902.—A.-G. v. PEACOCK, [1926] Ch. 241; 95 L. 38. Overflow sewer.]—The liquid refuse from a manufactory was carried away in a wooden trough. Prior to 1878 this trough had discharged direct into the river Aire. In 1878 the trough was shortened in order to make room for an iron pipe erected by the local authority, & was made to discharge into the iron pipe. The authority erected this iron pipe to form a continuation of an "overflow" sewer or culvert with the object of discharging the contents thereof into the river at a point rather lower down the river than that at which the culvert originally discharged. The culvert or "overflow" sewer was generally dry, but on some thirty days in the year it took storm water mixed with sewage, which the ordinary sewers in a neighbouring street could not deal with. The manufacturers were fined for discharging refuse into the river:—Held: the conviction must be upheld, on the ground (1) (LORD ALVERSTONE, C.J. & RIDLEY, J.) that, even if the pipe was a sewer for all purposes, the magistrate had properly found that the manufacturers were not using it for the ordinary purposes of a sewer, but as a mere conduit pipe to lengthen their trough; (2) (DARLING, J.). that, even if a sewer, it was not a sewer for all purposes, & the manufacturers were not justified in using it as a sewer for their refuse.

40. Whether sewer is sewer for all purposes.]—At the side of a road, which was vested in a local authority, was an open channel not paved with stone & not very clearly defined on the side toward the centre of the road made for the purpose of carrying off the surface water from the road. In the channel were gullies by which the water passed through pipes into an underground drain. Rain water from the roof & the curtilages of many of the houses in the road including pltf.'s also passed through pipes into the channel. Sewage from one of the houses, not pltf.'s, had escaped into the channel, & had caused an illness of pltf.'s child, & pltf. had thereby incurred expense. In an action by pltf. against the local authority claiming an injunction & damages:—Held: the channel was a "sewer" within the definition contained in Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 4, & under sect. 19, it was the duty of defts. to cleanse the channel so that it should not be a nuisance or injurious to health.

An injunction was accordingly granted to restrain defts. from permitting any foul or noxious matter to remain in the channel so as to cause a nuisance to pltf., & £30 damages was awarded to him.

There was a provision in the award that each allotment holder should discharge the water from his allotment on to the adjoining allotment. Pltf. brought an action against defts., the rural district council, for failing to cleanse & keep in repair a ditch on one of the roads set out under the award, whereby his fields were damaged. It appeared that defts. had not cleaned out the ditch, & that they had cut grips from the road into the ditch & cleaned out the grips from time to time. The drainage from two cottages on the other side of the road passed under the road through a culvert into the ditch:—Held: (1) the road was not an allotment under the award, &, therefore, defts. were not bound to carry off the water from the ditch under the provisions of the award; (2) even if the cottages had been proved not to be within the same curtilage, the ditch was not a sewer.—IRVING v. CARLISLE RURAL DISTRICT COUNCIL (1907), 71 J. 48. —— Flow of water diverted.]—Under a local Act, 1870, s. 63, the Newcastle corpn. were empowered to constitute a drainage district, & to direct the drainage or sewage thereof to be brought into any drain or sewer already formed or hereafter to be formed, & assess & apportion a due proportion of the cost amongst the owners of land within the district. The word "sewer" for the purpose of this Act was therein interpreted as meaning a culvert or channel for the passage of water, sewage, or refuse, not being a drain as hereinbefore defined, & a drain was defined to mean any drain, pipe, channel, or gutter made & used for the drainage of one building only, or of buildings or land within the same curtilage. Local Act, 1892, s. 131, provided that the assessment under the said sect. should be made on the owners of all kinds of property within the district for the time being assessable to any rate for the relief of the poor, &, should be assessed on the full net annual value of such property, as ascertained by the valuation list for the time being in force, or if there were none, by the rate for the relief of the poor made next before such assessment, & that the amount so assessed should be recoverable by the corpn. in the same manner as private improvement expenses are recoverable from owners under Public Health Act of 1875 (c. 55). The corpn. in constituting the drainage district directed that the sewage should be brought into a tidal stream, which was somewhat polluted by sewage, & made an assessment on the persons who were owners of property in the district at the time of the completion of the works, using the assessment lists then in force:—Held: having regard to the language of local Acts, the corpn. were justified in utilising the tidal stream as a sewer.

I think . . . that it is possible to form a "sewer" without the construction of any artificial work. If, for instance, an old ditch on the bed of a watercourse from which all flow of water has been diverted, is utilised for the carriage of sewage matter, such utilisation would be properly described as forming a sewer (BYRNE, J.).—NEWCASTLE-UPON-TYNE CORPN. v. HOUSEMAN, SAME v. FRANCIS, SAME v. JACKSON, SAME v. COOTE (1898), 63 J. 51. —— ——.] — Defts., the owners & occupiers of certain works, had for many years impounded all the waters of a watercourse which had its origin in a well or spring above their works, &, after using the water in their works, returned it loaded with noxious matter to the watercourse lower down. The watercourse was joined a little lower down still by two other watercourses, & ultimately flowed into a river. A large number of houses formerly drained into the watercourse at points below that at which deft.'s effluent was discharged into it. But the great majority of these houses had latterly been disconnected from the watercourse. It was not shown whether the watercourse was natural or artificial:—Held: on these facts, the watercourse, as from the point where it received defts.' effluent, was a stream within above Act, & not a "sewer" within Public Health Acts; & defts. had, therefore, been guilty of an offence against above Act, s. 4.—WEST RIDING OF YORKSHIRE RIVERS BOARD v. PRESTON & SONS (1904), 92 L. Applts. alleged that the burns & streams in question were not "streams" within above Act, in respect that at the date of the passing of above Act they were mainly used as sewers. There was a definite finding in fact that applts. discharged all their sewage into the burns in question:—Held: the burns in question were "streams" & not "watercourses mainly used as sewers" within above Act.—AIRDRIE MAGISTRATES v. LANARK COUNTY COUNCIL, COATBRIDGE MAGISTRATES v. LANARK COUNTY COUNCIL, [1910] A. 53. —— Bourne course in chalk district.]—Pltf. was the owner of land in the neighbourhood of Croydon. Defts. permitted the surface drainage from certain roads in their district to flow across pltf.'s land, & claimed the right to do so either on the ground (a) that there was a watercourse across the land, or (b) on the ground that there was a sewer which ran across pltf.'s land, into which they were entitled to discharge the water in question. It appeared that from time immemorial there had been "bourne flows" of underground water from the chalk, which bourne flows had on divers occasions flooded the land occupied by pltf., & had followed the channel or watercourse which defts. alleged was a watercourse or a sewer. Pltf. claimed damages for trespass & an injunction:—Held: upon the facts, that the bourne course was not a watercourse" within Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 17); it was not a sewer, & pltf. was, therefore, entitled to damages for trespass & an injunction.—PEARCE v. CROYDON RURAL DISTRICT COUNCIL (1910), 74 J. 54. —— Underground watercourse.]—A contract was entered into for the sale of a house & lands adjoining described as a "residential property," but which in fact possessed advantages for the formation of building sites. The contract stated that the property was sold subject to all drainage, sewer, & other easements, if any, affecting the same, &, clause 11, that if any error or misstatement in the particulars or contract should be disclosed, the same should not annul the sale, nor should any compensation be claimed or made in respect thereof by either party. Neither the particulars nor contract, nor the plan annexed, disclosed or indicated the existence of a natural underground watercourse which ran through the grounds & the lands of adjoining owners in a culvert or piping constructed by the owners of the several lands. The vendors knowing of the existence of the watercourse, did not disclose it to the purchaser, & the purchaser's agents, when inspecting the property prior to the contract, did not see the piping, although it was then exposed to view in a hole in the lawn of the house. The purchaser bought the property primarily as a residence, but with a view in certain events to using it for building purposes. In an action by the vendors for specific performance they waived clause 11 of the contract: —Held: the watercourse was not a sewer or drain vested in the local authority.—SHEPHERD v. CROFT (1911), 1 Ch. 521; 80 L. 55. —— Intermittent stream—Periodical flow of fresh water.]—The discharge of sewage into the channel of an intermittent stream may have the effect of converting it into a sewer although the natural flow of the pure water is not cut off.

Crude sewage was discharged by a local authority into the channel of an intermittent stream which ran in an old culvert through private land & then in the open air alongside that land to a tidal river, the stream itself being tidal up to the point where the sewage entered. The local authority had not interfered with the natural flow of the stream, which only ran during winter. In the summer the channel conveyed nothing but sewage with the exception of the tidal water with which it was diluted twice a day. Sewage was deposited on the banks of the open channel to such an extent as to constitute a public nuisance when the tide was out, & owing to the defective state of the culvert the land was constantly flooded with pent-up sewage water at spring tides. In an action by the tenant of the land & the A.-G. at his relation for damages & an injunction:—Held: notwithstanding the winter flow of fresh water & the daily flow of tidal water the channel was a sewer.—A.-G. v. LEWES CORPN., [1911] 2 Ch. 495; 81 L. 57. —— Mere pollution—Discharge of sewage—For a number of years.]—Resps. discharged a manufacturing effluent into a watercourse which they contended had become a channel for the conveyance of sewage:—Held: though a stream of which the original supply of water has been cut off, may become a "sewer" into which certain persons may acquire a right of drainage, the mere fact that sewage has been discharged for a number of years into a watercourse, so that the watercourse has been polluted, is not of itself sufficient to turn the watercourse into a sewer.—WEST RIDING OF YORKSHIRE RIVERS BOARD v. REUBEN GAUNT & SONS, LTD. 63. ——.]—A cesspool was built by applt. on land of which applt. was lessee in possession for the residue of an unexpired term of years. The cesspool formed the ultimate outfall of a drainage system consisting of a pipe along & under a street, into which pipe the drainage of houses on each side of the street was discharged by separate drains. Applt. was owner of six of these houses within Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55). The drainage system had been constructed by applt. in accordance with plans approved by the corpn. on applt. undertaking (inter alia) that the pipe should be a private drain, & that he would repair & cleanse both pipe & cesspool. Petty sessions, on a summons against applt. under the nuisance clauses of Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), for not abating a nuisance arising from the cesspool, fined applt. as the person by whose act, default or sufferance the nuisance complained of arose, holding that the case was governed by Meader v. West Cowes Local Board, No. 19, ante. On a case stated:—Held: the decision of the justices was right, & the case was governed by Meader v. West Cowes Local Board. Where a man chooses to deal with drainage which passes through a pipe into a cesspool on his own land, & he fails to cleanse the cesspool, although the pipe may receive the drainage of more than one house, the obligation to cleanse the cesspool is upon him & not upon the local authority. Even if the pipe & cesspool had vested in the local authority under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), as between the local authority & third parties, the liability to cleanse lay on applt. by virtue of his undertaking.—BUTT v. SNOW (1903), 89 L. 64. —— Converted into catchpit.]—(1) Sewage was conveyed from two points by pipes or underground drains to an open ditch on the same estate from which there was no outflow:—Held: these connections did not constitute a sewer.

(2) A system of drainage by agreement between two landowners was so constituted as to take drainage matter from a cesspool which had formerly overflowed & created a nuisance. Pipes were laid above & below, & the cesspool was converted into a sort of catchpit:—Held: the connection none the less constituted a sewer because a still existing cesspool had been converted into a kind of catchpit.

(3) A ditch used for the discharge of sewage matter may be a sewer.

(4) If a man by way of trespass lays down a line of pipes to convey drainage matter on the land of another, & the landowner subsequently consents to such use of his land, a sewer will have been constituted that will vest in the local authority.—PAKENHAM v. TICEHURST RURAL DISTRICT COUNCIL (1903), 67 J. Defts. also gave pltf. notice after 1875 of their intention to make similar manholes into their sewers upon other parts of pltf.'s property:—Held: they were parts of the sewer within 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 45, & could be made without purchasing land for the purpose, & pltf. was only entitled to compensation for the damage arising from making them.—SWANSTON v. TWICKENHAM LOCAL BOARD (1879), 11 Ch. 67. Conduit leading from cesspool into larger cesspool.]—B., the owner of certain houses, constructed a series of cesspools for their drainage on his own land. He then constructed a conduit, which conveyed the overflow therefrom to a larger cesspool. He was summoned for constructing these cesspools so as to have an outlet into a sewer, viz. the conduit & the large cesspool, contrary to the local bye-law.

The magistrates were of opinion that the conduit, being used for the drainage of several dwelling-houses occupied by different persons, was a sewer, & that an offence had been committed:—Held: the magistrates were wrong, & applt. had not constructed these cesspools contrary to the bye-law.—BUTTON v. TOTTENHAM URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL (1898), 78 L. 73. —— From highway to gravel pit—For watering cattle.]—(1) The word "profit" in Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 13 (1), is not to be restricted to a direct money payment. Accordingly a sewer which is not made for ordinary drainage purposes, but to enable the land on which it is made to be occupied more profitably, or to avoid an expenditure which would otherwise have to be incurred in order that the occupation might be equally beneficial, is made for the "profit" of the owner within Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 13, & does not vest in the local authority. So held, in the case of a line of pipes laid down by the owner of a field adjoining a highway from a ditch bordering the highway to a disused gravel pit in the field for the purpose of supplying water to the cattle fed in the field.

(2) On the authority of Croft v. Rickmansworth Highway Board, No. 334, post, the pit did not form part of the drainage system vested in the local authority, they had no power under Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), s. 67, to discharge surface water from the road into the pit, & were not entitled to enter upon the field in order to keep open the existing drain, or to make any other for the same purpose.

It is established by Durrant v. Branksome Urban Council, No. 161, ante, that the sewers to which the provisions of Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), apply include sewers for the removal of surface water as well as those for carrying off what is ordinarily termed sewage. 75. —— From road into ditch.]—Applts. were summoned by the sanitary authority of a borough for non-compliance with a notice to abate a nuisance caused by turning slop & scullery water from twelve houses owned by applts., into a drain constructed beside a highway to receive the surface water of the highway, which emptied into an open ditch. According to the plan, deposited with the sanitary authority when the houses were built by applts.' predecessor in title, the houses should have been drained into cesspools, but cesspools to receive the slop & scullery water had not been constructed. No sewer had been constructed by the sanitary authority, by means of which the houses could be drained. The houses were separately occupied, & were not within the same curtilage. The justices made an order to abate the nuisance, by disconnecting the drains of the houses from the surface water drain, & making cesspools for the houses. On a case stated:—Held: the sanitary authority were not bound, under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 15, to provide a sewer to drain applts.' houses; the surface water drain, though for some purposes a "sewer," within Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 4, was not a sewer into which applts. were entitled to empty their drains; the nuisance was caused by the want of a structural convenience within Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 94, & therefore defts. as owners were liable.

It is said that there was default on the part of the sanitary authority because by Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 15, they were bound to sewer the district. But that sect. does not mean that they are bound to provide a sewer for every house in the district, for instance for an outlying cottage (CHANNELL, J.).—KINSON POTTERY CO. v. POOLE CORPN., [1899] 2 Q. The premises were so constructed as to be enclosed by continuous boundary walls, with the exception of the opening from the causeway into the thoroughfare:—Held: having regard to their construction, the two blocks of buildings were "premises within the same curtilage" within Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 250, & therefore the main drain used for their drainage was a "drain," & not a "sewer" for the purposes of that Act.—PILBROW v. ST. 81. —— Separate buildings on either side of arcade—Central passage roofed & closed by gates—Drainage running down central passage.]—Deft. was the owner of an arcade consisting of a central passage, with a number of houses & shops on either side, the whole being on the property of deft., & there being no right of way along the passage, which was roofed, & could be closed by gates placed at each end. The drainage of the arcade was by means of a construction which ran down the central passage to a main sewer outside, receiving in its course the drainage of the houses. In an action brought to determine whether deft. was liable to keep the central construction in repair:—Held: the central construction was not a "drain of & used for the drainage of one building only, or premises within the same curtilage," & was therefore a "sewer" within Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 250, & vested in & to be kept in repair & maintained by the vestry.—ST. houses, sent to the local board notice of his intention to lay down upon it a pipe drain running parallel to the houses, through which the houses would be drained into the main sewer belonging to the Metropolitan Board. The local board signified their approval of the scheme by letter & entered their approval in their books, but made no formal order. The owner completed the drain: —Held: (1) although Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 74, did not give the board power to order drainage by a combined operation except in the case of existing houses, the general words of s. 76 gave them this power in the case of houses about to be built; their approval of the scheme was an order, & the drain in question was therefore a "drain" & not a "sewer" within s. 250, & did not vest in the local board; (2) Metropolis Management (Amendment) Act, 1862 (c. 102), s. 106, does not apply to an action for an injunction to restrain a nuisance.—BATEMAN v. POPLAR DISTRICT BOARD OF WORKS (1886), 33 Ch. 83. ——.]—In 1889 the owner of a plot of ground within the metropolitan district, on which he was about to erect a number of houses, sent to the local authority, the vestry, a plan which showed that it was proposed to drain the houses in pairs, one pair being two houses numbered 29 & 27, but the plan did not show any details as to the course or position of the particular drains of each house. The plan was duly passed & approved by a resolution of the vestry. In constructing the drains of Nos. 29 & 27 a connection, not shown on the plan, was made between two gulleys at the backs of the houses, the consequence of which was that waste water from a sink in No. 27 was carried away through the pipe which drained No. 29. There was evidence that the drains of these two houses had been constructed under the supervision of a surveyor of the vestry.

By a voluntary conveyance, in the nature of a deed of family arrangement, the beneficial interest in the leases of the two houses passed from the building owner to his son, & was by him conveyed to the trustees of his marriage settlement.

A nuisance having arisen by reason of the defective condition of the drain of No. 29, it was contended by pltfs., the exors. of the building owner & the trustees of the son's marriage settlement, that the drain of No. 29 was a sewer repairable by the defts., the successors of the vestry:—Held: (1) the resolution of the vestry approving the plan was an order for draining the two houses by a combined operation; it might be inferred, from the fact the plan showed no details of the drainage, that these details were to be left to be approved by the surveyor responsible for the supervision of the work; & the proper inference to be drawn from the evidence was that the connection between the gulley of No. 27 & the drain of No. 29 had been so approved & the drain of No. 29 was, therefore, not a sewer; (2) if the connection had been wrongfully made, pltfs., being the representatives of the original wrongdoer, & not being purchasers for value without notice, were estopped as against defts. from alleging that the drain of No. 29 was a sewer.

(3) The provision of sect. 83 of Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 83, under which where a drain is found on inspection to have been laid contrary to the directions of the local authority, the offending party is liable in a penalty & the local authority may require the person making the drain to reinstate it in accordance with their directions, are available against the original wrongdoers only & not against his successors in title.—HEAVER v. FULHAM BOROUGH COUNCIL, [1904] 2 K. 84. ——.]—On a complaint that a pipe in a metropolitan borough was a nuisance & injurious to health, the following documents were produced from the custody of the metropolitan borough council. (a) The following application in respect of certain houses, including that in question addressed to the vestry, who were the predecessors of the borough council, & dated Jan. 28, 1858: "Gentlemen, being desirous to have a 9-inch drain made from Alfred Place to communicate with the public sewer in the rear of Richardson Street to enable me to drain the houses Nos. 30 to 35, Nelson Street" (in connection with one of which was the pipe complained of), "also Nos. 11 to 17, Alfred Place, I hereby request you will cause the drain to be made from the sewer to the front line of the said premises upon the payment of the estimated cost thereof"; (b) an estimate by the surveyor of the cost of the work applied for; & (c) the cash book of the vestry duly audited showing an entry under the date Feb. 8, 1858, of a payment by appct. of this estimated cost of the work. No plan was in evidence as having been deposited with the application, nor was there produced any minute of the vestry sanctioning the application:—Held: there was evidence upon which the magistrate could find that the pipe or line of pipes was a drain & not a sewer, & the houses referred to in the application were drained by a combined operation of drainage under the order of the vestry.—HOUSE PROPERTY & INVESTMENT CO. v. GRICE (1911), 75 J. (2) The order of the vestry required by Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 250, for draining a group or block of houses by a combined operation need not be a formal order, but deposited plans signed by the surveyor of the vestry are sufficient.—GREATER LONDON PROPERTY CO., LTD. v. FOOT, [1899] 1 Q. 86. —— —— Addition of drainage of other premises—Within the same curtilage.] — Certain houses in B. street in 1853 were drained by a combined scheme under the order of the local authority. In 1889 No. 85, B. street was disconnected from No. 83 & connected to its adjoining house on the other side, No. 87. No order was made by the authority for this, but it was superintended by their officers. In 1900, the owner of No. 85 erected a workshop on the garden, & the drainage from that, including an additional w.c., was connected with the drain of No. 87. This was superintended by resps.' officers, &, although a plan had been approved by resps., the work was not in fact carried out in accordance with that plan:—Held: the drain of No. 87 did not become a sewer.—GORRINGE v. SHOREDITCH CORPN. (1902), 86 L. T. 592; 66 J. P. 565.

87. —— —— Reinstatement according to plan.] — By Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 85, as applied by London Government Act, 1899 (c. 14), s. 4, a metropolitan borough council may, if a drain is in bad order, give notice requiring the owner or occupier to do the necessary works, & by Metropolis Management (Amendment Act), 1862 (c. 102), s. 64, if the notice is not complied with, the person offending is liable to a penalty. By s. 250 of the Act of 1855 the word "drain" means any drain used for the drainage of one building only, but also includes "any drain for draining any group or block of houses by a combined operation under the order of any vestry," & the word "sewer" includes all other sewers & drains.

In 1884, on the application of the builder & owner, a metropolitan vestry made an order for the drainage of twelve houses & shops by a combined operation in the manner shown upon an approved plan. The work was done in a manner which seriously deviated from the plan, the houses having been wrongly grouped & a drain from a workshop & four gulleys having been connected to the drains. In 1887 the builder & owner sold one of the houses to a purchaser, who purchased it for valuable consideration without notice that the drainage system was in contravention of the approved plan. The purchaser subsequently assigned it for value to resps., who likewise took it without notice.

In 1912 the borough council ascertained that the drains had not been made in accordance with the approved plan, & they served the original owner & builder, but not resps., with notice under Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 83, to alter the drains in accordance with the approved plan. The notice was not complied with, & the council did not work themselves. Subsequently a notice under s. 85 of the Act was served on resps. requiring them to take up the "combined drain" & remove all foul & polluted earth, the line of pipes referred to in this notice as a "combined drain" being that part of the line of pipes which passed under resps.' house, & which also took the drainage of some of the adjoining premises:—Held: as the line of pipes had, before service on resps. of the notice under s. 85 of the Act of 1855, been reinstated in accordance with the approved plan, it was at that time a combined drain, &, therefore, resps. could not allege that it was a sewer vested in the local authority.—KERSHAW v. SMITH (ALFRED JOHN) & CO., LTD., [1913] 2 K. 100. —— —— With sewer.]—The fact that the requisite sanction & approval for the making of a sewer in the metropolis was not obtained from the vestry or Metropolis Board of Works does not prevent it, when made, from being a sewer within the meaning of Metropolis Management Acts, & as such vested in the vestry & repairable by them.

In 1866 the owner of a block of houses in the metropolis laid down a pipe to carry off the drainage from them, & connected the pipe with a sewer belonging to the vestry in a neighbouring street. There was no evidence of any notice having been given to the vestry, or of any order having been made by them, or of their sanction or of the approval of the Metropolitan Board of Works having been obtained, under the Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), or Metropolis Management (Amendment) Act, 1862 (c. 102):—Held: the probable inference of fact was that the pipe was laid with the sanction of the vestry & the approval of the Metropolitan Board of Works required by the Acts; but whether that was so or not the pipe was a sewer within the meaning of Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 250, & was consequently vested in the vestry & repairable by them.—ST. 108. —— ——.]—The Metropolitan Commissioners of Sewers had in 1855 approved a combined system of drainage whereby the houses on one side of a street were to be drained in groups of four houses each. Before Jan. 1, 1856, the combined system was carried out, but in one case there was an alteration from the grouping as sanctioned, as one group consisted of five houses instead of four, two houses having been included from the preceding group & one house being excluded from the group, & drained with the succeeding group. There was no evidence to show that the alteration had been sanctioned. A nuisance existed at one of these houses owing to the defective condition of the pipe draining the group:—Held: the deviation from the approved grouping was material, &, as it had not been sanctioned, the pipe draining the group was not a "drain" within Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 250, as amended by Metropolis Management Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 102), s. 112, but was a sewer, & therefore the owner of the house was not liable to abate the nuisance.—BULLOCK v. REEVE (1900), 70 L. 109. —— ——.]—Three adjoining houses in a street in the metropolis were by an order made by the local authority in 1878 on the application of the then owner ordered to be drained by a combined operation into a line of pipes at the rear of the houses & parallel thereto, & thence into a public sewer; & four other houses in the same street were by an order made in 1879 on the application of the same owner ordered to be drained by a combined operation into the same line of pipes at the rear of the other three houses & thence into the same public sewer. A nuisance existed in a pipe underneath one of the houses of the first group, & it was found that the scheme of the drainage as carried out had been altered by taking one of the houses from the second group & adding it to the first group, & by diverting the drainage of this new group under one of the houses of that group into a sewer in the road in front of the houses. Upon proceedings against the present owner of the house underneath which the nuisance existed:—Held: the adding to the first group the drainage of a house not included in that group as sanctioned by the order had converted the combined drain into a sewer, & the pipe in which the nuisance existed was therefore a "sewer" & not a "drain," within Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 250, & the owner of the house was not liable to abate the nuisance.—HARVEY v. BUSBY (1906), 95 L. 110. —— ——.]—A plan for the combined drainage of a number of houses in a road in the metropolis was approved by the local authority, showing that the houses were to be drained in groups of four & five houses, & that each group was to be drained into a pipe at the back of the group with a connecting pipe which was brought under one of the houses of the group & into another line of pipes under the footpath in front of the houses, which at a certain point communicated with the sewer. A nuisance existed in a pipe under one of these houses, & it was found that the drainage as existing had been altered from the scheme as approved. As sanctioned, the group consisted of four houses, & the connecting drain or pipe was brought under the house No. 49. As existing, one house had been taken from the group at one end & two houses added at the other end, the group thus consisting of five houses instead of four as sanctioned, & the drainage was brought out under No. 51 instead of No. 49; but otherwise the drainage of the whole houses passed into the same line of pipes into the sewer at the same point as before. The nuisance arose through the pipe under No. 51 being defective:—Held: the alteration in the scheme of drainage of the group, whereby another house was added to the group & the drainage was brought under a different house from that sanctioned by the plan, was a material alteration which converted that which was before a drain into a sewer, & the owner was not liable to abate the nuisance.—HARVEY v. JAYE (1907), 97 L. T. 543; 71 J. P. 473; 5 L. G. R. 967, D. C.

111. —— With sanction of Commissioners of Sewers—Interpretation of Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120).]—A drain was constructed in the metropolis in 1839 for draining a group of houses by combined operation, & was a "sewer" within Metropolis Management Act, 1853 (c. 120), s. 250, & so repairable by the vestry of the parish, unless constructed before Jan. 1, 1856, "with the sanction or approval of the Metropolitan Comrs. of Sewers" within meaning of Metropolis Management (Amendment) Act, 1862 (c. 102), s. 112:—Held: the expression "Metropolitan Comrs. of Sewers" in the latter Act refers to the Metropolitan Comrs. of Sewers created in 1848 by 11 & 12 Vict. c. 112, & does not include Comrs. of Sewers having authority in the metropolis previously to that Act, & the drain was therefore a "sewer" within Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), & repairable by the vestry.—APPLEYARD v. LAMBETH VESTRY (1897), 66 L. 112. —— Power of approval entrusted to surveyor—Insufficient proof of approval or order of local authority.]—In 1868 the owner of certain houses applied in pursuance of Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), for permission to drain the houses by means of a combined drain. The application was filed in a book & signed by the surveyor of the sanitary authority as approved, in pursuance of a resolution passed by such sanitary authority authorising the surveyor "to grant applications for house drainage when they are regular, involving no special point for the consideration of the board." There was no other evidence of the approval of the sanitary authority or of an order:—Held: the pipe draining the houses was a sewer & not a drain.—HIGH v. BILLINGS (1903), 89 L. T. 550; 67 J. 113. Disconnection of pipe from main sewer—Whether pipe becomes drain.]—A pipe carrying the sewage of two houses in a metropolitan parish into the main sewer was vested in & repairable by the vestry under Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), being a "sewer" within the definition of that word in Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 250. Subsequently the owner of one of the houses disconnected his sewage, so that thereafter the pipe was "used for the drainage of one building only" within the definition of "drain" in the same sect.:—Held: the pipe did not, upon such disconnection taking place, become a drain repairable by the owner of the house still served by it, but remained a sewer vested in & repairable by the vestry.—ST. Less than twenty years after the construction of the sewer, which had become vested in pltfs., the railway co. constructed an embankment over the sewer, & it subsequently becoming necessary to repair the same pltfs. had to make an open cutting through the embankment in order to obtain access to the sewer:—Held: pltfs. were not entitled to compensation under Lands Clauses (Consolidation) Act, 1845 (c. 18), s. 68, or Railways Clauses (Consolidation) Act, 1845 (c. 20), ss. 6, 16, by reason of the railway co. having constructed the embankment over the sewer, inasmuch as pltfs. had not any particular right of access, but simply a right of access to defts.' land to repair the sewer.—BIRKENHEAD CORPN. v. LONDON & NORTH WESTERN RY. 134. —— To carry off trade refuse.]—In 1863 a piece of land adjacent to a river was laid out by the owner for the purpose of erecting woollen mills under ground leases granted by him, & he constructed a main sewer or drain for the purpose of carrying off the trade refuse from the mills, when erected, into the river. Subsequently six mills were erected on the land, & later on some hundred water closets in the mills for the use of the employees were connected with the sewer, with the result that a continuous flow of polluting liquid within Rivers Pollution Prevention Act, 1876 (c. 75), s. 4, passed into the river. There was no evidence that the landowner had laid out the land as an ordinary building estate, or that any dwelling houses were connected with the sewer except one, for the drainage of which house into the sewer the owner agreed in 1864 to pay, & did pay to the owner of the sewer, a rental of 5*s.* a year.

In 1891 defts., the local sanitary authority for the district through which the sewer ran, entered into an agreement, for valuable consideration, with the then owners of the sewer, under which defts. acquired a right to use the sewer for the drainage of some houses within their district, subject to the rights of user of the sewer by the mill owners & their employees. Pltfs., the sanitary authority, under Rivers Pollution Prevention Act, 1876 (c. 75), complained that defts. caused & knowingly permitted to flow through the sewer into the river, the aforesaid polluting liquid from the six mills, contrary to sect. 4 of the Act, & the judge granted an injunction forbidding a further commission of the offence:—Held: the sewer had been made by the landowner for his own profit within Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 13, & consequently did not vest in defts.; defts. were not, by reason of the agreement of 1891, guilty of an offence under Rivers Pollution Prevention Act, 1876 (c. 75), s. 4.—YORKSHIRE W. 138. Under Private Inclosure Act—Brook.]—A brook, the water of which was supplied by the drainage, natural & artificial, of a considerable area of cultivated soil belonging to private individuals, received at the lower end of it, near a river into which it flowed, the drains of two or three inhabited houses. By General Inclosure Act, 1801 (c. 109), s. 10, the Comrs. are to set out & appoint private roads . . . drains, watercourses, etc., & the same shall be made & supported & kept in repair at the expense of the owners of the lands, directed to be divided & inclosed, in such proportions as the Comrs. shall direct. In 1809, Comrs. acting under a local Inclosure Act by their award set out this brook, among others, as a "public drain or watercourse" & directed that all such drains should be made, scoured, & kept in repair at the expense of the proprietors of the lands, divided & inclosed by virtue of the Act, in equal proportions. They also cleared out the channel of the brook, & in various places widened & deepened it to render it more efficient as a means of draining a portion of the tract of land which was subject to the provisions of their Act. Afterwards two of the landowners, for their own convenience, altered the course of the stream, by cutting artificial channels for short distances. The brook is within the limits of the Local Board of G., & it having become a nuisance, a mandamus issued to them to clear, cleanse, empty & keep it:—Held: it was not a "sewer" within Public Health Act, 1848 (c. 63), & therefore was not vested in the Local Board of Health under Public Health Act, 1848 (c. 63), s. 43.

Qu.: whether, supposing the brook to be a sewer, it was within the exception in Public Health Act, 1848 (c. 63), s. 43, of "sewers made & used for the purpose of draining, preserving, or improving land under any local Act of Parliament."—R. v. GODMANCHESTER LOCAL BOARD (1866), L. 145. What sewers vest—Wall protecting land from inundation.]—(1) A marsh wall or embankment that keeps back the river Thames at high water from inundating the Isle of Dogs, & through which sewers pass which drain the isle at low water, is "a sewer" within Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 204, which gives power to the district board of works in whom any sewer is vested to remove any building erected thereon without their consent.

147. Duty to construct—Development of building estate.]—An owner of land in a rural sanitary district, who proposed to lay it out as a building estate & to erect on it blocks of houses arranged in streets deposited with the local authority plans of the proposed buildings, from which it appeared that each of the houses was to be drained with a separate drain ending in the middle of one of the proposed new streets. The local authority refused to approve the plans unless the owner would undertake to construct at his own expense the sewers with which the drains were intended to communicate, & also the necessary main outfall sewer: —Held: the local authority were not entitled to attach such a condition to their approval.

When the houses are going to be occupied or are being occupied, then the district council will be called upon perhaps to make a sewer down the centre of the street. I do not know about that, but they certainly would not be called upon until then to make the outfall (LORD ESHER, M.R.).—R. v. TYNEMOUTH RURAL DISTRICT COUNCIL, [1896] 2 Q. B. 451; 65 L. J. Q. 148. —— Disposal of trade effluents—Rivers Pollution Prevention Act, 1876 (c. 75).]—The duty of a local authority, under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 15, to make such sewers as may be necessary for effectually draining their district for the purposes of that Act, cannot be enforced by an action for mandamus brought by a private person; the only remedy for neglect of the duty is that given by Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 299, a complaint to the local government board.

[Rivers Pollution Prevention Act, 1876 (c. 75)] provides that there shall be an outlet in some form or other for what I may call manufactory refuse; but contemplating the case which might readily arise where some manufacturer would be very glad to throw upon the rates the necessity of getting rid of his own refuse, it provides also, with reference to that obligation to get rid of the refuse, that where the drainage system of a district is "only sufficient for the requirements of their district" there shall not be an obligation to get rid of the refuse of a manufacturer who ought to get rid of the refuse which he is himself creating (LORD HALSBURY, C.).—PASMORE v. OSWALDTWISTLE URBAN COUNCIL, [1898] A. 150. Power to alter—Whether including power to stop up.]—Stamford Brook was originally a natural watercourse draining the districts of Acton & Hammersmith. It was formed in its upper portion of two streams known as West Branch & East Branch, the greater portion of West Branch being entirely within the parish of Acton, which is itself outside the Metropolitan area. The point of junction between East Branch & West Branch, & East Branch itself, & the united streams below the point of junction, were all within the local area which by Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), passed, with the sewers comprised in it, into the jurisdiction of the Metropolitan Board of Works. The Metropolitan Board of Works, in pursuance of their statutory duties, intercepted the united streams by a main sewer which carried the flow to a pumping station, instead of to its former natural outfall into the river Thames. Defts., as the urban sanitary authority for the parish of Acton, under the provisions of Public Health Act, 1848 (c. 63), & Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), had authorised & carried out a system of drainage under which the sewers of new houses constructed in their district were connected with the West Branch as the main sewer, & the amount of sewage which pltf. board had to dispose of was thus greatly increased:—Held: pltfs. were under no obligation to dispose of the extra drainage, & were entitled to an injunction to restrain defts. from causing or authorising any sewage to be discharged through the West Branch, or otherwise into pltfs.' main drainage system, other than sewage discharged by drains in respect of which a prescriptive right existed.

1. Drains continued & reclamation by railway company.]—Certain public drains vested in a city corpn. discharged into the sea. A railway co. under statutory powers, reclaimed adjoining land, & continued these drains to the new sea-boundary. The city council subsequently authorised a considerable volume of additional sewage to be led into the public drains, & for years treated these drains, including their continuations, as public drains. The seaward part of the reclamation became vested in the Crown:—Held: the continuation drains were for their whole length public drains, vested in & maintainable & renewable by the city council.—WELLINGTON & MANAWATU RY. estate, was sufficiently sewered at the time when it vested in the local authority then formed for the district, which was in the year 1868. Subsequently in the year 1884 it became necessary to alter the drainage plan of the district, & thereupon the local authority gave notice under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 150, to the frontagers in the street to make a new sewer, & on their default themselves constructed such sewer & sought to charge the frontagers with the cost thereof:—Held: the original sewer was not a sewer made by the owners for their own profit, & had therefore vested in the local authority under Public Health Act; the local authority must be taken to have been satisfied with the sewer; they having signified nothing to the contrary within a reasonable time; under these circumstances they must themselves repair or enlarge the sewer as it became necessary, & consequently the expenses of doing so were not chargeable upon the frontagers.—BONELLA v. TWICKENHAM LOCAL BOARD OF HEALTH, HOLMES v. TWICKENHAM LOCAL BOARD OF HEALTH (1887), 20 Q. 154. ——.]—Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 15, provides that every local authority shall keep in repair all sewers belonging to them, & shall cause to be made such sewers as may be necessary for effectually draining their district for the purposes of this Act.

A complaint was preferred by an inspector of nuisances, against resp., under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 95, for that he, as owner of certain premises, had suffered a nuisance to arise from certain water closets being connected with a drain or sewer. In 1863 there was an open drain receiving surface water & sink drainage from houses near thereto, but not from water closets. The sanitary authority subsequently covered up this drain, & laid down pipes therein for the purpose of receiving the aforesaid water & drainage & made a rate upon the adjoining properties to defray the expense. From time to time water closets in the said houses were, unknown to the authority, connected with this drain, amongst them resp.'s A nuisance was proved to exist, but not that it was caused by resp. alone. No system of drainage was carried out in the district. It was admitted that resp. was entitled to drain into the sewer, but it was contended that, if he thereby caused a nuisance, he could be ordered to disconnect his water closets therefrom. The justices decided that the drain was a sewer vested in the sanitary authority, & that resp. had not exceeded his rights, & that the authority were in default in allowing the sewer to become a nuisance:—Held: under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 15, the sanitary authority were bound to deal with the sewage themselves, & they could not shirk the obligation & transfer it to those for whose protection they were called into existence as a local authority.—WYCOMBE UNION v. PARSONS (1894), 71 L. 156. —— —— ——.]—The predecessors of pltfs. under certain private Acts constructed a sewer on private land belonging to a railway co. No notice to treat was given to the co., nor was any compensation paid to them by pltfs.' predecessors. Less than twenty years after the construction of the sewer, which had become vested in pltfs., the railway co. constructed an embankment over the sewer, & it subsequently becoming necessary to repair same, pltfs. had to make an open cutting through the embankment in order to obtain access to the sewer:—Held: pltfs. were not entitled to compensation under Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (c. 19), s. 68, or Railways Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (c. 20), ss. 6, 16, by reason of the railway co. having constructed the embankment over the sewer, inasmuch as pltfs. had not any particular right of access, but simply a right of access to defts.' land to repair the sewer.—BIRKENHEAD CORPN. v. LONDON & NORTH WESTERN RY. 157. —— —— ——.]—In 1892 T. conveyed to the predecessors of pltfs. as the sanitary authority under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), a piece of land for sewage disposal works, & granted to them the right to lay & construct specified sewers, through land belonging to the vendor, "& from time to time to repair, maintain, renew & improve the same," reinstating the ground. The local board laid through the land an iron effluent outfall sewer, five feet underground. Under an agreement, dated June 14, 1910, C. W., who, in the year 1897, had purchased land through which the sewer had been laid from persons deriving title under T.'s will, subject to the easement for & right of access to the sewer, granted to defts. the right & liberty to deposit refuse on the land.

The defts. had deposited refuse on the land, including portions under which pltfs.' sewer was constructed, their pipe being covered in Aug. 1911. In Oct. 1912, a leakage in the outfall pipe was discovered near defts.' refuse bank. In Aug. 1910, & subsequently, the tipping ground had been inspected by the medical officer, & in Jan. 1911, defts. covenanted not to deposit specified materials, & to prevent those already deposited from being a nuisance, but no suggestion was then made that the deposits were injurious to the sewer. There was evidence that under substituted arrangements pltfs. would shortly discontinue their use of the outfall sewer. Defts. were willing to submit to an injunction restraining them from depositing refuse on the land, but pltfs. asked that defts. be restrained from permitting refuse from remaining on the land so as to prevent their free access for the purpose of repairing & maintaining the sewer. Defts. pleaded laches, acquiescence, & delay on the part of pltfs. :—Held : pltfs. were not bound in exercising their right of access to the sewer to take the land in the condition in which it was at the time at which they wished to exercise such right. Defts., by increasing the depth of soil above the pipe, had increased the obligation on pltfs. in exercising their right under the grant in the deed of 1892. The acts of defts. gave rise to a good cause of action.—THURROCK GRAYS & TILBURY JOINT SEWERAGE BOARD v. GOLDSMITH (E. J. & W.), LTD. (1914), 79 J. P. 17.

159. Execution of works by owner—Recovery of expenses from local authority.]—The owner of a house who was enlarging his premises was required by the local authority's surveyor, amongst other things to take up & relay the back drain of the house, which was in fact a sewer, & to construct an interception chamber or manhole, & these works the owner, upon being told that they must be done, though no actual steps were taken to enforce their execution, agreed to do under protest & did do under the direction & by order of the surveyor of the local authority, but without any legal proceedings being taken against him & without serious threat of such proceedings. The liability in law for carrying out these works rested on the local authority. In an action by the owner to recover the cost of the works, from the local authority on the ground that he was compelled by them to do works which the local authority were compellable by law to do :—Held : the owner in the execution of these works was acting as a volunteer & not under compulsion & was therefore not entitled to recover, although without legal proceedings or the threat of such there may be sufficient compulsion to prevent a person being regarded as a volunteer.—ELLIS v. BROMLEY RURAL DISTRICT COUNCIL (1899), 81 L. 160. —— ——.]—Defts., a local authority, served upon pltf., the owner of certain houses, a notice stating that they had authorised their sanitary inspector to enter upon the premises respectively for the purpose of examining the drains. The notices were headed "Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 82, & Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (c. 76), s. 40." Subsequently defts. served in respect of each house a notice headed "Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (c. 76)," stating that there were certain nuisances upon the premises liable to be dealt with summarily under that Act, & stating that "to effectually abate the above described nuisances & to prevent their recurrence, the following works are recommended." Pltf. carried out the works specified on four of the houses. Defts. served a further notice in respect of each of the other houses, stating that they, by resolution, ordered & required pltf. within twenty-one days from the service of the notice, to execute the works specified in the schedule thereto, & stating further that if pltf. refused or neglected to execute the works, he would become liable to certain penalties. These notices were headed "Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), ss. 83, 85 ; Metropolis Management (Amendment) Act, 1862 (c. 102), s. 64." Pltf. thereupon executed the works. In the case of each of the houses, the drain to which the notice referred, carried sewage from one house & rain water from another house. In an action brought by pltf. to recover from defts. the cost of executing the works, the judge held that the drains in question were "sewers" within the definition contained in Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 250, & except as to the four houses, the work was done under compulsion. He gave judgment for pltf. for the expenses of the examination of the drains of the four houses, & for the whole of the expenses in respect of the other houses :—Held : the decision of the judge was correct.—SILLES v. FULHAM BOROUGH COUNCIL, [1903] 1 K. 161. Meaning of "lands"—Any tenement or hereditament — Land covered with water.] — (1) Under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), ss. 15–17, a local authority has power to make its sewers discharge into any natural stream or watercourse, or into any canal, pond, or lake, within its district, subject to the restrictions in sect. 17 being observed. The surface water conveyed by surface sewers may be so discharged though it carries down sand & silt, such water not being "sewage or filthy water" within the meaning of sect. 17.

167. Necessity for report of surveyor—That proposed course of sewer "necessary."] — NEW RIVER CO. v. WARE UNION RURAL SANITARY AUTHORITY (1883), 18 L. J. N. C. 20.

168. —— —— Meaning of "necessary."]—In Dec. 1887, the surveyor of defts., an urban local authority, died. On Jan. 11, 1888, defts. by resolution appointed A., a civil engineer in their employment, "surveyor to the board until a further permanent surveyor be appointed." On Mar. 21, 1888, A. reported to defts. that it was "desirable & advisable" that their water main should be carried in a particular direction from one point to another, & that it would be "necessary" to lay it through land belonging to pltf., which was within the district. This report was signed, "Your surveyor, A." Four days after its date X. was duly appointed surveyor to defts., & A., who was a candidate for the office, was retained in their service as water-works engineer. The report of Mar. 21 was considered & adopted by the board on Apr. 11, 1888, & in the following month a notice in pursuance thereof was served on pltf. that defts. intended to carry their main through a part of his lands. Upon motion made in an action by pltf. for an injunction to restrain defts. from so doing:—Held: (1) the word "necessary" must be construed as meaning "necessary for the efficient discharge of the duty in the way most for the benefit of the public"; (2) upon the words of Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 16, the person to determine the necessity was the surveyor; & if the ct. found that he had exercised his judgment & come to a conclusion in good faith, the ct. ought not to interfere, even although other courses were shown to be practicable by which the entry on private lands might be avoided; (3) "the surveyor" mentioned in Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 16, must, in the case of an urban authority, be the fit & proper person duly appointed to be surveyor under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 189, & no other; & A. was not "the surveyor" of defts. within Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), ss. 16, 189; & as the report on which the proceedings of defts. was founded was not the report of "the surveyor," pltf. was entitled to an interlocutory injunction.—LEWIS v. WESTON-SUPER-MARE LOCAL BOARD (1888), 40 Ch. 173. Right to elect to proceed under local or general Act.]—Defts. were comrs. under a local Act which empowered them to make drains through private enclosed lands, after giving twenty-eight days' public notice, with power to persons interested to object & to appeal. Defts. were also, as such comrs. by 18 & 19 Vict. c. 121, s. 31, the local authority; & as the local authority were by 18 & 19 Vict. c. 121, s. 2, & by Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), s. 67, empowered without giving notice to make drains through private enclosed lands adjoining a highway, for the purpose of removing an existing nuisance. A watercourse used as a sewer being a nuisance & a new sewer being necessary to remove the nuisance, defts., without giving notice, made a new sewer through pltf.'s enclosed land adjoining a highway, not in the line of the watercourse:—Held: defts. were entitled to act under either the local Act or the general Act at their election; & the making of the sewer in that manner was within their powers under the general Act.

Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), s. 67, gives authority to the surveyor to "make, etc., all ditches, gutters, drains, or watercourses, & also to make & lay such trunks, tunnels, etc., as he shall deem necessary in & through any lands or grounds adjoining or lying near to any highway, upon paying the owner or occupier of such lands or grounds for the damages which he shall sustain thereby (WILLES, J.).—DERBY (EARL) v. BURY IMPROVEMENT COMRS. 174. Right to lay sewer above ground.]—By Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 16, a local authority is empowered to carry any sewer "into, through, or under" any lands within its district, & the Act provides for compensation to all persons sustaining damage by reason of the exercise of the powers of the Act in relation to any matters as to which they are not themselves in default. A local board under this Act proceeded to carry a sewer across pltf.'s pleasure grounds on such a level that the bottom of the sewer would be only slightly below the surface, & a permanent embankment about 6 feet high would be made :—Held : they were authorised so to do, for the Act did not confine them to carrying a sewer underground.—RODERICK v. ASTON LOCAL BOARD (1877), 5 Ch. An action of trespass & injunction being brought by L. on the ground that the sewer would create a nuisance :—Held : (1) the order of justices mentioned in Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 305, does not apply when proceedings are taken under sect. 10 ; (2) the statute does not authorise a sewer which would cause a nuisance, & injunction granted accordingly, the jury having found that a nuisance would be created.—LAMACRAFT v. ST. 177. Saving for navigation & water rights—Interference with towing path—Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 327 (3).]—Defts. resolved to construct a system of surface water drains in their district to discharge into the river Thames by means of an outfall drain, carried into, through, & under the towing path, the soil of which was vested in pltfs., who were a body of persons entitled by virtue of an Act of Parliament to navigate on or use such river, or to receive tolls or dues in respect of the navigation thereon or use thereof. The special case stated that the execution of the works by defts. would temporarily interfere with the traffic upon the towing path, but that it was the intention of defts. to so carry out the works as not at any time to interrupt the traffic over more than one-half of the path, & to avoid, as far as possible, any interference with the towing of vessels :—Held : upon that statement, the execution of the works would interfere with the towing path so as to interrupt the traffic thereof within Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 327 (3), & under those circumstances, by reason of that sect. defts. had no right to carry the outfall drain into, through, or under the towing path, without first obtaining the licence & permission of pltfs. so to do, & submitting to such restrictions & agreeing to such terms & conditions as pltfs. thought proper to impose.—RIVER THAMES CONSERVATORS v. WALTON-UPON-THAMES DISTRICT COUNCIL (1907), 96 L. 180. ——.] — The Local Government Board had, under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 299, made orders calling upon two local sanitary authorities to perform their duty within six months in the matter of complaint in each order mentioned by executing works for the proper drainage of their respective districts. Inquiries had been held by an inspector of the board, who found default had been made, but had declined to admit evidence either as to the great difficulties & expenses attending any scheme of drainage for either district, or as to the probable cost of an efficient system of drainage if carried out. The Local Government Board neither proposed nor suggested any definite scheme :—Held : a mandamus must go calling upon the local authority to perform their duty in the terms of the orders. So long as there had been no legal error or omission of legal form, it was not for the ct. to entertain questions as to whether there had been a due inquiry or whether the findings of the Local Government Board were sufficient or not.—R. v. STAINES UNION, R. v. STAINES LOCAL BOARD (1893), 62 L. Local Board stated that after considering the advice of their engineer on the matter they were of opinion that they had done all that was required by the Act.

Complaint of the alleged default on the part of the Local Board was then made, under sect. 299, to the Local Government Board. An inquiry was held, & the Local Government Board refused to interfere.

182. How arising—Necessity for negligence.]—In 1855 a municipal corpn. made a sewer under a road within their district. Many years afterwards the owners of premises abutting on the road erected a brewery, &, in pursuance of Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 21, or the corresponding section of the Sanitary Act, 1866, connected the drainage of the brewery cellars with the sewers. In 1891, 1892 & 1893, the cellars were damaged by floodings.

The floodings arose from the fact that by reason of the large increase in recent years in the number of buildings draining into the sewer, when very heavy falls of rain occurred, the sewer was too small to carry off the influx of water, & the pressure forced the contents of the sewer through the connections into the cellars. The system of drainage originally adopted reasonably provided for the district & for the then probable increase of buildings which would have to drain into it. There had been no negligence in constructing or maintaining the sewer, or in not providing a new sewer or sewage system :—Held : (1) the corpn. were not liable as strangers & apart from any statutory duty; (2) in the absence of negligence, the corpn. were not liable under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 19.—STRETTON'S DERBY BREWERY CO. v. DERBY CORPN., [1894] 1 Ch. 431; 63 L. 184. —— Failure to cover mouth of sewer.]—Pltfs., owners of baths, had a drain from their premises communicating with the main sewer of the town of Cheltenham; there was a flap to pltf.'s drain which prevented any back water coming into it from the town sewer. In 1852 the town comrs. obtained an Act of Parliament to make new sewers, & they then made a sewer considerably deeper than the former one; they made a communication from the drain of pltf.'s premises into their own sewer, but omitted to make any flap. The new sewer was made by contractors with the comrs., & inclosed by puddling, not concrete; heavy storms came, the sewer burst, & the water of the Chelt flowed into the sewer, & ultimately a quantity of sewerage water & filth was forced up pltf.'s drain & into his premises, doing great damage :—Held : the circumstances of the case showed defts. were guilty of negligence; & commissioners were liable in this action to pltf. for the injury occasioned.—RUCK v. WILLIAMS (1858), 3 H. & N. 308; 27 L. 185. —— Tapping underground springs—Injunction.]—Though there is no remedy for the injury caused by sewers tapping underground springs, the ct. will interfere where it is shown that water is abstracted from definite channels flowing above ground.

A canal was supplied from a pond fed by springs, & by streams flowing into it. A local board constructed a sewer with a branch running parallel to one of the streams & under the pond. The sewers tapped the springs so that the pond would no longer hold water, & affected the stream so that a great part of its water was absorbed :—Held : the latter injury was a ground for the ct.'s interference.—GRAND JUNCTION CANAL CO. v. SHUGAR (1871), 6 Ch. 186. —— Damage caused by excavation.]—Pltf.'s house was built in 1874. Defts. in 1883, acting under statutory powers, constructed a sewer under a road near pltf.'s house, which, owing to defts.' negligence in the construction of the sewer, was cracked & damaged. The cracks became gradually worse, & continued so doing till Dec. 1888, when pltf. brought an action to recover damages for the injury to his house :—Held : although pltf. was not entitled to any right of support for his house by way of easement, yet defts. were bound to use due care in the exercise of their powers, & were therefore liable for negligence. — FAIRBROTHER v. BURY RURAL SANITARY AUTHORITY (1889), 37 W. 187. —— Failure to discover defect in sewer.]—Under local Acts, the Manchester Improvement Comrs., & then the corpn. of Manchester, were empowered to make sewers, & to use, repair, & cleanse the same. A sewer made some forty years previously burst during a violent storm under a cellar which communicated with pltf.'s house, flooded the rooms, & so caused the house to fall. The bursting of the sewer was caused by defects in its original construction, of which defts. were ignorant, but which they might have discovered by reasonable means :—Held : defts. were bound from time to time to inform themselves as to the condition of the sewers, & to use all reasonable means to ascertain whether the sewers wanted cleansing or repairing or were defective, & defts. having omitted to perform their duty were guilty of negligence, & liable to pltf. for the injury to his house.—FLEMING v. MANCHESTER CORPN. 195. ——— ———.]—Resps., who owned a factory in a low-lying part of a burgh of which applts. were the local authority charged by statute with the duty of effectually draining the burgh, brought an action in the Ct. of Session against applts. for damages in respect of a loss alleged to have been incurred by resps. through the flooding of their premises during a rainstorm owing to the insufficiency & faulty design of applts.' sewers. By their condescendence resps. averred that as the result of this insufficiency & faulty design the sewer into which the factory drained had become surcharged & ejected its contents on to resps.' premises, & that as a consequence of the failure of applt. to perform their statutory duty of providing adequate sewers for the drainage of the burgh resps. had suffered the loss complained of. The defence was that the flooding was caused by the overflow of two natural streams adjoining resps.' premises:—Held: (1) it was competent to the ct. upon the pleadings to deal not only with the question of regurgitation, but also with the question of the failure of the sewer to carry off the surface water from resps.' premises; (2) upon the evidence, the inadequacy of applts.' sewers materially contributed to resps.' loss.—BARRHEAD BURGH (PROVOST, ETC.) v. BROWNLIE (JAMES) & SON (1925), 89 J. 196. ——— ——— Measure of damages.] — By reason of the improper construction of a sewer resulting in overflows, pltf.'s house became uncomfortable & an unhealthy place of residence, & in consequence he left it. It was held that he was entitled to recover from the urban district council, as damages, the rent for the quarters for which he was liable to his landlord, & during which he had lost the use of the house, & also damages for the physical discomfort suffered by pltf. & the actual expense to which pltf. had been put in respect of the illness in his family caused by such overflows.—TOUZEAU v. SLOUGH URBAN DISTRICT (1896), 60 J. 197. ——— Escape of sewage.]—Owing to an escape of sewage from a sewer vested in an urban district council, the supply of drinking water used by an adjacent hydropathic establishment became polluted, & an outbreak of typhoid fever occurred in the establishment. In an action by the proprietor of the establishment against the urban district council for damages for the pollution of the water supply, the jury found that the pollution was due to negligence on the part of deft. council & that there was no contributory negligence on the part of pltf. & awarded damages to pltf. Pltf. had no proprietary title to the water coming to his establishment through the supply which was so polluted, nor any leave or licence to use the water:—Held: pltf. had a good cause of action & was entitled to judgment on the finding of the jury. On appeal, judgment entered for the defts.—FERGUSSON v. MALVERN URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL (1908), 72 J. P. 101; revsd., 72 J. P. 273, C. A.; (1909), 73 J. P. 361, H. L.

200. —— Borough councils—Discretion as to time & manner of making.]—The vestry of a parish comprised within Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), having, under sect. 69, obtained the necessary approval of the Metropolitan Board of Works to the construction by them of such sewers as may be requisite for the drainage of the parish, has, under that sect., a discretion with respect to the exigencies of one portion of the parish as compared with others, & are entitled to a reasonable time for the beginning & completion of the works; & a writ of mandamus ordering the immediate construction of sewers, etc., in a particular part of the parish is defective, unless it shows on the part of the vestry a present duty, & a non-compliance therewith.—R. v. ST. 201. —— —— Submission of plans to London County Council—Refusal to submit for reasons unconnected with making of sewer.]—The making & branching of sewers within the district of a vestry or district board is, by Metropolis Management Act, 1862 (c. 104), s. 47, made subject to the sanction in writing of the vestry or district board being first obtained. But a vestry or district board cannot, s. 48 enacts, give such sanction without the approval of the Metropolitan Board of Works:—Held: it was no answer to a manadmus requiring a district board to submit to the Metropolitan Board of Works plans & sections of sewers laid before them in pursuance of s. 47, to answer that that board have refused to sanction the making of the roads in which the proposed sewers are intended to be laid; &, therefore, the district board, having no other objection, it was their duty, under s. 48, to submit the plans & sections to the Metropolitan Board of Works.—R. v. WANDSWORTH BOARD OF WORKS, Ex p. CHILDS (1885), 49 J. 202. Power to alter—Borough councils—Liability to provide new drains.]—Where the vestry or district board of a parish or district, under the powers conferred on them by Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), substitute a new sewer in a course different from that of an old one, & think proper to divert house drainage, not in itself defective or insufficient, from the latter to the former, they are bound under sect. 69 to provide new drains for the old ones so diverted, & cannot call upon the owners of the premises, under sect. 73 to pay the expense of such new drains.—ST. 206. —— Liability of commissioners under local Act.]—The Comrs. for executing Crown Estate Paving Act, 1851 (c. 95), were, as successors of Comrs. under an Act of 1824, authorised & empowered to repair & maintain the streets within a certain area, including a street one-half of the breadth of which is now in the Metropolitan Borough of St. M. & the other half in the Metropolitan Borough of St. P. Their predecessors had been, under the Act of 1824, Comrs. of Sewers for the same area; a sewer under the half of the street in St. M. had been repairable by them, but under an Act of 1848 became vested in & repairable by the Metropolitan Comrs. of Sewers, & ultimately vested in & was repairable by the borough council of St. M. In Dec. 1909, the sewer having perished for want of repair fell in & the road above it subsided. In Mar. 1910, the Comrs. called upon the council to repair the sewer, & on their default repaired it & made good the road, completing the work in the month of May following. In July of the same year they paid the expenses incurred by them in executing the work, & demanded repayment from the council; & in the following Sept. they commenced an action against the council to recover the amount of the expenses:—Held: the Comrs. were, in the discharge of their statutory duty, obliged to repair the sewer & they were therefore entitled to recover the amount so expended from the council as money paid at the council's request.—HART v. ST. 209. —— —— Certificate of Port of London Authority.]—By Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 135, the Metropolitan Board of Works, to whose powers & obligations the London County Council have now succeeded, were required to make such sewers as they might think necessary for preventing all or any part of the sewage of the metropolis from flowing or passing into the river Thames in or near the metropolis & to cause such sewers & works to be completed on or before Dec. 31, 1860, & also to make all such other sewers & works & such diversions or alterations of any existing sewers or works vested in them under that Act as they might from time to time think necessary for the effectual sewerage & drainage of the metropolis.

By Metropolis Management Amendment Act, 1858 (c. 104), s. 28, "In order to preserve the navigation of the river Thames, the plans of any work to be constructed under the authority of this Act upon the banks, bed, or shore of the river Thames, which may interfere with the free navigation of the river, shall be approved by the conservators of the river Thames in writing signed by their secretary, before such works are commenced, certifying that the works according to such plans will not interfere with the navigation of the river Thames":—Held: sect. 28 of the Act of 1858 was a subsisting enactment, therefore, the London County Council were entitled by virtue of the Acts of 1855 & 1858 to construct works in, over, or under the bed of the river Thames, & the Port of London Authority, who had succeeded to the powers & obligations of the conservators of the river Thames, were bound to consider, pursuant to sect. 28 of the Act of 1858, any plans of works which might be submitted to them by the London County Council, & if they were of opinion that such works or any of them would not interfere with the navigation of the river Thames to approve the plans for the same & give their certificate accordingly, & as to any works the plans of which might have been so approved, & as to which the certificate above mentioned had been given the London County Council were not bound to obtain any further licence from the Port of London Authority.—LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL v. PORT OF LONDON AUTHORITY, [1914] 2 Ch. 362; 84 L. 217. How arising—Necessity for negligence.]—In the absence of negligence on their part, a vestry or local board is not responsible for any injury resulting to an individual from the disrepair of a sewer. Metropolis Local Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 72, imposes upon the vestry or local board the duty of properly cleansing the sewers vested in them by the Act. Under the premises of pltf. was an old drain which by reason of other houses draining into it had become a "sewer." This drain having become choked, the soil therefrom flowed into the cellar of pltf., a publican, & did damage. In an action against the vestry, founded upon a breach of the duty imposed upon them by sect. 72, but not charging negligence, the jury found that the existence of the drain was unknown to defts.: that its existence might have been known to them by the exercise of reasonable care & inquiry: but that the obstruction of the drain was unknown to defts., & could not by the exercise of reasonable care have been known to them:—Held: upon these findings

224. Contract for disposal—Enforcement.]—A local board of health entered into an agreement with a sewage co., in pursuance of which they afterwards granted a lease to the co. of the sewage works of a town, & of a plot of land, for a term of fourteen years, the co. covenanting that they would during the term keep the outfall of the works, with the engines, pumps, & apparatus, in proper working order, so as to admit of the free flow of the sewerage through the sewers communicating with the works, & so that the same might not at any time be stopped. To a bill by the local board against the co., complaining that the co.'s works were insufficient to treat the sewerage successfully, that they were pumping only a portion of the sewerage out of the sewers, & were damming up or heading back the residue in the sewers, so as to be a nuisance to the inhabitants of the town, & that pltfs. were being threatened with proceedings, & praying for an injunction to restrain defts. from permitting the sewage to remain in the sewers, so as to be a nuisance or damage to pltfs., & from damming up or heading back the sewage in the sewers, defts. demurred, on the grounds that the ct. could not superintend the proper performance of the works; that pltfs. had alleged no special damage; & that it was not the practice of the ct. to restrain the infringement of a public right at the suit of a corpn., except at the instance or in the presence of the A.-G. 229. —— ——.]—Oyster ponds or "layings" had existed as far back as living memory went upon the foreshore of an arm of the sea. The purpose for which these ponds were used was the storage of oysters, which were brought from elsewhere & laid down in the ponds in order to be fattened for the market. Certain ponds of this kind, which were enclosed by boards or concrete, were & for more than twenty years had been used in the manner above mentioned by pltf. who had purchased them in 1879 from others, who had for a period of between twenty & thirty years previously so used them. There was some evidence that the foreshore had formed part of the waste of a manor the lord of which had a several fishery thereon.

Defts. were an urban district council which had been constituted in 1914 their district being carved out of that of a previously existing rural sanitary authority. A sewer had been made in the district by the rural sanitary authority, from which an inconsiderable quantity of sewage had been discharged into the sea near the oyster ponds. Defts. made certain new sewers & connected them with the first-mentioned sewer, & the quantity of sewage discharged from that sewer was thereby greatly increased. The sewage so discharged caused a nuisance to pltf.'s oyster ponds through pollution of the same with sewage to an extent which rendered them unfit for use. In an action by pltf. against defts. in respect of the nuisance so caused: —Held: defts. not having any right to discharge sewage into the sea so as to cause a nuisance & having by their acts of commission caused such a discharge of sewage were wrong doers; & therefore the action was maintainable.—FOSTER v. WARBLINGTON URBAN COUNCIL, [1906] 1 K. 232. Intercepting sewer for several parishes—Additional parish incorporated in urban sanitary district using sewer—Duty to receive additional sewage.]—Under the powers contained in a private Act of Parliament an intercepting sewer was built to carry away the drainage of certain parishes & was vested in a board of management. The Act provided, that if at any time any local board should be constituted for any district in which any part of the sewers authorised should be situate, having powers with respect to the sewage of such district, & to levy sewer rate therein, every such local board should be at liberty, by notice to the sewers board, to participate in the benefits & liabilities of this Act, & all provisions of the Act should be applicable to them & their district in like manner in all respects as they were applicable to any other of the local authorities & their districts. By an order of the county council made under the provisions of Local Government Act, 1888 (c. 41), the area of a certain parish which was not originally within the purview of the Act was transferred & incorporated in an urban sanitary district, which discharged its sewage into the intercepting sewer:—Held: the urban sanitary authority were entitled to discharge the drainage of the added area into the intercepting sewer.—BRIGHTON INTERCEPTING & OUTFALL SEWERS BOARD v. HOVE CORPN. cannot, even with the consent of the London County Council, enter into a binding agreement to receive sewage from a district without the metropolitan area.

Where pltfs., the vestry of a parish within the metropolitan area, made an arrangement with certain landowners of a district without the metropolitan area, now represented by defts., the urban district council, whereby the discharge of some sewage from defts.' district into a sewer belonging to pltfs. had been permitted for many years, & this additional sewage had increased so as periodically to choke up pltfs.' sewer:—Held: this arrangement operated in law merely as a revocable licence, & pltfs., being a public body with public duties to perform, were not estopped or precluded by laches or acquiescence from bringing an action for an injunction to restrain defts. from using the sewer; but having regard to the conduct of pltfs. & to the difficulty in which an injunction would place defts. by compelling them to close their sewers, the ct. ought only to make a declaration that defts. were not entitled to send sewage from their district into pltfs.' sewer without the consent of pltfs.—ST. 234. —— —— Acquisition of prescriptive right impossible since 1855.]—Before the passing of Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), certain houses in the Acton district drained into the Stamford Brook sewers, which connected with the metropolitan drainage system. By London County Council (Acton Sewage) Act, 1898, s. 3 (1) (a), the Acton Urban Council were to pay to the London County Council in respect of the future use of the metropolitan main drainage system a sum based upon the rateable value of the property within their district which drained into the metropolitan system, other than houses or buildings which had acquired a prescriptive right to drain into the Stamford Brook sewers:—Held: as no house could since the passing of Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), acquire by prescription a right to drain into a sewer discharging into the metropolitan drainage system, in ascertaining the sum to be paid the rateable value of houses connected with the Stamford Brook sewers before Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), alone came within the exemption.—LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL v. ACTON URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL (1902), 18 T. Persons in other places constructed sewers, connected with sewers of B., & discharging through them into the sewer of A. B. made no attempt to restrain them. A. claimed an injunction restraining B. & the persons in other places from causing or permitting the flow of sewage from any of such other places into sewers of B. so as to discharge as aforesaid:—Held: by the effect of the Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 22, the contract made by the proviso in the deed of 1874 was discharged, & the persons in other places had a right to connect with the sewer of B. without making any application to A.—NEWINGTON LOCAL BOARD v. COTTINGHAM LOCAL BOARD (1879), 12 Ch. 236. —— —— Construction.]—By an agreement of Nov. 22, 1895, made between pltfs. (the urban council) & defts. (the rural council) it was provided that defts. should not permit surface water to be carried from their district into pltfs.' sewers, but should provide means for the treatment of all surface & storm water in their district & such storm & surface water should be conveyed away & dealt with by defts. in such manner as should be satisfactory to the surveyors of defts. & pltfs. respectively. Defts. subsequently drained certain surface waters into pltfs.' sewers. Litigation arose between the parties, & ultimately, on Sept. 25, 1913, an agreement was entered into between them which contained the following clause: "The T. Urban D.C. to allow the water, which is alleged to be surface water, already turned into their sewers by the R.D.C. to be continued to be so turned in in perpetuity, but the R.D.C. undertake not to permit further surface water to enter the T.U.D.C. sewers other than that above mentioned." The whole agreement was expressed to be made subject to a new sewerage scheme of pltfs. receiving the sanction of the Local Government Board. In due course this sanction was obtained. Owing to the outbreak of war the carrying out of that scheme was in abeyance, & it was not until after the armistice that the question of defts.' rights under the agreement came into prominence. Disputes arose to the number of houses of defts. which were discharging surface water in 1913, & pltfs., holding the view that the discharge of surface water by defts. was being carried out in such a manner as to constitute a breach of the agreement of 1895, as varied by the agreement of 1913, commenced the present proceedings in which they claimed that by reason of defts.' breaches of the agreement as so varied they were relieved of their obligation of receiving into their sewers the sewage or surface water from certain houses therein referred to, & alternatively, they claimed an injunction to restrain defts. from discharging any surface water into pltfs.' sewers except as therein specified:—Held: in the circumstances an injunction must be granted restraining defts. from permitting surface water from their district to enter pltfs.' sewers except from such premises as were on Sept. 25, 1913, discharging surface water into the sewers.—TYLDESLEY URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL v. LEIGH RURAL DISTRICT COUNCIL (1925), 23 L. 237. —— Contract with private owner—Binding on successors of local authority.]—Under Public Health Act, 1848 (c. 63), s. 48, the owner of land adjoining a district by deed agreed with the local board to do certain works & pay £10 a year, & the board gave him leave to drain through their drain all sewage from the property & houses then belonging to the landowner & from any houses thereafter to be erected on the property. Many more houses were afterwards erected, & the urban sanitary authority, which had succeeded the local board, were under a new Act of Parliament prevented from passing as before the sewage through the drain into the Thames:—Held: (1) the deed was not ultra vires, & the board could bind their successors as to the sewage of houses not then in existence; (2) though the board were trustees for the ratepayers they had exercised their discretion, & the agreement did not appear at the time improvident, & its turning out badly for them did not affect it; (3) the law being altered so as to prevent the discharge of sewage into the Thames was no ground for setting aside the deed.—NEW WINDSOR CORPN. v. STOVELL (1884), 27 Ch. 244. Liability of local authority—Agreement to cease pollution — Breach of agreement.] — W. occupied bleaching works on the O. under a lease. The improvement comrs. of H. who had adopted 21 & 22 Vict. c. 98, & thereby were constituted the local board of health for H. commenced a system of drainage for H. in 1862, & the sewage flowing through the C. stream into the O. polluted its waters so that they could not be used for bleaching purposes. In 1868 W. filed his bill, praying for an injunction to restrain the comrs. from permitting the sewage to flow into the O. The suit was compromised & by an agreement, dated Mar. 1, 1869, the comrs. agreed to pay W. a certain sum for damages & that they would not, after Mar. 31, permit the sewage of H. to flow through the drains under their control into the O. The comrs. adopted the irrigation system of the disposal of their sewage, which proved wholly inadequate. Sewage flowed down the C. stream into the O. & also the overflow from the irrigation farm. W. was obliged to take other bleaching works as the waters of the O. were so polluted by the drainage that he could not use them. He therefore filed his bill against the comrs. praying for an injunction in the terms of the agreement, & for an inquiry as to damages sustained by him. Relying on the performance of the agreement, W. took a new lease of the bleaching works:—Held: W. was entitled to an injunction, & an inquiry as to damages as prayed by his bill.—WOOD v. HIGH & LOW HARROGATE IMPROVEMENT COMRS. 245. —— Power to cut off unauthorised communication—Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 21.] —An injunction will lie against a sanitary authority to restrain them from permitting a natural watercourse to be polluted by sewage, discharged at a point within their district, when the sanitary authority has power either at common law or by statute to secure the cessation of the nuisance without constructing a new system of drainage, & without resorting to any legal proceedings to obtain an injunction on their own part.

A. was the owner of a house, & land in front of which ran a natural watercourse. The Finchley local board, having previously drained surface water through a pipe into the watercourse, in 1880 gave permission to B. to make a connection from his premises to their surface water drain. B., without permission, constructed a further connection with the drain, so as to carry sewage from a cesspool on his premises through the drain into the watercourse, thus polluting the water, & causing a nuisance to A.:—Held: inasmuch as the Finchley local board had a right at common law to close the unauthorised communication, & were also empowered to do so under above sect., & were under no necessity to construct a new system of drainage or to commence proceedings for an injunction against B., an injunction ought to be granted at the instance of A. to restrain them from permitting the continuance of the nuisance.—CHARLES v. FINCHLEY LOCAL BOARD (1883), 23

250. —— ——.]—By Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 17, it is enacted that "Nothing in this Act shall authorise any local authority to make or use any sewer, drain or outfall for the purpose of conveying sewage or filthy water into any natural stream or watercourse, or into any canal, pond or lake, until such sewage or filthy water is freed from all excrementitious or other foul or noxious matter such as would affect or deteriorate the purity & quality of the water in such stream or watercourse, or in such canal, pond or lake." Semble: the words "such as would affect or deteriorate the purity & quality of the water" apply to "excrementitious" as well as to "other foul or noxious matter." The above provision is contravened if the purity & quality of the water in a stream is deteriorated at the point of discharge of a sewer; it is not necessary to show deterioration to the stream in general.

In an action by the A.-G. at the relation of the owner of lands affected, upon it being established that, owing to defects in the sewerage system of a local authority, sewage containing excrementitious & other foul or noxious matter was discharged into a stream & polluted the water at the outfall, there was granted against the local authority, in favour of the A.-G., an injunction in the terms of Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 17; &, in favour of the relator, an injunction restraining the local authority from discharging sewage at the outfall so as to cause a nuisance to the relator by pollution of the stream.—A.-G. v. RINGWOOD RURAL DISTRICT COUNCIL (1928), 92 J. Pltfs. owned Elvaston Castle & estate, situated on the river about 5½ miles below Derby, & brought this action for an injunction to restrain defts. from polluting the river so as to cause a nuisance; damages for the silting up of a lake fed from the river by a watercourse which had to be stopped up in 1902; the loss of a water wheel which had been worked by the watercourse, & the expense of replacing it by an engine; pollution to a well into which water percolated from the lake; depreciation of a house on the bank of the river & to the castle; the expense of obtaining a new water supply; & for injury to the fishing. In 1898 an order was made in the Derbyshire county ct., in an action brought by the county council, that defts. should abstain from polluting the river contrary to Rivers Pollution Prevention Act, 1876 (c. 75). By a local Act, defts. obtained the necessary powers, & they had now commenced to construct sewage works for the whole of their area:—Held: inasmuch as the householders had obtained in the first two classes of sewage prescriptive rights which could not be interfered with by defts., an order had been made under Rivers Pollution Act of 1876 (c. 75), & defts. were taking steps to remove the nuisance, no injunction ought to be granted; pltfs.' remedy against them in that respect was by complaint to the Local Government Board under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 299.—HARRINGTON (EARL) v. DERBY CORPN., [1905] 1 Ch. 205; 74 L. 257. —— ——.]—At common law there is no right to discharge sewage into the sea so as to cause nuisance to another, neither does any such right exist under Public Health Act, 1848 (c. 63), or Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55). If the sewage pollutes an oyster bed in a fishery this amounts to an injury to the bed within Sea Fisheries Act, 1868 (c. 45), s. 53, & where a local fisheries committee have made a bye-law under Sea Fisheries Regulation Act, 1888 (c. 54), prohibiting the deposit or discharge of any substance detrimental to sea fish or sea fishing, such pollution is also illegal as a breach of the bye-law. Even if householders have a prescriptive right to discharge their sewage into existing sewers, an injunction may, notwithstanding Harrington (Earl) v. Derby Corpn., No. 256, ante, be granted to restrain a nuisance by pollution arising from the sewage if, on the facts of the case, it does not appear that any interference with such rights will result from the injunction.—HOBART v. SOUTHEND-ON-SEA CORPN. 258. Mandamus to compel works—Comprehensive scheme required.]—A peremptory mandamus was issued on the application of the Local Government Board against a corpn. requiring them to execute various sewage works. The mandamus not having been obeyed, writs of attachment were granted against certain members of the corpn., such writs to lie in the office for a limited period, which from time to time had been extended. The corpn. applied that, having satisfied the Local Government Board that the sewage works were in process of execution with due diligence, the time should be still further extended. The ct. ordered that the writs should still lie in the office, & the matter should stand over generally with liberty to apply.—R. v. WORCESTER CORPN. (1905), 69 J. P. 296; 3 L. G. R. 468, D. C.

259. Liability of private owner—Sewer vested in local authority.]—The mere fact that a sewer has vested in a local authority under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 13, does not make the local authority ipso facto liable for the discharge of sewage matter from the sewer into a brook.

A number of cottages of which defts. were lessees drained into sewage disposal works of which a firm of builders were lessees. Crude sewage escaped from the disposal works into a brook & injured the cattle of pltf., a riparian owner. In an action against defts. for damages & an injunction pltf. adduced evidence that at the time the sewage escaped defts. were in control of the disposal works. The plans for the cottages had been passed by the local authority "subject to the drainage being carried out to the satisfaction of the surveyor." There was no evidence that the surveyor had ever given a certificate as to his satisfaction. Pltf. obtained judgment for £50:—Held: assuming the disposal works & their pipes were sewers vested in the local authority under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 13, as there was evidence that the crude sewage was discharged into the brook by the act or default of defts., & the judge had so found, there was no reason to interfere with the judgment of the county ct. judge.—TITTERTON v. KINGSBURY COLLIERIES (1911), 104 L. 277. Make of drain pipe—Power of local authority to prescribe.]—Defts., in exercise of the powers given to them by Metropolis Local Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 76, served pltf. with a notice requiring him, in the construction of the drainage to certain houses then building by him in their district, to use pipes of stoneware of the best quality. Pltf. proposed to use pipes of Aylesford manufacture as coming within the description of stoneware mentioned in the notice. To this defts. objected, who required pipes of Lambeth manufacture, or of manufacture similar to that of Lambeth, to be used, & they refused, unless this were complied with, to make an opening into the main sewer for pltf.'s drainage. Pltf. thereupon made the opening himself, & completed his drainage by means of Aylesford pipes:—Held: the evidence of scientific men as to the comparative merits of the two manufactures being conflicting, the Act gave the vestry the right to determine which of the two materials should be used; & the ct. therefore refused an application by pltf. for a perpetual injunction to restrain defts. from entering upon pltf.'s premises for the purpose of taking up the drainage works constructed by him with the Aylesford pipes.—AUSTIN v. ST. 278. He was also summoned for non-compliance with an order of resps. made under Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 74, for the drainage of the premises in question by a combined operation. The order provided that it was made subject to the provision of an additional vent pipe to be taken above the roof of one of the premises. This vent pipe was the same thing as the untrapped outlet opening required by bye-law 8 above referred to. Applt. contended that he was not bound to provide this additional vent pipe on the grounds that it was not within the words "other connected works & apparatus" in Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 76, & that resps. had no power to make a requirement dealing with a matter regulated by the bye-laws of the London County Council & going beyond those bye-laws:—Held: though applt. had, in fact, provided the two untrapped openings required by the bye-law, resps. had power to require by their order the provision of the additional vent pipe, & the order was binding on applt.—LORDEN v. WESTMINSTER CORPN. The sanitary inspector of applts., the local authority, on the application of the occupier of one of the houses, applied the smoke test to the drains of that house & found that something was wrong. Applts. subsequently served a notice on resp., the owner of the adjoining house, requiring him, in conjunction with the owners of the house where the smoke test had been applied, to take up & relay the drain within one month. The work not having been done, applts. did it & apportioned the costs in respect of resp.'s house at £23 9*s.* 2*d.* Applts. had given no notice under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 41, to the occupier of resp.'s house of their intention to enter the house where they applied the smoke test & examine the drain, & no evidence of emergency was given. Resp. did not pay the £23 9*s.* 2*d.* On a complaint preferred by applts. against resp. that the £23 9*s.* 2*d.* had not been paid:—Held: twenty-four hours' notice to the occupier of resp.'s house of the intention of applts. to enter the house where the smoke test was applied & examine the drain was not a condition precedent to the right of applts.

to recover the apportioned expenses from resp., inasmuch as the object of the twenty-four hours' notice required by Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 41, part I., is to enable the surveyor to enter when his entry, but for that notice, would be a trespass. The notice is not to enable the owner, who might ultimately be liable, to come & see the result of opening the drain, inasmuch as it is not to the owner it has to be given, but to the occupier.—BROMLEY CORPN. v. CHESHIRE, [1908] 1 K. 283. Notice to repair—Must be reasonable.]—A drain, which received the drainage of several houses, being in bad condition, the local authority served notices under Public Health Acts (Amendment) Act, 1890 (c. 59), s. 19, & Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 41, upon the owners of the houses, requiring each owner within seven days to do the whole of the work necessary to remedy the defects in the drain. The local authority subsequently executed the work themselves & apportioned the expenses so incurred among the owners. Upon one of the owners refusing to pay the sum apportioned to him, the local authority took proceedings before a ct. of summary jurisdiction to recover the same. The ct. dismissed the complaint of the local authority:—Held: under Public Health Acts (Amendment) Act, 1890 (c. 59), s. 7, the local authority had a right of appeal against the order of the ct. of summary jurisdiction to quarter sessions, but the appeal must be dismissed on the ground that the notice was an unreasonable notice.—HORNSEY CORPN. v. KERSHAW (1909), 73 J. 284. Determination of what works necessary—Review of determination of local authority.]—By Public Health Act, 1848 (c. 63), s. 54, the surveyor of the local board of health may examine any drain, water closet, privy, cesspool, or ash pit, & if it is in bad order & condition the board shall cause notice in writing to be given to the owner or occupier of the premises, requiring him to do the necessary works; & if such notice be not complied with, the party shall be liable to a penalty for every day during which he makes default:—Held: the discretion to determine what works are necessary to be done is vested in the board, &, on a proceeding before justices to recover the penalty under Public Health Act, 1848 (c. 63), s. 129, they have no jurisdiction to review its determination.—HARGREAVES v. TAYLOR (1863), 3 B. & S. 613; 1 New Rep. 472; 32 L. See Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 41; Public Health (Amendment) Act, 1890 (c. 59), s. 19.

291. Liability for repairs.]—Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 41, empowers a local authority, on written application made to them stating that a drain is a nuisance or injurious to health, to enter the premises, &, if the drain appears to be in bad condition, or to require alteration or amendment, to give notice to the owner or occupier to do the necessary works.

A local Act, 1885, s. 148, in cases where two or more houses are connected with a single private drain which conveys their drainage into a public sewer, gives the corpn. all the powers conferred by Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 41.

The owner of several houses connected with a single drain conveying their drainage into a public sewer applied for a mandamus to the corpn. to repair & maintain the drain. No application had been made under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 41:—Held: Local Act, 1885, did not empower the corpn. to require the owner to repair & maintain the drain, & the corpn. were liable to repair & maintain it.—R. v. HASTINGS CORPN., [1897] 1 Q. 292. ——.]—A pipe at the rear of certain houses belonging to the same owner received the drainage of those houses, & of no other houses, & then discharged into a manhole. The drainage of other houses belonging to different owners also discharged by a common drain into the manhole. The drainage of all the houses was then conveyed from the manhole by a single private drain into a public sewer. A nuisance having arisen in the pipe at the rear of the first-named houses, the local authority gave notice to the owner of the houses to remedy the defect:—Held: the pipe was a sewer, & not a "single private drain" within Public Health Acts Amendment Act, 1890 (c. 59), s. 19, & the local authority were bound to remedy the defect. The fact that the sewage from the houses, before it reached the public sewer, traversed the single private drain did not make the owner of the houses liable to

293. ——.]—(1) Kingston-upon-Hull Corporation Act, 1903 (c. ccxlvi), s. 49 (1), enacts that "where two or more houses or premises are connected with a single private drain which conveys their drainage into a public sewer" the corpn. shall have the powers conferred by Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 41; by sub-sect. 2 that Public Health Acts Amendment Act, 1890 (c. 59), s. 19, shall cease to be in force within the city, & by sub-sect. 3 that for the purposes of this sect. the expression "drain" includes a "drain used for the drainage of more than one building whether owned or occupied by the same person or not." By Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 4, "drain" means "any drain of & used for the drainage of one building only, or premises within the same curtilage, & made merely for the purpose of communicating therefrom with a . . . sewer into which the drainage of two or more buildings or premises occupied by different persons is conveyed":—Held: the true meaning of sect. 49 is that where the drainage pipe provided in common for a group of houses or properties is as exclusive & private in relation to those properties as the statutorily defined "drain" is in relation to the single house which it serves, then the liability of the owner or owners of those properties for nuisance arising from that common drainage is analogous to or corresponds with the liability of the owner of a single house for the statutory drain serving that house only.

(2) Defts. were the owners of a roadway, being a cul de sac, having twenty cottages on one side & ten on the other & communicating with their back yards only. As the result of a notice under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 23, served on them in 1876, defts. laid a conduit or 12 inch pipe under the whole length of the roadway, the greater part of which was outside the limit mentioned in sect. 23 of 100 feet from the public sewer with which it communicated. This conduit was used only for surface water, including slops from the back yards of the cottages. The smaller conduits from the gullies in these back yards were 4 inch pipes, & met as a rule in pairs just within the curtilages of the cottages & were then carried by 6 inch conduits into the main conduit. As the result of another notice under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 94, served on them in 1877, defts. dealt with the surface water of the roadway by constructing seven gullies along the length of the roadway with 6 inch conduits leading into the main conduit. The land on which the roadway was built, the cottages on each side, & the land at the closed end had throughout been the property of defts. Pltfs., purporting to act under Kingston-upon-Hull Corporation Act, 1903 (c. ccxlvi), s. 49, & Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 41, had recently required defts. to abate a nuisance in respect of the drainage of the cottages & roadway, & having executed the necessary works themselves now claimed a declaration of charge upon the property for the costs of the work in connection with the main conduit. The question was whether the main conduit was a "single private drain" within Kingston-upon-Hull Corporation Act, 1903 (c. ccxlvi), s. 49, & as incidental thereto two further questions were raised: (a) whether the roadway had ever been dedicated to the public as a highway, & (b) whether the conduit was vested in pltfs. or fell within the exceptions contained in Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 13, as being made either for private profit or under defts.' railway Acts:—Held: the case did not fall within the exceptions contained in Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 13.—KINGSTON-UPON-HULL CORPN. v. NORTH EASTERN RY. 295. —— Notice to one owner.]—Two houses belonging to different owners were connected with a public sewer by a single private drain. The local authority of the district, who had adopted Public Health Act, 1890 (c. 59), served upon one of the owners a notice, under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), addressed to both, requiring them to abate a nuisance arising from the drain by doing certain works, & stating that, unless the nuisance were abated, the local authority would proceed to enforce the abatement & to recover costs & penalties. The owner upon whom such notice was served accordingly did the work, & brought an action against the local authority to recover the cost as money paid by her at their request:—Held: the notice given by defts. to pltf. was not a request to do the work which would support the action; no such request could be implied, because defts. were not themselves compellable to do the work, & under sect. 41 of the Act of 1875 & sect. 19 of the Act of 1890 could have compelled the owners to do it, & therefore defts. were not liable.—SELF v. HOVE COMRS., [1895] 1 Q. 296. —— Repairs involving trespass—Validity of notice.]—Five houses of which three belonged to one owner & two to another were connected with the public sewer by a single private drain. The drain being a nuisance & injurious to health, the local authority served on each of the two owners a notice under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 41, & Public Health Act, 1890 (c. 59), s. 19, addressed to them jointly requiring them to relay the whole of the drain:—Held: the fact that neither of the owners could relay the part of the drain situate in the other's premises without committing a trespass was no objection to the validity of the notice & on non-compliance with the notice the local authority might execute the work & recover the expenses from the owners under the last-mentioned sect.—LANCASTER v. BARNES DISTRICT COUNCIL, [1898] 1 Q. local authority may require a defect in a drain, or, where Public Health Acts Amendment Act, 1890 (c. 59), is in force, is a "single private drain," to be remedied where that defect causes a nuisance, though the defect is of a structural character & arises from want of repair.—SOUTHWOLD CORPN. v. CROWDY (1903), 67 J. 298. —— Owner of property where nuisance found—Notice to neighbouring owners unnecessary.]—A drain pipe passing through private property, & receiving & conveying to a public sewer the drainage of several houses belonging to different owners, is a "single private drain" within Public Health Acts (Amendment) Act, 1890 (c. 59), s. 19. A notice to the owner of one of the houses on whose land a nuisance, arising from the defective state of such a drain pipe, is found to exist, to abate the same & to execute certain works for that purpose, is a sufficient notice to throw upon him the duty of abating the nuisance, &, upon his default, to entitle the local authority to recover from him the expenses incurred by them in so doing. In such a case no notice need be given to the other owners, & the provisions of Public Health Acts (Amendment) Act, 1890 (c. 59), s. 19, as to apportionment of the expenses incurred by the local authority in executing the necessary works are not applicable.—THOMPSON v. ECCLES CORPN., HAEDICKE v. FRIERN BARNET URBAN COUNCIL, [1905] 1 K. Defective drain — Notice to remedy — Validity of.]—A., the sanitary inspector of S., a metropolitan parish, gave a notice in his own name, as inspector, to H., an owner of a house, to reconstruct drains, etc., in three days, & afterwards, on default, A. did the work, & the S. vestry took out a summons against H. to recover the expenditure. No resolution of the vestry or of any committee thereof to give the notice was proved, but only a meeting of three members of a sub-committee, who were proved to have met & resolved that the inspector should enter & execute the works himself:—Held: the notice given by the inspector was bad, & the statute not being complied with the summons against H. was properly dismissed.—ST. 301. —— —— ——.]—S. being the owner of certain premises, resps. on Feb. 5 served a notice on him under Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (c. 76), requiring him to abate a certain nuisance, being a defective drain. On Feb. 19 another notice was served requiring him to abate the nuisance & relay the drain. On Mar. 20 the public health committee of resps. caused a notice to be served on him under Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), & Metropolis Management Act, 1862 (c. 120), that the drain was defective, & requiring him to amend the same & to execute the works that the notice set out in detail. In Apr. S. executed certain repairs to the drain, but not those in the notice of Mar. 20. On June 18 the committee reported to resps. that they had had the report of the inspector before them & had given directions for the statutory notices to be served on S., & they recommended that a notice be served on applt. under Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), requiring him to execute such works as were necessary to amend the drain which was in bad order, & that in the event of non-compliance proceedings should be taken. On June 18 resps. by resolution adopted this recommendation, & on July 14 a notice was served on S. requiring him to amend the drain, & for that purpose to execute the works that this notice set out in detail:—Held: the notice of July 14 was not a notice of an order, & S. could not be convicted for non-compliance.—SWINBOURN v. HAMMERSMITH BOROUGH COUNCIL (1903), 88 L. Health (London) Act, 1891 (c. 76), s. 40, entered on the premises & opened up the ground, when it was found that the drain there was made with clay joints, which clay had entirely perished. Subsequently, notices having been served on the owner of the premises to abate a nuisance, under Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (c. 76), on his failing to comply with the notices, a summons was taken out, & in Oct. the magistrate, finding that there was "a leaking drain," made an order upon him to abate the nuisance under Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (c. 76), s. 4:—Held: the magistrate having found that there was "a leaking drain," had not merely found that there was a defective drain but that there was a leaking drain which was a nuisance within the meaning of Public Health (London) Act, 1891 (c. 76), s. 4.—FARMER v. LONG (1907), 72 J. 304. Nuisance from drain acting properly—Liability of owner or occupier.] — A detached portion of the parish of C. had no separate main drainage system, but certain houses therein were drained by means of pipes carrying the sewage into cesspools, the overflow pipes from which communicated with main pipes within such detached portion. The drainage of the houses, including such communications, was constructed with the sanction of the C. vestry, as the local authority under the Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120). The main pipes communicated with watercourses within the adjoining district of the F. local board, & the sewage from the cesspools passed through the main pipes into the watercourses, & caused a nuisance in such adjoining district. The F. local board brought an information & action, to which the owners & occupiers of the houses were not parties, against the C. vestry, for an injunction to restrain them from permitting, authorising, or directing any sewage to pass from the detached portion of C. into the watercourses so as to cause a nuisance:—Held: inasmuch as the cesspools & drains were acting properly qua cesspools & drains, no proceedings could be successfully taken by the C. vestry against the owners or occupiers of the houses under Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 85; & as the cause & effect of the nuisance were not both within the area of the jurisdiction of the C. vestry, it was doubtful whether proceedings could be taken by them against the owners or occupiers of the houses under 18 & 19 Vict. c. 121.—A.-G. v. CLERKENWELL VESTRY, [1891] 3 Ch. 527; 60 L. 305. Right to drain into sewer.] — Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 17, does not affect the right conferred by sect. 21 upon the owner or occupier of premises within the district of a local board, to drain into the existing sewers of the board, & it is for the board to see that their sewers are so arranged that they do not contravene sect. 17.

Pltfs., who were owners of premises within the district of deft. local board, had, eight years before action, connected a drain with defts.' sewer, which was formerly an open watercourse, & still emptied into a natural stream. Proceedings having been taken against the board to restrain the fouling of the stream, the board gave notice to pltfs. under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 21, of their intention to cut off their drain:—Held: pltfs.' right to drain into the sewer was absolute, the board was bound to see that sewage was not conveyed into the stream without first being freed from noxious matter, & the board must be restrained by injunction from cutting off pltfs.' drain.—AINLEY v. KIRKHEATON LOCAL BOARD (1891), 60 L. 306. ——.]—In an action by a landowner against a corpn., the urban sanitary authority for the borough of D., for an injunction to restrain them from discharging or allowing to be discharged sewage upon his lands from the sewers vested in them so as to cause a nuisance, defts. set up a prescriptive right based on the presumption of a lost grant by pltf.'s predecessors in title to trustees for the benefit of the inhabitants of the borough to drain all sewage from any tenements built or to be built within the borough, & to discharge the same on pltf.'s lands. This claim of right failed. It was proved, however, that there were a number of houses in the borough in respect of which prescriptive rights had been acquired to pass sewage into & along the sewers, & that there were other houses the connections of which with the sewers had been made with the consent or by the acquiescence of defts.:—Held: a householder has an absolute right under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 21, to connect his drains with a sewer, subject only to the regulations prescribed by the local authority in whom the sewer is vested as to the manner in which the connections are to be made, & therefore an injunction could not be granted to restrain defts. from allowing any future connections to be made with their sewers.—BROWN v. DUNSTABLE CORPN., [1899] 2 Ch. 378; 68 L. 308. —— Prescriptive right.] — Pltf., the owner of land bounded by a stream, into which was discharged a sewer within the district of a rural sanitary authority, alleged that the sewer was vested in the sanitary authority, that the sewer was being used not only by persons who had a prescriptive right to discharge their drains into it, but by persons who had no such right, & that such user had become a public & private nuisance, which was constantly increasing. He prayed an injunction to restrain defts. from causing or permitting the sewage of the district to be conveyed through the sewer into the stream, other than sewage so conveyed by prescriptive right before the commencement of the action. It was in evidence that defts. had been endeavouring ever since the passing of Public Health Act, 1872 (c. 79), to provide a system of drainage for the district, but hitherto without success :—Held : assuming the above allegations, which defts. denied, to be true, pltf. had no right to an injunction. Inasmuch as defts. could not prevent owners with prescriptive rights from using the sewer, & could not stop up the sewer as against them.

The vesting of the sewers in the local authority gives them a very limited right of ownership . . . the vesting is not an absolute right of ownership but a modified & limited right of ownership, & it does not in my opinion give them a right to stop up the sewer (JESSEL, M.R.).—A.-G v. DORKING UNION (1882), 20 Ch. 310. —— ——.]—The provision of Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 13, that all existing & future sewers within the district of a local authority, subject to the exceptions therein mentioned, " shall vest in & be under the control of such local authority " does not make the sewers absolutely theirs so as to render them to all intents & purposes the same as if they were private owners of the sewers.

An action was brought against a sanitary authority to restrain the pollution of a ditch running through the main street of a town past pltf.'s lands into the sea. The ditch was covered over as it passed through the town, but was afterwards an open stream, & had been for many years seriously polluted. Pltf. claimed an injunction to restrain defts., as the owners of the covered part of the ditch & as the sanitary authority of the district, from permitting any sewage or other noxious matter to come on to her lands or into her part of the ditch. In 1877 the attention of defts. was called to the condition of the houses in two new streets, & they required the owners of those houses to improve their drains. The owners accordingly ran two drains down the two streets & made communications with the main sewer. These drains were made for the purpose of carrying off surface water, & were not connected with any surface water & were not connected with any privies, but in addition to the surface water the slops of the houses were allowed to be thrown down the drains. In 1885, in consequence of a complaint made to defts., notices were directed to be served upon the occupiers to divert all polluting matter from the sewer, & the inspector of nuisances was ordered to inspect all drains entering into the main sewer. The notices so served were all effective in causing an abatement of the nuisance except four. Subsequent directions of defts. as to cleansing the sewer were duly carried out, the effect of which was to diminish the pollution of it to some extent. The defence was, that defendants had done everything in their power to prevent any nuisance from being occasioned to pltf. or her property ; & that they were not responsible for the nuisance :—Held : defts. had been diligent, & had done all they could to abate the nuisance ; & it was almost inevitable that some prescriptive rights of drainage should have been acquired, with which defts. had no authority to interfere. Therefore defts. had no right physically to disconnect the drains so as to abate the nuisance ; & the action could not be maintained.—OGILVIE v. BLYTHING UNION RURAL SANITARY AUTHORITY (1891), 65 L. 312. —— Notice of intention.] — A drain, which ran along a highway past a village & emptied itself into a disused quarry at the foot of pltf.'s garden, had been used for many years to carry surface water, & also slop water, from some of the houses adjoining the highway. This drain was originally a highway drain, but was now a sewer vested in the rural sanitary authority under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55). The solid sewage matter from the houses in the village drained into cesspools ; but recently one of the householders, purporting to act under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 21, without any notice to the local authority, constructed a water-closet & discharged the solid sewage matter therefrom into this drain by means of a communication which he already had with the drain for the purpose of carrying off his slop water, therefore causing a nuisance to pltf. :—Held : he ought to be restrained by injunction on the ground that the conditions imposed by Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 21, as to notice & otherwise had not been complied with.—GRAHAM v. WROUGHTON, [1901] 2 Ch. 451 ; 70 L. 316. —— ——.]—Where a local authority for valuable consideration permit an owner of premises without their district to connect the drains of those premises with their sewers, or where they themselves make the connection, without imposing terms upon the owner under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 22, they cannot afterwards impose terms for the continuance of that connection.

A residential property, of which the dwelling-house was without the district of pltf. authority, but the lodge was within the district, had a system of drainage whereby the drainage from the house went into a cesspool with an overflow drain leading to a pond, the cesspool & pond being both within pltfs.' district, & the drainage from the lodge joined the overflow drain before it reached the pond. The pond having become a nuisance, the owner, at the instance of pltfs., connected the overflow drain by a 9-inch pipe direct with a storm-water drain in pltfs.' district. Pltfs., without consulting the owner, subsequently connected the storm-water drain with a soil sewer, & ultimately connected the 9-inch pipe direct with the sewer. Deft. having bought the property, pltfs. required him to agree terms under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 22, for the continuance of this connection or provide other means for the disposal of his sewage, & claimed an injunction to restrain him from permitting the drainage of that part of his property which was without their district to discharge into their sewers until terms were settled:—Held: the connection having been already made, sect. 22 no longer applied, & pltfs.' claim failed.—EAST BARNET VALLEY URBAN COUNCIL v. STALLARD, [1909] 2 Ch. 555; 79 L. Pltf., who was the owner of a house & garden adjoining the private passage, desired to drain his house into the sewer, &, at his request the local authority connected a drain, which pltf. had put down on his own property, with the sewer by means of a short length of pipe laid in the passage:—Held: although the sewer was vested in the local authority, & although Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 21, gives the owner of premises a right to cause his drains to empty into the sewers of the local authority neither the local authority nor pltf. was entitled, without defts.' consent, to lay the connecting pipe in their property.—WOOD v. EALING TENANTS, LTD., [1907] 2 K. 321. Prescriptive right of discharge into sewer—Absence of—Necessity for consent of sanitary authority.]—Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), vested in pltfs. an open sewer, called the Stamford Brook. Metropolis Management (Amendment) Act, 1862 (c. 102), s. 61, enacted that no person should make or branch any sewer or drain, or make any opening into any sewer vested in pltfs., without their previous consent in writing; provided that any person might, with such consent, at his own expense, make or branch any drain into any such sewer in such manner as pltfs. should direct. After the passing of Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), pltfs. allowed four old cottages belonging to defts. on land just outside the metropolitan area & bounded by the Stamford Brook, to continue to drain through an 18-inch brick drain into Stamford Brook. They subsequently, at the request of defts., who paid half the cost, covered in the brook & converted it into a main sewer. When they did this, they made a drain-eye in the newly covered in sewer as a communication for the 18-inch drain.

Defts. afterwards built other cottages on the same land, & claimed the right to use the 18-inch drain for the purpose of draining the new cottages through the communication into the sewer:—Held: as defts. had not proved any prescriptive right to use the 18-inch drain for the sewage of the new cottages, nor obtained the written consent of pltfs. for that purpose under Metropolis Management (Amendment) Act, 1862 (c. 102), s. 61, they were not entitled to use the 18-inch drain for any other purposes than those for which they used it when the brook was covered in.—METROPOLITAN BOARD OF WORKS v. LONDON & NORTH WESTERN RY. 323. Connection effected by sanitary authority—Recovery of expenses.]—A builder made drains from certain houses in a road to the boundary of the forecourts of the houses. The road was what is known as a builder's road, made & coated with gravel & ballasted. The footpaths were made with gravel & kerbed with granite. The houses on either side of the road were not completed & inhabited, but the road was open for carriages & foot passengers. It was lighted by the parish, but had not been taken to as a public road. The vestry made branches from the drains into a sewer which belonged to them & ran along the centre of the road, & for that purpose they opened the road & footway. The builder declined to repay to the vestry the expenses incurred thereby:—Held: the vestry had opened a part of the pavement of a street & were entitled under Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 78, to recover the expenses incurred by them.—ST. The Council required Vigers Bros. to take out a licence from them under Metropolis Management (Amendment) Act, 1862 (c. 102), s. 68, but Vigers Bros. declined to do so, as the Council demanded a rent of £10 a year. The Council then took proceedings against Vigers Bros. under s. 68 for having placed an obstruction over the sewer without the previous consent in writing of the Council. It was admitted that the sewer was not endangered by the stacks of timber, & that the stacks could be removed in half a day if access to the sewer was required:—Held: the stacks of timber constituted an obstruction or encroachment upon or over the sewer within Metropolis Management Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 102), s. 68.—VIGERS BROTHERS v. LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL, [1919] 1 K. The power of getting such materials is given by sect. 54, the surveyor making such satisfaction for the materials, & also for the damage done to such lands as shall be settled & ascertained by order of the justices at a special session for the highways. There was no defined channel on deft.'s land into which the water so discharged could flow. Deft. having stopped up the pipe, an injunction was claimed to restrain him from continuing the obstruction. On appeal from the refusal of the injunction :—Held : the fact that the pipe was not connected with a defined channel into which the water conveyed by it could flow did not prevent its being a drain within Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), s. 67 ; & in view of the length of time during which the drain had been used, a legal origin ought to be presumed for the right claimed of passing water through the drain on to deft.'s land.—A.-G. v. COPELAND, [1902] 1 K. The control of the irrigation system was by pltf., & her rights thereto were preserved by a local Improvement Act passed in 1855. Pltf. alleged that surface water from deft.'s sewers had been diverted from the L. brook pipe at chamber C by means of an overflow pipe inserted at a date which according to the evidence was uncertain, into the irrigation gutter, & a ditch between the two fields so as to flood her fields. pltf.'s land or to any construction thereon, but under Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), they claimed the right to prevent interference with or obstruction of the overflow pipe:—Held: the overflow pipe to the irrigation gutter was not such a gutter or drain as was included in Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), s. 67, & pltf. was entitled to obstruct or interfere with it as her own property without defts.' consent or authority. The right of sewage irrigation still remaining exercisable the Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 327, prevented the local authority who were exercising the powers of a highway authority under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 144, from controlling pltf. in her user of the irrigation gutter.—BALLARD v. LEEK URBAN COUNCIL (1917), 87 L. The sheriff having, under this precept summoned a jury from the hundred of Calceworth, in the county in May, 1819, they made a presentment, that the Boy Grift was ruinous, & that certain works therein were absolutely necessary; & that lands in the occupation of various persons, including pltf., received benefit or avoided danger by the drainage, & ought, therefore, to bear the charges thereof; & they accordingly, assessed a rate which the comrs. confirmed. No appeal was made against this presentment or assessment, & in 1823, a special law of sewers was enrolled, containing the presentment & from that time to the year 1837, all rates were made under such law. No level had been taken or survey made since 1819, nor had any presentment of a jury been made since 1837. m. —— ——.]—The intention of the legislature would appear to be to

s. 62, it was enacted that every engine, machine, building & work, to be erected & made by the trustees under the powers of the Act, & all engines, machinery, buildings, etc., sewers, drains, watercourses, etc., & other works already made & provided for the drainage of the Bourn North Fen & Dyke Fen, & which should be thereafter made & provided for such purpose, & the right to & property in them, should be & they were thereby vested in the trustees; with a proviso, that nothing in the Act contained should extend to or affect any engines, machinery, etc., sewers, drains, watercourses, etc., & other works already made, or then existing or provided for the drainage of the said fens, & then vested in & under the control of certain comrs., appointed under a former Inclosure & Drainage Act, called the Black Sluice Comrs. Local Act, s. 64, enacted that it should be lawful for the trustees upon any land in Bourn North Fen & Dyke Fen, not vested in the Black Sluice Comrs., to make & erect a steam engine, with all proper machinery, with proper & convenient buildings, sluices, pits & other necessary works; & to make & from time to time maintain, repair & improve, as occasion might require the sluices, bridges, cuts, sewers, & other works, already or thereafter to be made in, upon & through the said fens, for effectually draining the same, out of the funds, to be raised under the authority of the Act, & making compensation for damage:—Held: the trustees had no power, under this Act, to widen a drain under the control of Black Sluice Comrs., from the width of 18 to 40 feet, for the purpose of a reservoir, to bring a sufficient supply of water to their steam engine, thereby cutting away upwards of 3 acres of the land vested in the comrs. although such widening was itself an improvement of the drainage; & they had no power to make any reservoir on the land vested in the comrs., although the making of a reservoir was necessary to the proper working of the engine for the purposes of the drainage, & none could be made without cutting into some of the banks or drains vested in the comrs.—SMITH v. BELL (1842), 10 M. & W. 378; 2 Ry. & Can. Cas. 877; 152 E. R. 517.

373. Power to alter course of river.]—(1) Comrs. of sewers cannot make a new river.

(2) When an old sewer is newly to be made or cleansed, some small alteration in respect of the natural change of the current may be made.

(3) When an old wall by the violence of the water, is broken down, another wall, in case of inevitable necessity, may be made to defend the level. But if the danger may be avoided by the reparation of the old wall, a new one ought not to be erected.

(4) None can be taxed towards the repairs, etc., but those who have prejudice or damage, etc., by the nuisance, & who may have benefit by the repair.—ISLE OF ELY CASE (1609), 10 Co. Rep. 141 a; 77 E. R. 1139.

374. Power to open new sewer or drain.]—Statutory power was given to the corpn. of R. to make sewers, provided that it should not be lawful for them to cause any new sewer to open or drain into the river R. at any point above the Town Mill Weir. The corpn. had made a large new sewer nearly on the site of an old sewer, but larger & deeper, which would open a drain into the river above the weir, & several drains had been made into it which could not have been made in the old sewer. Pltfs., who were the owners of the Town Mill Weir, filed this bill for relief, & an injunction was granted to restrain defts. from allowing any additional sewer to be opened into the new sewer, or any other river sewer to open or drain into the river R. at any point above the Town Mill Weir.—HOLT v. ROCHDALE CORPN. (1870), L. R. 10 Eq. 354; 39 L. J. Ch. 761; 23 L. T. 43; 35 J. P. 6; 18 W. R. 885.

375. Power to deposit mud on adjoining banks.]—By a local Act, s. 32, the mud & earth taken out of the rivers cleansed by the Middle Level Comrs. under the powers of that Act, is where the rivers are embanked, to be laid in such place as the Comrs. think proper, &, where the rivers are not embanked, to be laid impartially on the banks of the rivers, as the Comrs. direct, or in some cases on one of such banks.

By s. 59 of the same Act the Comrs. have power to enter upon the lands of any person adjoining or near the rivers, & to take or dig earth therefrom, & to do such other acts as may be necessary to carry the purposes of the Act into effect, making satisfaction to the parties thereby injured:—Held: in the case of a river that was not embanked, s. 32 gave the Comrs. no compulsory powers for the deposit of mud & earth, but s. 59 gave them such powers subject to the obligation to pay compensation.—Re MOULTON & MIDDLE LEVEL COMRS. 376. Power to remove obstruction to drainage.]—Defts., who were the owners of an ancient water mill, in order to obtain the maximum of power from their water wheel, raised the height of their mill dam or weir by placing on the top thereof an enhancement of cement, concrete, plank & posts. Pltfs., who were constituted under an Order under the Land Drainage Act, 1861 (c. 133), & Land Drainage Act, 1918 (c. 17), & had the powers of Comrs. of Sewers, & were the drainage board within whose district the mill, mill pond & river at that point were situated, called upon defts. to remove the enhancement. Defts. refused to do so. Pltfs. thereupon, without first obtaining & finding of two justices at petty sessions that the removal of the enhancement was necessary for the effectual drainage of land within the jurisdiction of the Comrs. & without having compensation for the injury caused by such removal assessed as provided by Land Drainage Act, 1861 (c. 133), ss. 17–20, entered upon deft.'s land on several occasions & themselves removed the enhancement, but defts. on each occasion restored it. Pltfs., without having made an order under Land Drainage Act, 1861 (c. 133), s. 33, then brought an action against defts., alleging that the enhancement held back empower Comrs. of Sewers to act in making ordinary repairs, or in any sudden emergency, without consultation with or the consent of the proprietors, but that these proprietors should not be taxed for the construction of any new work not immediately essential to the preservation or interests of common property, without their consent to such work being first obtained. — BURNHAM v. DAVISON (1884), 17 N. the water in the river causing the meadows adjacent thereto to be flooded & causing washouts in the banks & that it would interfere with the duty of pltfs. effectively to drain their district. Defts. pleaded that the statement of claim disclosed no cause of action, that the weir had existed at the same height for twenty years, & they counter-claimed damages for trespass. The jury found that defts. were not entitled to the depth of water in the mill pond which they claimed, but that they were entitled to a greater depth of water than pltfs. said :—Held : (1) Land Drainage Act, 1861 (c. 133), did not give pltfs. any right to go upon defts.' land & remove the enhancement to the weir without first obtaining a finding of the justices that its removal was necessary for the effectual drainage of pltfs.' district & having compensation assessed, as was provided by Land Drainage Act, 1861 (c. 133), ss. 17–20, nor had the pltfs. any right by Statute passed before 1861 or at common law, to go upon defts.' land & remove the obstructions, & therefore pltfs. had committed a trespass ; (2) Sewers Act, 1833 (c. 22), s. 47, did not vest the weir, or the banks, or the bed of the river, or the meadows adjacent thereto in pltfs. so as to give them proprietary rights therein, & therefore pltfs. had no right to maintain an action against defts. for a breach of such proprietary rights ; (3) neither Land Drainage Act, 1861 (c. 133), s. 16, nor any statute passed before 1861, conferred upon pltfs., as Comrs. of Sewers the right to bring an action, without any previous proceedings, to enforce the removal of an obstruction to the drainage of their district when such obstruction was a mill dam or weir, & further if Land Drainage Act, 1861 (c. 133), s. 16, did give a right to bring an action it was a right subject to the restrictions contained in Land Drainage Act, 1861 (c. 133), ss. 17–20.—SALISBURY & FORDINGBRIDGE DRAINAGE DISTRICT BOARD v. SOUTHERN TANNING CO. 378. Pollution of watercourses — Prohibition against fouling without consent of commissioners—Proviso exempting persons having legal right.]—A private Act of Parliament enacted that " No person shall without the consent of the comrs. . . . open any new drain or other work into any of the drainage works of the comrs. . . . & no person shall cause any filthy or unwholesome water, or washings of manufactories or mines, or other foul or poisonous liquid to flow into any watercourse within the jurisdiction of the comrs." & imposed penalties for the violation of the prohibitions. The sect. contained a proviso that " This sect. shall not apply to any person having a legal right to cause such water, washing, or liquid as aforesaid to flow into any existing river, stream, or watercourse." Before & at the time of the passing of the Act the sewage of a town flowed into a tidal river within the jurisdiction of the comrs. The urban sanitary authority proposed to remodel their system of drainage, & to make a new outfall into the river, in place of those previously existing :—Held : assuming the tidal river to be a watercourse within the Act, the case fell within the above-mentioned proviso, & the comrs. had no power to prevent the carrying out of the new drainage works. The exemption in the proviso is not to be restricted to the precise amount or manner of pollution going on at the time of the passing of the Act.—SOMERSETSHIRE DRAINAGE COMRS. v. BRIDGWATER CORPN. 379. Navigation cut — Whether " public or parish drain."]—The Eau Brink Cut had always been used for the drainage of a large tract of country, & as a public navigable river, in lieu of the former course of the river Ouse. There never had been any drain or ditch available for the purpose of conveying road materials, or leading to or near the said roads, unless the Eau Brink Cut was to be considered as such. The trustees had for many years used the cut for the conveyance of road materials without paying any toll :—Held : the Eau Brink Cut was not a drain within the meaning of the words " public or parish drain " in 4 Geo. 3, c. lv, s. 35.—COULTON v. AMBLER (1844), 13 M. & W. 403 ; 14 L. 380. Deepening drains on neighbouring lands—Sufficiency of notice & plans.] — A landowner entered upon the neighbouring land of pltfs., & began to deepen a natural watercourse running through it. On being remonstrated with he served notice on pltfs. under Land Drainage Act, 1861 (c. 133), of his intention to treat the watercourse as a drain, & to put a pipe underneath it ; & he sent a sectional plan with the notice. Pltfs. brought an action for damages for trespass & to restrain deft. from proceeding on the notice :—Held : the notice & plan were insufficient ; under Land Drainage Act, 1861 (c. 133), the justices had no exclusive jurisdiction to decide as to the validity of the notice, but the High Ct. could restrain proceedings on an invalid notice.—HEDLEY v. BATES (1880), 13 Ch. The Comrs., however, made no claim to the ownership of the sandhills except in places where they had erected toolsheds & where they had executed works of a permanent character. Pltfs., as the owners of adjoining inlands, claimed to be the owners of the sandhills. The conveyance to them of the adjoining inlands made no mention of the sandhills, but they had exercised certain acts of ownership thereon:—Held: although the sandhills were under the "view, cognisance, or management" of the Comrs. of Sewers within the meaning of that expression in above Act, s. 47, that sect. did not vest the property in the sandhills in the Comrs.—NESBITT v. MABLETHORPE URBAN COUNCIL, [1918] 2 K. 388. Liability ratione tenuræ.]—A liability may exist at law to repair sea walls ratione tenuræ, even though the damage may be occasioned by tempest, without any default in the obligor.

To prove the liability of deft. to repair a sea wall ratione tenuræ, minutes of the Ct. of Sewers, commencing seventy years back, containing orders on the then holders of the estate to repair the wall in question, were held admissible.

Semble: such liability is only limited by the ability of the party liable, or the value of the lands granted.

A landowner may be liable, by prescription, to repair sea walls, though destroyed by extraordinary tempest. On presentment against such owner, for suffering the walls to be out of repair, it ought not, in point of law, to be left as the sole question for the jury, whether the walls were in a condition to resist ordinary weather & tides: but it is a question, to be determined on the evidence, whether the proprietor was bound to provide against the effects of ordinary tempests only, or of extraordinary ones also. 393. Necessity for notice by commissioners.]—A mtgor. not in actual possession, but in receipt of the rents & profits of lands charged with repair of a sea bank, is liable for default of reparation. Notwithstanding Sewers Act, 1833 (c. 22), s. 15, the Comrs. of Sewers, under Statute of Sewers, 1531 (c. 5), s. 3, have power to repair a sea bank, & fine the person whose lands are charged with the repairs, without giving him any notice; therefore a presentment which does not allege notice to repair, but states that the costs & charges of repairing amount to a certain sum, & a judgment thereon ordering that payment, are good.—R. v. BAKER (1867), L. 395. Construction of private Act.] — By a private inclosure Act, certain comrs. were required to make, appoint & stake out all "the public bridges, roads & highways" within a certain township, & also set out or appoint "such private ways or roads, hedges, fences, ditches, bridges, causeways, banks, sluices, drains, sewers, cloughs, etc., within the township as they should think convenient," the Act providing "that all such public roads, bridges, sewers & drains should be made, repaired, & kept in repair in such manner as the other public highways, bridges, sewers & drains within the township were by law to be repaired & kept in repair." The Act went on to provide that all such private ways, etc., should be supported & repaired by all or any of the proprietors of lands within the township in such manner as the comrs. should by their award appoint, & required the comrs. by their award to describe "all manner of public highways, bridges, sewers & drains," & all private ways, cloughs, banks, bridges, sewers & drains," within the inclosed lands. The comrs., by their award, appointed, amongst others, two public sewers, & directed that they should be kept in repair & preserved of a certain width & depth by the owners & proprietors of the inclosed lands according to an acreage rate. The owners & proprietors contributed to the repair of these two sewers during eighty years after the Act:—Held: a presentment that one of these sewers ought to be made of an increased gauge & repaired by the proprietors of the inclosed lands according to an acreage rate, without disclosing any liability upon the part of these owners ratione tenuræ, or by reason of benefit, was illegal, as the Act did not alter the law regulating the repair of public sewers, & the award, if it purported to do so, was ultra vires, & any one distrained upon in pursuance of the presentment might maintain trespass without appealing from the order of the comrs.—BIGLIN v. WYLIE (1867), 36 L. 396. Liability long asserted & acknowledged—Presumption of legal origin.]—Where the liability of a frontager to keep the sea wall on his land in repair at his sole expense has long been asserted, & has long been submitted to on his part, it will be presumed to have originated under a local custom or ratione tenuræ or in some other legal way, unless & until it is proved that it cannot have had a legal origin. If in order to presume a legal origin it is necessary to presume a grant from the Crown, the ct. will presume such a grant.—LONDON & NORTH WESTERN RY. CO. v. FOBBING LEVELS SEWERS COMRS. 397. Whether liable to repair bridge.] — By Somersetshire Drainage Act, 1877 (c. xxxvi), applts. exercised an exclusive jurisdiction over the arterial drainage of separate & distinct river valleys in Somersetshire, including the valley of the river Parrett. Resps. were a drainage district board & had exclusive jurisdiction over the non-arterial drainage of the lands in the district of the Parrett reaching to & including the Langport Bridge. That bridge had existed from early times & carried the high road connecting Exeter, Taunton, Bath, & other populous places. Before 1839 the bridge consisted of nine arches so constructed as to impede the flow of water down stream, & until 1839, the bridge & the roadway over it were repaired by the Langport corpn. In Mar. 1839, an agreement was made between that corpn. & the "company of Proprietors of the Parrett Navigation," a co. which was incorporated by the Parrett Navigation Act, 1836 (c. ci), hereinafter called "the co.," whereby the corpn. agreed to pay £500 towards the expenses to be incurred by the co. in building a new bridge over the Parrett. The co. erected the new bridge, & the money was duly paid. Parrett Navigation Act, 1839 (c. xxxvii), s. 16, empowered the co. to make & levy certain tolls on all goods carried to or through or beyond Langport Bridge if the co. pulled down the old bridge & rebuilt it with not more than three arches, so as to allow a freer & easier passage of the water & so as to give a carriageway & a footway of a certain width, provided that "after the completion of the bridge the co. shall at all times thenceforth, at their own costs & charges, keep the bridge & the roadway over the same in good & sufficient repair." By Somersetshire Drainage Act, 1877 (c. xxxvi), ss. 117, 118, the whole undertaking of the co., together with all its powers & liabilities, was transferred to applts., & by sect. 121 they were empowered to use the undertaking for the drainage of lands within their jurisdiction & to abandon the user of the undertaking for the purpose of navigation together with the power of levying tolls. By sect. 2, the expression " drainage work " was defined as including " all works which the comrs. or district boards have power to execute or acquire authority over under this Act." By sect. 32 the powers of the comrs. & of the district boards extended to " maintenance of existing works " & included the repairing of all bridges :—Held : the repair of the roadway over the bridge was not " drainage work " within the Act of 1877, & applts. were not entitled to recover the cost of repairing it from resps.—SOMERSETSHIRE DRAINAGE COMRS. v. LANGPORT DRAINAGE DISTRICT BOARD (1919), 89 L. 398. Duty to cleanse—" Drain, stream or watercourse "—Underground drain.]—Resp.'s land having been injured through the neglect of applt. to cleanse an underground drain running through his land, proceedings were taken under Land Drainage Act, 1847 (c. 38). An objection having been taken that Land Drainage Act, 1847 (c. 38), applied only to open watercourses, & that the proceedings should have been taken under Land Drainage Act, 1861 (c. 133), s. 3, by which compensation is payable to the person whose land is entered upon & opened for the purpose of making & cleansing drains :—Held : the words " drain, stream, or watercourse " include an underground drain, & proceedings in respect of injury arising from neglect to cleanse & scour such a drain were rightly taken under Land Drainage Act, 1847 (c. 38).—BOWES v. WATSON (1879), 42 L. 399. —— Breach of duty—Whether liable for damage to mill.]—Resp. was the owner of a water mill, & applt. was the occupier of adjacent land through or along which the water passed after it had gone over the mill wheel. A quantity of silt formed in the stream where it passed applt.'s land, & in consequence of applt. declining to cleanse & scour the channel at that point the water was penned back so as partially to submerge the mill wheel. Proceedings having been taken by resp. under Land Drainage Act, 1847 (c. 38) :—Held : the provisions of the Act were confined to injury done to the land itself, & did not apply where the injury complained of was injury to a mill.—FINCH v. BANNISTER, [1908] 2 K. 408. A notice stated that defts., who were contractors under the comrs., made, altered, etc., certain sewers, etc., running under, through, or adjoining, or near to pltf.'s house, in so negligent, incautious, unskilful, improvident, & improper a manner, that it fell down; & by the declaration & proof given, it appeared that the sewer did not run close to pltf.'s house, but close to five other houses adjoining thereto, & that the house was damaged, & fell in consequence of the fall of a stack of chimneys of one of those houses, which had been built on the arch of the sewer, & which had been insufficiently shored up by defts. during the continuance of the work:—Held: this notice sufficiently described the cause of action.—JONES v. BIRD (1822), 5 B. & Ald. 837; 1 Dow. & Ry. 409. —— Commissioners acting in bonâ fide performance of duty.]—In order to render comrs. acting in the bonâ fide performance of a public duty liable to an action for an injury to an individual resulting from an act so done by them, it must appear that they have been guilty of negligence or want of skill in the conduct of it.

In case against comrs. of sewers for an injury done to pltfs.' premises by the construction of an adjoining sewer, the cause was referred to an arbitrator, who found, that there were two modes of making a sewer practised in London, the one by what is called tunnelling, the other by what is called open cutting; that, in this case, a deep sewer could not be made either by the one method or the other without risk of damage to the adjoining buildings; that the amount of risk varied according to the nature of the soil, which here was of a nature to make the risk considerable; that the probability of damage accruing was in some degree less where the sewer was made by open cutting than by tunnelling; that the sewer was made by the mode of tunnelling, that the comrs., in directing it to be made, & in the making of it, were acting bonâ fide in the honest discharge of their duty as comrs.; that the sewer was fit & proper to be made for the convenient drainage of the city of London, & was made in a workmanlike, skilful, & proper manner in all respects, provided that the comrs. were justified in making it by the mode of tunnelling; & that, in consequence of the making of the sewer, pltf.'s house was damaged to a certain amount. It did not appear that pltfs. had had any notice of the progress of the work or of the mode of doing it:—Held: the comrs. were not responsible for the injury so occasioned.—GROCERS' CO. v. DONNE (1836), 3 Bing. 410. —— Works sanctioned by commissioners—Obstructing navigation.]—The Comrs. of Sewers having obstructed a watercourse which pltf. claimed a right to navigate made him an offer of compensation, which he refused, & sued for more. Defts., by their pleas, denied the right, & also the obstruction: after abortive attempts during four years to proceed with a reference of the action, the ct. refused the Comrs. leave to plead a third plea, which would defeat the action, unless the Comrs. renewed, & pltf. refused, the offer of compensation made at first.—MEDLEY v. PRITCHARD (1840), 6 Bing. By sect. 12 the Comrs. shall & may be sued in the name of their clerk. The Comrs. passed resolutions that their engineer should prepare specifications with a view to the performance of a contract for certain works, & that tenders should be invited for the same. Dispute between sewers board & local authority—Provision in Act referring to county court judge—Mandamus to hear & determine.]—By a local Act the main object of which was the diverting of the sewage of Brighton from the existing storm outfalls & carrying it to a distance from the town, it was enacted that "any dispute which might from time to time arise between the sewers board & any local authority with respect to carrying into effect the provisions of the Act or incidental thereto might, at the instance of either party, be referred to the judge for the time being of the Sussex county ct., who should hear & determine such dispute, & whose decision should be final & conclusive." A dispute having arisen between the sewers board & the Hove Comrs., one of the Local Authorities, with respect to the mode of carrying out the provisions of the Act, & the sewers board requiring it to be referred to the county ct. judge:—Held: the county ct. judge was bound to hear & determine the matter & that mandamus was the proper course to compel him to do so, & not a rule or order under County Courts Act, 1856 (c. 108), s. 43, this not being a matter within this ordinary jurisdiction, but a special duty imposed upon him by statute.—Re BRIGHTON SEWERS ACT (1882), 9 Q. By mandamus, reciting this clause, & that the money had been paid to the comrs., they were ordered to proceed to put the banks forthwith in a permanent state of stability & security, & to construct the forelands & slopes of the banks, as far as practicable, upon one uniform system. Return, that the comrs. had from time to time, at all times from the passing of the Act hitherto, proceeded to execute all such works " as should be, or were, from time to time deemed necessary, proper, or expedient for putting the banks in a permanent state of stability & security, & for constructing the forelands & slopes of the banks, as far as practicable, upon one uniform system " :—Held : an insufficient return, & a peremptory mandamus awarded.—R. v. OUZE BANK COMRS. months the proprietors of one-half of the area of the land to be rated declare their dissent, the comrs. shall take no further steps; but if no such declaration is made the comrs. may commence the work, & repay, out of the rates to be levied by them within the area, all expenses incurred. By s. 38, rates may be levied by the comrs. for defraying all costs incurred by them, & a rate levied for the purpose of defraying the expense of new works involving an expenditure of more than £1,000, shall be deemed to be a special rate, & a tax on the owners of property; but other rates shall be payable by the same persons in respect of the same property as they are now by law payable. By s. 67 all powers by the Act vested in comrs. of sewers may be exercised by a drainage board.

The drainage board for a district incurred expenses in making surveys & plans for certain proposed works. The estimates for the proposed works amounted to more than £1,000. The proprietors of one-half of the land dissented from the execution of these works, which were never carried out. The board made a general rate on the occupiers of land in the district, in order to pay for the expenses of the surveys & plans:—Held: the occupiers, & not the owners, were chargeable, under ss. 31 & 38, with these expenses; & the rate was properly made on the present value of the land.—GRIFFITHS v. LONGDON & ELDERSFIELD DRAINAGE BOARD (1871), L. 427. —— Money borrowed for drainage purposes.]—There is no rule of law which prohibits a retrospective rate. In every case of rating the question is, whether the Act under which a rate is made, either expressly or impliedly, prohibits such rate from being retrospective.

A public local Act for draining the lands of Holderness, in the East Riding of the county of York, contained no prohibition against a retrospective rate. The comr. under that Act borrowed money, on which interest became due, for the purposes of the works directed by the Act:—Held: a rate made to pay off the debt thus incurred, was under the provisions of that Act, a valid rate.—HARRISON v. STICKNEY (1848), 2 H. 429. —— —— Opposition to Parliamentary bill—Levy enforced by mandamus.] — If a bill depending before Parliament for the drainage of a district is likely to injure a neighbouring level, the comrs. of sewers for that level may legally incur costs in endeavouring to procure a rejection or modification of the bill; such opposition, if undertaken prudently & bonâ fide, being within Sewers Act, 1833 (c. 22), s. 16, a "litigation or controversy arising out of the duties imposed" on the comrs. by the Statutes of Sewers. Although the comrs might not be compellable by mandamus to oppose such bill, they may lay a gross rate, under Sewers Act, 1841 (c. 45), s. 1, to pay the expenses of a past bonâ fide opposition to such bill; the rate to be afterwards apportioned according to sect. 2, & a mandamus lies to compel them to make a rate, if they have no other fund, for repayment of costs incurred by their clerk under their authority in such opposition.—R. v. NORFOLK SEWERS COMRS. 430. Expenses arising from negligent exercise of powers—Compensation & damages.]—Where a local Act of Parliament incorporates comrs. for the execution of works, & confers on them rating powers for the purposes of the Act, the implication will be, unless the contrary clearly appear, that it is within their powers to levy a rate in order to provide for a liability arising through negligence in the execution of the works.

A drainage Act incorporated comrs., who were to take over certain existing & to execute certain new drainage works within their district.:—Held: the limitation of the amount to be expended in sect. 38 applied to the expenditure on & incident to the works themselves, not to liabilities to pay damages arising from negligence of the comrs.' servants in carrying out the works; & the comrs. had power under sects. 40 & 41 to make rates for the purpose of meeting such liabilities, although their capital expenditure had already reached the amount mentioned in sect. 38.—R. v. SELBY DAM DRAINAGE COMRS., [1892] 1 Q. Thus, where a case stated that the eastern wing of Somerset House was drained by the Board of Works, & had no communication with the common sewer running under the body of Somerset House, & being under the jurisdiction of the comrs., & that the buildings derived no benefit from that sewer, except the general advantage of being accessible, & of the approaches & neighbouring public ways being properly drained & cleansed: it was held that the occupiers of the eastern wing were rateable for the common sewer. Semble: in an action of trespass against the comrs. for levying a rate, if it appeared that they had jurisdiction, the ct. would not inquire whether the rate was proportioned to the benefit received from the sewage by the party rated.

The H. suspension-bridge over the Thames, in a metropolitan district, was built with approaches or roads under an Act of Parliament, & is open to the public on payment of tolls. The bridge itself drains directly into the river, but the approaches or roads now drain into a sewer made in 1854, but they were sufficiently drained before through a barrel-drain, which could still be used into the river. A sewer rate having been assessed on the bridge & the approaches, the bridge co. appealed, on the ground that the bridge, as distinct from the approaches, was entitled to exemption as deriving no benefit from the sewer:—Held: though the bridge did not derive any direct or immediate benefit from the sewer, a property such as the bridge & roads did derive "the general benefit & advantage of being accessible, & of its approaches & neighbouring public ways being properly drained & cleansed" within the principle of Soady v. Wilson, No. 445, ante, &, consequently, on the authority of that case, the property would

451. —— —— ——.]—R. v. ESSEX SEWERS COMRS., No. 385, ante.

452. —— —— ——.]—(1) A. was a frontager in a level on the Essex shore of the Thames under the jurisdiction of Comrs. of Sewers. An ancient sea wall protected the level against incursions of the sea. There was evidence proving a prescriptive liability on the frontagers in the level to maintain & repair the portions of this wall respectively fronting their lands. Part of the wall in front of A.'s land was destroyed by an extraordinary storm & high tide. This part of the wall was previously in good repair & in a proper condition to resist the flow of ordinary tides & the force of ordinary storms:—Held: in the absence of evidence that the prescriptive liability of the frontagers extended to the repair of damage caused by extraordinary violence of the sea, the liability to repair the damage thus caused to the wall fell not upon A. but upon the whole of the level.

(2) The presentment of a jury at a ct. of sewers in 1861 found that the then owner of A.'s land was bound by reason of his tenure to repair a portion of the sea wall fronting the land so as to prevent the influx of the waters. In 1881–1882 the Comrs. of Sewers made orders upon A. as the owner of the land to repair this portion of the wall, it having been destroyed by the aforesaid extraordinary storm & high tide. These orders were made "upon reading the presentment" of 1861. One of the Comrs. who made the orders was personally interested as an owner of lands within the level:—Held: the orders were bad & must be quashed: (a) because Sewers Act, 1833 (c. 22), s. 13, which enables orders to be made upon a previous presentment does not authorise an order upon a person who has become owner of the land since the presentment; (b) because the presentment being only of the ordinary liability did not justify an order to make good damage caused by an extraordinary storm; (3) if the Comrs. had made the orders under the powers of Land Drainage Act, 1861 (c. 133), s. 33, they must themselves have found as a fact A.'s liability; if they had exercised such a jurisdiction they would have been acting judicially, & in that case the orders would have been invalidated by the fact that one of the Comrs. was disqualified by reason of interest.—FOBBING SEWERS COMRS. v. R. 456. —— —— Owners of undamaged portion.] — Prior to 1853, a sea wall had been constructed to protect the C. level against incursions of the tide, but that sea wall did not extend along the entire front of the level. There was a gap about half a mile wide in front of the C. & R. moors. The sea wall for the protection of the land lying to the east & west of these two moors, was turned round inland northward. The tide came over the two moors, & was kept from the two parts of the level which lay to the east & west of the moors by these side or wing walls. The moors were waste land subject to certain rights of pasture. In 1853, the moors were inclosed under the provisions of Enclosure Act, 1845 (c. 118), & by the award they were apportioned among the persons entitled to rights of common on them, & it was thereby provided that the owners should, amongst other things, construct & maintain a sea wall in the gap. The owners of the enclosures constructed a sea wall accordingly, & thenceforth there was a continuous defence against the incursions of the tide throughout the whole length of the C. level. In 1903, there occurred an extraordinary flood & tempest which seriously damaged large portions of the old wall lying to the west of the new wall constructed under the enclosure award. The Comrs. of Sewers made a rate to cover the costs of the repair of the sea wall so damaged:—Held: the owners of the enclosures were liable to the rate; inasmuch as at the time when the damage was done the enclosed land received benefit from the old walls, & it was immaterial that those walls as originally constructed were of no benefit to that land.—BAKER v. PARRY (1905), 3 L. Owing to financial & other difficulties the comrs. ceased to carry on drainage operations in 1919. In 1926 they levied a rate upon defts. as occupiers of mines in their area. 452. —— —— ——.]—(1) A. was a frontager in a level on the Essex shore of the Thames under the jurisdiction of Comrs. of Sewers. An ancient sea wall protected the level against incursions of the sea. There was evidence proving a prescriptive liability on the frontagers in the level to maintain & repair the portions of this wall respectively fronting their lands. Part of the wall in front of A.'s land was destroyed by an extraordinary storm & high tide. This part of the wall was previously in good repair & in a proper condition to resist the flow of ordinary tides & the force of ordinary storms:—Held: in the absence of evidence that the prescriptive liability of the frontagers extended to the repair of damage caused by extraordinary violence of the sea, the liability to repair the damage thus caused to the wall fell not upon A. but upon the whole of the level.

(2) The presentment of a jury at a ct. of sewers in 1861 found that the then owner of A.'s land was bound by reason of his tenure to repair a portion of the sea wall fronting the land so as to prevent the influx of the waters. In 1881–1882 the Comrs. of Sewers made orders upon A. as the owner of the land to repair this portion of the wall, it having been destroyed by the aforesaid extraordinary storm & high tide. These orders were made "upon reading the presentment" of 1861. One of the Comrs. who made the orders was personally interested as an owner of lands within the level:—Held: the orders were bad & must be quashed: (a) because Sewers Act, 1833 (c. 22), s. 13, which enables orders to be made upon a previous presentment does not authorise an order upon a person who has become owner of the land since the presentment; (b) because the presentment being only of the ordinary liability did not justify an order to make good damage caused by an extraordinary storm; (3) if the Comrs. had made the orders under the powers of Land Drainage Act, 1861 (c. 133), s. 33, they must themselves have found as a fact A.'s liability; if they had exercised such a jurisdiction they would have been acting judicially, & in that case the orders would have been invalidated by the fact that one of the Comrs. was disqualified by reason of interest.—FOBBING SEWERS COMRS. v. R. 456. —— —— Owners of undamaged portion.]—Prior to 1853, a sea wall had been constructed to protect the C. level against incursions of the tide, but that sea wall did not extend along the entire front of the level. There was a gap about half a mile wide in front of the C. & R. moors. The sea wall for the protection of the land lying to the east & west of these two moors, was turned round inland northward. The tide came over the two moors, & was kept from the two parts of the level which lay to the east & west of the moors by these side or wing walls. The moors were waste land subject to certain rights of pasture. In 1853, the moors were inclosed under the provisions of Enclosure Act, 1845 (c. 118), & by the award they were apportioned among the persons entitled to rights of common on them, & it was thereby provided that the owners should, amongst other things, construct & maintain a sea wall in the gap. The owners of the enclosures constructed a sea wall accordingly, & thenceforth there was a continuous defence against the incursions of the tide throughout the whole length of the C. level. In 1903, there occurred an extraordinary flood & tempest which seriously damaged large portions of the old wall lying to the west of the new wall constructed under the enclosure award. The Comrs. of Sewers made a rate to cover the costs of the repair of the sea wall so damaged:—Held: the owners of the enclosures were liable to the rate; inasmuch as at the time when the damage was done the enclosed land received benefit from the old walls, & it was immaterial that those walls as originally constructed were of no benefit to that land.—BAKER v. PARRY (1905), 3 L. Owing to financial & other difficulties the comrs. ceased to carry on drainage operations in 1919. In 1926 they levied a rate upon defts. as occupiers of mines in their area. The building, & its fittings up, furniture, etc., were vested in the justices of Westminster. The powers of the comrs. of sewers were expressly saved. The building derived benefit from the sewage. The governor resided in one part of the building ; but no one resided in the other part, except the persons confined there, & the turnkey & matron, who were required by law to reside, & whose duty it was to take care of the prisoners. drainage, to the benefit derived from such expenditure "by the several parts of the metropolis affected thereby." By Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 181, the money necessary to discharge the liabilities of the Metropolitan Comrs. of Sewers is to be raised in like manner as the expenses of the Board. The Metropolitan Comrs. of Sewers had, whilst acting under the expired statute, 11 & 12 Vict. c. 112, borrowed £200,000, out of which they had expended £67,000 on drainage works for the benefit of the Surrey & Kent Sewerage District, which had been formed by them under the powers given in 11 & 12 Vict. c. 112, s. 34, & comprised nineteen parishes & parts of parishes. On the passing of Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), the Metropolitan Board had to provide for the payment of the liabilities of the Metropolitan Comrs. of Sewers, &, acting under Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), ss. 171, 181, they apportioned the £67,000 amongst the parishes in the Surrey & Kent Sewerage District, according to the rateable value of the property in those parishes respectively, & not according to the proportion of the sum expended in them, or to the benefit derived by them respectively from the expenditure, & made a rate accordingly upon each parish :—Held : the rate so made was valid.—PEW v. METROPOLITAN BOARD OF WORKS (1865), 6 B. & S. 235 ; 5 New Rep. 508 ; 34 L. ## SECT. 1.—NATURE OF OFFICE.

1. Origin of office.]—CHUNE v. PYOT (1616), 1 Roll. Rep. 237; 81 E. R. 458.

2. Royal office.]—PELHAM'S CASE (1583), Sav. 43; 123 E. R. 1002.

Annotation :—Refd. R. v. Larwood (1694), 1 Ld. Raym. 29.

3. Grant of part of duties to another invalid.]—If the King grants to another the office of the clerk of the county ct., or shire clerk of the county of S., with all fees, etc., for life; this is void against the sheriff of S., when he is made sheriff; because the county ct., & the entering of all proceedings in it, are inseparably incident to the office of sheriff; & this is the ct. of the sheriff, though the suitors are judges: & the sheriff is the immediate officer to the ct., & ought to answer for the records of the ct., if they are embezzled.

So the custody of the gaols of counties is inseparable from the sheriff; & therefore if the King grants the custody of such gaol to another, it is void; for the sheriff being the immediate officer of the King's Cts., & answerable for escapes, & subject to amerciaments, ought to have the appointment of such gaolers for whom he will answer.—MITTON'S CASE (1584), 4 Co. Rep. 32 b; 76 E. R. 965.

4. Precedence of sheriff during office.]—CHUNE v. PYOT (1616), 1 Roll. Rep. 237; 81 E. R. 458.

5. ——.]—The law gives to the justices of assize during their circuits the aid & control of the high sheriff of each county, as to whom it is laid down, that, "as the keeper of the King's peace, both by common law & special commission, he is the first man in the County, & superior in rank to any nobleman therein during his office.

The practice in this respect is in accordance with the law: for, "the high sheriffs themselves of every shire are in person to attend upon the justices or judges of the assize & gaol & delivery in, & through, their circuits, & shall give their attendance for the due executing of the commandments & progresses of the said judges in matters concerning the execution of their offices & ministration of justice," etc. (Dalton's Sheriff, p. 369) (WILLES, J.).—Ex p. FERNANDEZ (1861), 10 C. Rep. 300; 87 E. R. 1253.

28. —— ——.]—A freeman of the city of London is elected one of the sheriffs, but refusing to take the office, on account of his being a Dissenter, & as such not having received the sacrament according to the rites of the Church of England, within a year before his election, an action is brought against him for the penalty incurred by such refusal, & a judgment recovered. The action being brought in the Sheriffs' Ct., a writ of error was brought in the Ct. of Hustings, where the judgment was affirmed. But deft. having obtained a special commission of errors, the judge's delegates reversed both the judgments; & on a writ of error in Parliament, this judgment of reversal was affirmed.—HARRISON v. EVANS (1767), 3 Bro. 38. Duty on death of high-sheriff.]—An under-sheriff, if the sheriff should die during his year of office, is responsible, under Estreats Act, 1716 (c. 15), s. 8, for the execution of the office of sheriff until another is appointed, to the same extent as if he were the sheriff; &, consequently, an action for money had & received will lie against him or his exors. to recover the proceeds of a sale of goods taken in execution under a writ of fi. fa. before the death of the sheriff.—GLOUCESTERSHIRE BANKING CO. v. EDWARDS (1887), 20 Q. 39. Proof of office—Acting under-sheriff signing as under-sheriff.]—Jury Act, 1825 (c. 50), s. 46, imposes penalties upon "the sheriff or under-sheriff," for an improper insertion or omission of names from the special jury list. In an action for such penalties, the declaration describing deft. as being "the acting under-sheriff," it was proved that deft. was the person who in the county acted as under-sheriff, so far as receiving writs, making returns, appearing in public, etc.; but that a Mr. T. was the appointed under-sheriff, pursuant to Lighting & Watching Act, 1833 (c. 90), s. 5. It also appeared that deft. had on one occasion signed his name as under-sheriff, although he stated at the same time that he was not the under-sheriff, but that Mr. T. was, & in an affidavit had stated himself to be the acting under-sheriff:—Held: there was no evidence of deft.'s liability, & pltf. was properly nonsuited.—WILLIAMS v. THOMAS (1849), 4 Exch. 479; 7 Dow. & L. 177; 19 L. 51. Nature of office.]—If a sheriff's officer takes money from a person colore officii for anything done in the course of his duty, & to which money he is not entitled by law, an action lies against the sheriff, though there is no evidence of the money coming to his hands. The office of a sheriff's bailiff is particular & personal, & there can be no such thing as partnership between two such officers, so as that the act of one shall bind the other; beside, the principle of law in torts is against it.—JONS v. PERCHARD (1794), 2 Esp. 507; 170 E. R. 436, N. P.

52. Who may be appointed—Infant.]—Semble: an infant cannot be a bailiff or sheriff's officer.—CUCKSON v. WINTER (1828), 2 Man. & Ry. K. B. 313: 6 L. J. O. S. K. B. 309.

55. —— Validity.]—It is not contrary to the policy of the law, that the sheriff should stipulate with his bailiff, as the price of the latter's office, that he shall indemnify the sheriff against the responsible consequences of his, the sheriff's, office, arising out of the bailiff's acts, proper as well as improper.

Covenant by bailiff, & sureties, to sheriff, on his appointment, to give regular instructions for return of all process, to pay the costs of defending any action, or prosecuting or opposing any motion, concerning any matter, wherein the bailiff should act, to indemnify the sheriff & under-sheriff from all damages, loss, costs, & charges, sustained, etc., by reason of any return to any writ, etc., made by the sheriff at the request of the bailiff; & from & against all actions, costs, etc., for or by reason of the executing, not executing, returning, or not returning, or misreturning, of any writ, etc., or any other cause whatsoever, occasioned by the act or default of the bailiff. A warrant on a writ of fi. fa., was directed to the bailiff, which the sheriff was ruled to return; several applications were made by the sheriff to the ct., with a view to his obtaining time & indemnity, in which expenses were incurred; & finally, as correctly instructed by the bailiff, he returned nulla bona, for which an action was brought against the sheriff, & costs were incurred therein:—Held: the bailiff & sureties were liable to remunerate & indemnify the sheriff; the covenant extending, not only to the consequences of wrongful, but of rightful acts of the bailiff.—FAREBROTHER v. WORSLEY (1831), 1 Cr. & J. 549; 1 Tyr. 424; 9 L. 83. Right to act as returning officer — Constituency comprising more than one borough—Sheriff of county borough having smaller population.]—The borough of Carmarthen was by a Charter of 1764, created a county of itself. From early times it had been a parliamentary borough & down to 1832 had returned a Member to Parliament. By the Representation of the People Act, 1832 (c. 45), the borough of Llanelly was appointed to share with the borough of Carmarthen in the election of a Member of Parliament for Carmarthen. The writ for the election of such member continued as before to be directed to the sheriff of the county of the town of Carmarthen. In 1913, Llanelly became a municipal borough. According to the last census, taken in 1911, the population of Llanelly exceeded in number that of Carmarthen, & upon that ground the town clerk of Llanelly claimed to be entitled to receive from the revising barristers for Carmarthen & Llanelly the revised lists of voters for the boroughs contending that under Redistribution of Seats Act, 1885 (c. 23), s. 12 (4), the mayor of Llanelly was the person to whom the writs of election ought to be directed:—Held: by the common law the sheriff of Carmarthen had the right to act as returning officer, his right was not taken away by Municipal Corporations Act, 1882 (c. 50), s. 244 & Redistribution of Seats Act, 1885 (c. 23), s. 12 (4), inasmuch as they did not apply to boroughs which were counties of themselves & consequently the town clerk of Carmarthen was the person entitled to receive the revised lists of voters.—R. v. RICHARDS, R. v. WILLIAMS, [1915] 3 K. 85. Nature of sheriff's duty.]—The duty of a sheriff in respect of executing the writs of fi. fa., etc., sent to him by the clerk of the peace after each quarter sessions, with the roll of fines & amerciaments for the purpose of levying the same, is not purely ministerial; & as it is his duty to attend sessions, he is not necessarily free from blame if he executes a writ according to the roll in a case in which a fine has been paid.—WILDES v. MORRIS (1852), 22 L. J. M. C. 4; 20 L. T. O. S. 140; 16 Jur. 1115; sub nom. MORRIS v. WILDES, 17 J. P. 119; sub nom. WYLES v. MORRIS, 1 W. R. 65.

86. ——.]—(1) The sheriff had, in his office, two writs issued at different times against B.: one at the suit of A., which, for certain reasons of form, was invalid; the other at the suit of L., which was a valid writ. Warrants were granted on both writs; B. was arrested on A.'s writ. B. applied for his discharge, & on the hearing before a judge, the sheriff claimed to detain B. on L.'s writ. The judge ordered his discharge. In an action for negligence brought by L. against the sheriff, the direction given to the jury was, that there had been no arrest at L.'s suit; that the judge's order discharging B. from custody was no justification to the sheriff; that whether the sheriff had acted negligently in arresting B. on A.'s invalid writ was a question of fact, & also that the jury must say whether the sheriff knew, or without negligence might have known that

93. Notice discharging bailiff — Return of warrant to sheriff—Indorsement "not to be returned"—Effect of.]—A. & B. both place writs against C. in the hands of the sheriff, who issues warrants thereon to bailiffs, specially named by pltf. in each action. On the change of sheriffs, the warrants are returned, & A. not being satisfied with the conduct of his bailiff, intimates to him, that his warrant shall not be renewed to him, whereupon he returns it to the sheriff, indorsed "not to be returned to me." B.'s warrant is reissued to his former bailiff, who, shortly after, takes C. thereunder. Search was then made, according to the custom of the sheriff's office, for any detainers that there might be against C.; & A.'s writ being overlooked through the inadvertence of the clerk, he is discharged at once. Not long after this, A. applies for a new warrant against C. which being granted, he is taken at his suit, & compelled to find bail, etc., for which he brings an action of trespass against the sheriff: —Held: (1) the sheriff is liable, for he was bound to execute the writ in the first instance, by detaining C. when arrested at the suit of B., & having voluntarily suffered him to go at large on that occasion; the subsequent arrest at the suit of A. is unjustifiable; (2) the notice from A. to the bailiff, & the endorsement on the warrant by that officer, on returning the writ to the office, did not amount either to an express or implied countermand of the writ; but the result of them was, that the sheriff was bound to take proceedings thereon as if no directions had been originally given with it.—BRYANT v. CARROLL (1839), 3 J. The sheriff's return of nulla bona was filed on showing cause against the rule, & the rule was made absolute; & it now appeared that while the writs of fi. fa. were in the hands of the sheriff, the Devon & Somerset co. were in possession of office furniture of the value of about £150, which might have been taken in execution: —Held: the jurisdiction of the ct. to order the sci. fa. to issue arose as soon as it was shown that the co.'s property on which execution might be levied was not sufficient to satisfy the judgment, & the ct. would then exercise its discretion & order the sci. fa. to issue or not, according as the available property of the co. was inconsiderable or considerable, in comparison with the judgment-debt.

114. Time for return — Writ returnable "immediately."]—(1) Where a writ is made returnable "immediately," the meaning is, that it should be returned immediately after execution of the writ, allowing a reasonable time for such execution. Therefore, where a writ of attachment issued on June 22, & the suit became abated on June 24, & was not revived till the following Nov., the return of the writ in Jan. was held sufficient.

128. —— Directed to "sheriff" — Return by "late sheriff."]—In order to obtain an attachment against the "late" sheriff, for not returning a writ, it is not sufficient that the order was directed to "the sheriff," although the "late sheriff" had returned the writ, but not in due time.—R. v. CORNWALL SHERIFF (1839), 7 Dowl. 600; 2 Will. Woll. & H. 62; 3 Jur. 386.

129. —— Obtained more than six months after expiration of office—Waiver by agent of under-sheriff.]—A sheriff having been ruled to return a writ more than six months after the expiration of his office, the London agent of his under-sheriff obtained an order for a week's further time to return the writ:—Held: obtaining the rule after six months was merely an irregularity, & such irregularity was waived by obtaining the order for further time to return the writ.—WALKER v. DAVIS (1858), 3 H. & N. 374; 157 E. 130. Right to call for return — Conduct disentitling party.]—There are many cases in which pltf. is not entitled to call for the return of a writ; as where he has taken an assignment of the bail bond, or has otherwise so conducted himself as to show that he is contented. Thus, when he has acted as his own bailiff, or when, after an arrest, he has met deft. & accepted a sum in discharge of all claims, can he call for a return of the writ? Put the case of the bkpcy. of deft., & pltf. becoming his assignee, could he sue the sheriff & obtain a separate compensation? The merits are the same here (TINDAL, C.J.).—HEPWORTH v. SANDERSON (1831), 8 Bing. 19; 1 Moo. & S. 64; 1 L. J. C. P. 15; 131 E. R. 307.

Annotation:—Refd. Jackson v. Taylor (1836), 2 Har. & W. 135.

131. —— When writ void.] — A writ set aside for irregularity may be good as to the sheriff & all persons acting under him, & bad as to the persons who sued it out. What, then, does the act of pltf., in ruling the sheriff to return the writ, amount to? It amounts simply to this: that although the writ may be void for some purposes, yet pltf. may, if he desire it, make use of it for others. For instance, he may wish to question the propriety of the sheriff's charges for executing it, & may have ruled him to return it, in order to ground an application to the ct., or perhaps to bring an action for extortion. It is enough to say, that he may make some use of a void writ.

The filing of record is not the act of the party, but it is the mode in which the sheriff makes his return. He returns the writ into the proper office, where it is filed of record as a matter of course. The filing of record does not affirm the existence of a void writ (PARKE, B.).—JONES v. WILLIAMS (1841), 8 M. & W. 349; 9 Dowl. 702; 10 L. J. Ex. 253; 5 Jur. 895; 151 E. R. 1073.

The premises, however, in which the seizure was made consisted of two houses held under separate landlords, & besides the sum so paid for rent to one of such landlords, there was owing for rent to the other landlord a sum exceeding the value of the proceeds. In an action against the sheriff for a false return:—Held: the sheriff was not estopped by his return from showing that such rent was due, & by reason of 8 Ann. c. 14, requiring the sheriff to pay one year's rent out of the proceeds pltf. had sustained no damage by the false return, & had, therefore, no cause of action.—LEVY v. HALE (1859), 29 L. The sheriff remained on the premises until dismissed by pltf.'s attorney, &, being directed to return the writ, made a return, that he had seized goods of debtor & kept them until ordered by pltf.'s attorney to withdraw from possession. To an action brought by pltf. against the sheriff for not levying under the writ, & for a false return, deft. pleaded (inter alia) nulla bona, & at the trial, set up, as his sole defence the bill of sale, which the jury found to be valid; & a verdict was entered for deft.:—Held: actual damage was necessary to support the action; deft. was not estopped by his return from proving that the goods seized did not belong to the debtor; as they were found to be the property of the assignee they were not available for sale under the execution; & therefore pltf. had sustained no damage from the conduct of the sheriff, & could not maintain the action.

I am of opinion that this rule must be discharged. The action is founded on tort, for a wrong done by the sheriff in making this return, which was in one sense a false return. Now the rule respecting such actions against a sheriff is, that, not only must a wrongful act have been committed, but damage must have been thereby caused, in order to entitle the person injured to maintain the action (COCKBURN, C.J.).—STIMSON v. FARNHAM (1871), L. It was held that this was substantially a civil proceeding, & the arrest therefore illegal under Sunday Observance Act, 1677 (c. 7), s. 6, & that the detention was not made legal by the delivery to the keeper, after the arrest, of another warrant upon the same conviction. These two warrants having been returned to a habeas corpus ad subjiciendum, the ct. received an affidavit that the arrest took place on a Sunday, & ordered prisoner to be discharged from custody under the two warrants. Before the keeper received the order, another warrant was delivered to him for the imprisonment of E., upon his conviction by two justices for not delivering to the council, acting as paving comrs. under a local Act, accounts, books, etc.:—Held: this, being substantially a proceeding by the same parties, did not warrant the detention.

In an action against the Sheriff of Surrey & the keeper of the county prison for causing a debtor to be confined in a cell on the felons' side of the gaol, it appeared that defts. had so done in consequence of an anonymous communication said to have been made to one of the turnkeys, that pltf. meditated an escape; & that the matter had been made known to the visiting magistrates, who declined to interfere; but it did not appear that any investigation had been made as to the source whence the information was obtained:—Held: there was no sufficient proof of reasonable or probable cause on the part of defts. to justify the course they adopted.—FURNIVAL v. STRINGER (1834), as reported in 4 Moo. & S. 578.

288. —— ——.]—By Debtors' Imprisonment Act, 1758 (c. 28), s. 1, it is enacted, that no sheriff's officer shall carry any person arrested by him to gaol within twenty-four hours from the time of such arrest, unless such person shall refuse to be carried to some safe & convenient dwelling-house of his own nomination or appointment; & by sect. 12 a penalty is imposed on any officer offending against the Act. In an action brought for the penalty, for taking a party to gaol within twenty-four hours, contrary to the statute:—Held: the officer who made the arrest, ought to have required the party arrested to nominate some convenient dwelling-house to be taken to; for the latter could not be said to have refused till the proposal had been made; & a mere omission by him to nominate a place, did not justify carrying him immediately to gaol.—SIMPSON v. RENTON (1833), 5 B. & Ad. 35; 2 Nev. & M. 289. —— ——.]—In an action against the sheriff, for a penalty under Debtors' Imprisonment Act, 1758 (c. 28), ss. 1, 12, for taking pltf., when arrested, within twenty-four hours, to prison, pltf. not having refused to be carried to a safe & convenient dwelling-house of her own nomination, deft. pleaded that he informed pltf. that she might be carried to a safe, etc.; that pltf. thereupon consented to be carried to the dwelling-house of L.; deft. carried her thither accordingly, & offered to permit her to remain there for the rest of the twenty-four hours, but pltf. then requested to be taken to prison. On motion for judgment non obstante veredicto:—Held: (1) a good plea, the circumstances being equivalent to a refusal; (2) issue being joined on the allegation of the consent to go to L.'s house, the consent to be proved was not such consent as a person would give who had the option of being at large; but the question was, whether pltf. consented to go to the particular house, as a person would consent, who was obliged to be in confinement somewhere; (3) the fact of the sheriff suggesting L.'s house, did not prevent the consent from being free, within the meaning of the issue. The sheriff is entitled to exercise a reasonable discretion in determining whether a house, nominated by prisoner under arrest, as a safe & convenient dwelling-house, be a safe house for the custody of prisoner.

(4) If prisoner request to be taken to a house for the purpose only of consulting a person there, that is not a nomination of a house within the statute.—SILK v. HUMPHERY (1836), 4 Ad. & El. 959; 111 E. R. 1044.

290. —— Nomination by defendant of own dwelling-house.]—(1) Carrying an arrested party to public-houses within twenty-four hours from the arrest without lodging him in gaol within that time, is not a beginning to "carry to gaol" within Debtors' Imprisonment Act, 1758 (c. 28), s. 1.

(2) Semble: if a party is arrested in mesne process, & when called on by the officer to name a safe, etc., dwelling-house to which he will be carried, names his own house, to which the officer objects pursuant to sect. 1 of the Act, he cannot be carried to any tavern, etc., with his free consent.—SUMMERS v. MOSELEY (1834), 2 Cr. & M. 477; 4 Tyr. 158; 3 L. 291. —— Refusal to nominate safe & convenient dwelling-house—What amounts to refusal—Necessity for proposal.]—A sheriff's warrant against pltf., directed to deft., a sheriff's officer, & W. was delivered to deft. to be executed. Deft. employed L., an assistant, to make the arrest, who accordingly arrested pltf., & told pltf. "he must go with him to the Granby," to which pltf. replied "very well." He was then taken to a public-house called the Granby & kept there till the following morning, when L. delivered pltf. to W. who, it appeared was also an assistant to deft., & who, within twenty-four hours from the time of the arrest, put pltf. on a coach for the purpose of taking him to prison, & took him there accordingly. At the time that pltf. was put upon the coach, deft. was present, & saw pltf. on the coach. In an action on Debtors' Imprisonment Act, 1758 (c. 28), to recover penalties for taking pltf. to the tavern without his free & voluntary consent, & for taking him to prison within twenty-four hours:—Held: (1) deft. was liable for the act of W. in taking pltf. to prison within the twenty-four hours; (2) to justify the officer in taking him to the tavern, the consent of the party arrested to be taken there was necessary, & the mere submission or acquiescence of pltf. to the dictation of the officer was insufficient; (3) the beginning to carry, & not the arrival at the prison, is to be considered as the carrying to prison; (4) the neglect of the party arrested to nominate some safe & convenient dwelling-house to which he might be taken, did not justify the officer in taking pltf. to prison within twenty-four hours, & it was the duty of the officer to call upon the party to nominate some house to which he might be taken, & pltf. could not be said to have "refused to be carried to some safe & convenient dwelling-house" until the officer had asked him to nominate.—DEWHIRST v. PEARSON (1833), 1 Cr. & M. 365; 1 Dowl. 664; 3 Tyr. 242; 2 L. 294. —— —— ——.]—Under Debtors' Imprisonment Act, 1758 (c. 28), s. 1, a sheriff's officer making an arrest must not carry the party to prison within twenty-four hours, unless such party has first been informed that he may, if he will, be carried to a safe & convenient dwelling-house of his own nomination, & has refused to nominate. It is not a refusal, if the party, without being so informed, asks if he may go to a spunging-house, &, being told that there are none, makes no further proposal, & suffers himself to be taken to one of two prisons previously named by the officer. In an action for penalties under the statute, the declaration alleging that pltf. was carried to Whitecross Street prison without his free & voluntary consent, although he did not refuse, etc., to which not guilty was pleaded; the evidence being that pltf. went to prison under the circumstances above stated; & there being proof that he went there for the purpose of enabling himself to recover damages; particularly, that he had told his creditor after the arrest that if an arrangement were declined he would go to Whitecross Street prison:—Held: the judge directed the jury properly on the issue joined, by desiring them to say whether pltf. went to prison for want of being informed of his right to go to a house of his own nomination, or whether he elected, for purposes of his own, to go to prison.—GORDON v. LAURIE (1846), 9 Q. (2) While the officer was illegally carrying the party to gaol within twenty-four hours after arrest, the prisoner, to avoid being taken to gaol, consented to go to a tavern, & there draw up an agreement for the purpose of getting discharged:—Held: a consent so obtained was not free & voluntary within Debtors' Imprisonment Act, 1758 (c. 28), & the plea was properly negatived by the jury.—BARSHAM v. BULLOCK (1839), 10 Ad. & El. 23; 2 Per. & Dav. 241; 113 E. 328. Warrant altered by officer.]—S., a sheriff's officer, arrested deft., not then having any warrant, & took him to a lock-up house. At that time there was a warrant in the sheriff's office, directed to another officer, to arrest deft. at the suit of pltf. S. went to the sheriff's office, & representing that he had an opportunity of arresting deft., got his own name inserted in that warrant. It appeared that this was in accordance with the practice of the office, & it was sworn that the sheriff was ignorant that deft. had at that time been already arrested. 332. J. Q. B. 42 ; 6 Jur. 130.

333. Where sheriff not liable to action.] — No doubt the sheriff is protected if he acts in obedience to the writ ; that is so whether there is a judgment or not, or whether the judgment is irregular & capable of being set aside, with that the sheriff has no concern, he is justified if he obeys the writ. But it seems to me that there is no sense in the distinction that a man not liable to arrest has a right to his discharge if the sheriff is in fault, but has no right if the sheriff is not blameable. Why should a person, who is not liable to arrest, but has been arrested under circumstances which do not render the sheriff liable to an action be subject to a detainer any more than a person who has been arrested under circumstances which render the sheriff responsible ? The illegality of the custody is the same in both cases ; the man ought not to have been arrested, & is entitled to his discharge (POLLOCK, C.B.).—OCKFORD v. FRESTON, CHAPMAN v. FRESTON (1861), 6 H. & N. 466 ; 30 L. PART V. SECT. 6, SUB-SECT. 8.—B. (f) iv.

m. General rule.]—If a solr. be bonâ fide attending a motion or other proceeding in ct. for his client, he is privileged from arrest.—Re FITTON, LONGFIELD v. CARPENTER (1839), 1 I. Eq. R. 349.—IR.

592 i. Going to & from court—Deviation—To attend professional business.]—O, a party & solr. in the cause, having been in attendance in the master's office upon a summons in the cause, left the office & was arrested on a ca. sa. near C., which was out of the direction of & beyond his residence :—Held : the deviation was such as to deprive him of his privilege from arrest. The question in such cases always is whether the person arrested was at the time of his arrest bonâ fide engaged in the business he was called on to execute.—Re OWEN, HERON v. STOKES (1844), 6 I. Eq. R. 125.—IR.

n. —— ——.] — A solr. was arrested on the direct way from the Taxing Master's office, but it appeared that before his arrest he had deviated considerably from the direct way :—Held : he was not entitled to be discharged.—WALSH v. WILSON (1851), 1 I. Ch. R. 610.—IR.

o. —— Country solicitor temporarily in town—Arrest at lodgings after leaving master's office.]—Solr.'s privilege from arrest not extended to a case where it took place at the town lodgings of a country solr., on his return from the master's office & while preparing certain documents by him directed in the cause; although the cause of his coming to & remaining in town, was his necessary attendance at his client's business in ct.—FOOTE'S CASE (1824), 2 Mol. 530.—IR.

p. ——.] — A solr. is privileged from arrest, going to, tarrying at, & returning from ct. whilst he is in attendance on a motion or cause.—Re O'NEILL (1837), Sau. & Sc. 78.—IR.

q. Where personal attendance not essential.]—There is no distinction in respect to privilege whether the business of his client in which he was engaged was such as required the personal attendance of the solr. or might be equally answered by his clerk.—FITZMAURICE'S CASE (1828), 1 Mol. 512.—IR.

r. ——.]—The privilege of a solr. from arrest is not confined to those cases only in which his personal presence is indispensable.—Re KEANE (1837), Sau. & Sc. 81.—IR.

689. Proof of issue of warrant to officer.]—In an action of trespass against the sheriff for the wrongful act of a bailiff, it is not enough, in order to affect the sheriff, to prove him a general bailiff, & that he had given a bond of indemnity to the sheriff as such together with proving the copy of the warrant under which he entered & seized pltf.'s goods; but the privity between such bailiff & the sheriff must be established in the particular transaction on the best evidence, by proving the original warrant of execution directed by the sheriff to such bailiff; or at least by proving such notice to produce it as will, in case of non-production, let in the secondary evidence of its contents.

The admission of the under-sheriff may affect the high sheriff, because he is the general officer of the sheriff: but I do not think that the bailiff is his general officer. The bailiff gives a bond to execute such warrants as shall be directed to him; when a warrant is granted to him, he becomes the special officer of the sheriff; & I have always understood it to be necessary to produce the warrant to show that relation between them (LAWRENCE, J.).—DRAKE v. SIKES (1797), 7 Term Rep. 113; 101 E. 691. ——.]—In an action against the sheriff for an escape, the regular way of connecting him with his officer, so as to make him responsible for his act, is by the production of the warrant. But any recognition by the sheriff, that the officer acted under his authority, will dispense with the necessity of producing it. An indorsement upon the writ, returned & filed by the sheriff, of the name of the officer, is not sufficient to make the sheriff responsible, without proving that his name was written upon it by the authority, or with the privity of the sheriff. The writ, with the sheriff's return upon it, is only evidence against him, to the extent of his duty under it, & it is no part of his duty to annex the officer's name to the return.—HILL v. LEIGH (1816), Holt, N. The bailiff quits possession, & afterwards returns & sells, & the sheriff pays the proceeds to A. Before the sale C. issues a fi. fa against B, to which the sheriff returns nulla bona. C. recovers the value of the goods from the sheriff in an action for a false return. A. is liable to the sheriff for the damages & costs recovered by C., unless he can show that the sheriff was conusant of the misconduct, or that the action is brought for the benefit of the bailiff.

The general rule undoubtedly is, that the act of the officer is, in point of law, the act of the sheriff, but I think the present case forms an exception to that rule. Where the misconduct of the officer is produced by the act of the execution creditor, it is not competent for the latter to say that the act of the officer, committed in violation of his duty to the sheriff, & induced by the execution creditor, is the act of the sheriff (BAYLEY, J.).—CROWDER v. LONG (1828), 8 B. & C. 598; 3 Man. & Ry. The goods being afterwards taken from the purchaser by persons claiming a prior right, he sued the sheriff for the purchase-money, as for money had & received to his use on failure of consideration:—Held: he could not recover in that action, for the act of the officer was done by him as officer to the coroner, & the sheriff was not connected with it so as to make him liable.—SARJEANT v. COWAN (1833), 1 Cr. & M. 491; 2 L. On May 9, pltf. paid all expenses up to that date, & then wrote to the officer in possession. "Provided deft. satisfies all future claims the sale may be postponed." The officer remained in possession till Sept., &, after a peremptory order from pltf., sold the goods on Sept. 20. On being ruled, the sheriff returned, on Oct. 24, that after deducting various sums for expenses (among which was an item of £20 possession money), he had £34 ready to pay to pltf. Pltf. applied to the ct. to order the sheriff to pay him the sum of £20 possession money, as well as the sum of £34:—Held: pltf. by his communications with, & directions to the officer, did not thereby discharge the sheriff, & the proper course to enforce the sheriff's liability was by summary application, & not by an action for money had & received.—BOTTEN v. TOMLINSON (1847), 16 L. 717. —— ——.]—Debtor whose goods had been seized under a writ of fi. fa. persuaded the officer executing the writ not to advertise the sale, & himself interfered to prevent the issue of the bills; on the day of sale his agent induced the officer to postpone it to a later hour, & on the officer's proceeding to sell, directed him to sell also for a writ that day lodged with him, & under which he could not otherwise have then sold. In the management of the sale the officer conducted himself negligently in not properly lotting the goods, & they consequently sold at an undervalue:—Held: the above facts did not constitute the officer the agent of execution debtor, so as to absolve the sheriff from liability for the officer's negligence in the conduct of the sale.—WRIGHT v. CHILD (1866), L. The sheriff received a capias ad respondendum against D., at the suit of R. Two days afterwards he received from F. an alias capias also against D., at the suit of F. F. wrote the following letter to the under-sheriff: "Myself v. D. I inclose you a writ herein, & shall feel obliged by your granting a warrant hereon, directed to M. & B. I shall write to B. in a day or two." The sheriff issued a warrant to M., on the writ at the suit of R., who arrested D., on that warrant, took a bail bond from him & then allowed him to go at large:—Held: the letter was an appointment by F. of M. & B. to be his special bailiffs; the sheriff was not therefore liable to an action for an escape; & although the actual arrest in the one action was a constructive arrest in the other, yet the sheriff was not liable, as the agency of B. & M. to pltf. did not cease when the arrest was made.—FORD v. LECHE (1837), 6 Ad. & El. 699; 1 Nev. & P. SUB-SECT. 12.—PROPERTY IN GOODS AFTER SEIZURE.

See EXECUTION, Vol. XXI., pp. 507, 508, Nos. 817–831.

759. General rule—Property remains in execution debtor.]—If the property were not in debtor after seizure, I would ask, where the property would be till sale? Judgment creditor could not bring trespass or trover, most certainly: the sheriff alone can do this; & in case of a felony, the sheriff only can state that the property is in him, which shows, that the general property is not altered by the seizure of the sheriff. Debtor may, after seizure, pay the debt in satisfaction of the execution, & thereby bar the sale; & where he pays the debt in that stage of the proceeding, he requires no bill of sale from the sheriff to retransfer the property, which can only be attributable to this reason, that, in fact, the property never had been completely taken out of him (GRAHAM, B.).—R. v. GILES (1820), 8 Price, 293; 146 E. 761. —— ——.]—Judgment was entered upon a warrant of attorney given by two joint traders, & a fi. fa. issued, returnable on May 2. On May 1, the sheriff's officer received from defts. the money directed to be levied. On May 2, one of them committed an act of bkpcy., & the other on May 5. On May 11, a commission of bkpt. issued, & on May 19, the sheriff paid over the money to execution creditor. In an action by the assignees: —Held: he was entitled to retain it, not being creditor having a security at the time of the bkpcy.

After seizure, & before sale, the sheriff has a special property in the goods, but debtor has the general property; up to that time, therefore, the debt is not extinguished, & judgment creditor has a security for his debt. But after sale, or payment of the money, the sheriff becomes debtor, & the original debt is extinguished (BAYLEY, J.).—MORLAND v. PELLATT (1828), 8 B. & C. 722; 3 Man. & Ry. K. B. 411; 7 L. J. O. 762. —— ——.]—(1) That the general property in goods, even after seizure, remains in debtor, is clear from this, that debtor may, after seizure, by payment suspend the sale & stay the execution.

(2) It is undoubtedly true, that the sheriff does, by the seizure, acquire a special property in the goods. He may maintain trespass or trover for them (PATTESON, J.).—GILES v. GROVER (1832), g. Revocation of covenant to indemnify—Effect of where sheriff assents to revocation.]—A sheriff, having two executions against the same person, accepted a covenant from the execution creditors on one of the writs, indemnifying him against any seizure & sale by him. Before anything was done on either writ, defts. countermanded & revoked their covenant, with the assent of the sheriff, who afterwards, however, went on, sold, & was damnified:—Held: these facts formed a good equitable defence to an action on the covenant, for the agreement to indemnify merely created a conditional liability, from which defts. were at liberty to withdraw before any act done or damage sustained, especially where the withdrawal was with the sheriff's assent. —GRANGE v. MILLS (1869), 19 C. 763. —— —— Right of debtor to sell.]—Deft. having obtained a judgment against T. lodged a fi. fa. with the deputy, under C. L. P. Act, 1833 (c. 42), s. 20, of the sheriff, & the deputy immediately issued a warrant to an officer. Afterwards, on the same day, a vesting order was made, under Judgments Act, 1838 (c. 110), s. 37, by the Insolvent Debtors' Ct. transferring the estate of T. The assignee under this order took possession of T.'s property; & afterwards the sheriff's officer seized it:—Held: the seizure was proper.

764. —— —— ——.]—The owner of goods which are in the custody of the sheriff under a fi. fa. may make a valid sale & delivery of possession of them to a purchaser.

It is, I think, a fallacy to say that goods are in the possession of the sheriff. They are in the custody of the law, & of the sheriff's officer as representing the law. That is possession undoubtedly as against a wrongdoer who might seek to divest the sheriff's officer of any portion of the goods seized; but I think it is custody only so far as the real owner of the goods is concerned. Until the goods are sold under the authority of the law they are in the possession virtually of the owner, at all events as respects every one except the execution creditor or the officer of the law who holds the goods under the fi. fa. (COCKBURN, C.J.).—UNION BANK OF LONDON v. LENANTON (1878), 3 C. 780. ——.]—Where a convict is sentenced to death, the proper officer, in default of express order, to do execution, is the officer who has the legal custody of such convict. Supposing that the ct. may authorise another officer to execute, such authority must be given by express order, directing the second officer to execute, & sufficiently explicit for the first officer to be bound by it to surrender the custody to the second. It is not equivalent to such an order, if the clerk of assize, by direction of the judge who has tried & sentenced the convict, shows to the sheriff of the county in which the offence was committed, not having the custody, a calendar signed by the judge, with a minute of the sentence in the margin, at the same time delivering him a copy. Although the sheriff acknowledge the receipt of the calendar, & at the same time refuse to execute. 815. Fees allowed by order of court—Additional to poundage.]—29 Eliz. c. 4, against extortion by sheriffs, etc., is not repealed by 7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 55; but the only effect of the latter statute is to exempt from the penalties of 29 Eliz. c. 4, the cases in which the sheriff shall take no larger fees than shall be allowed by order of the judges. Therefore, in a declaration on the case for extortion, on 29 Eliz. c. 4, it is not necessary to negative deft.'s having had authority under 7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 55, to take the fees complained of; but that is matter of defence, which should come by way of plea.

The ct. would not take judicial notice that an order of the judges, allowing a scale of fees under 7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 55, was made before the time of the alleged extortion stated in the declaration.—PILKINGTON v. COOKE (1847), 16 M. & W. 615; 4 Dow. & L. 347; 17 L. The sheriff was then in possession of the goods under process of an earlier date, but not to the knowledge of the high bailiff, as the county ct. judge found. The high bailiff on taking possession received from the judgment debtors a document which stated that in consideration of his withdrawing from possession they authorised him at any time to re-enter & undertook not to remove any of the goods. withdrew from possession. The execution was ineffective, except in so far as it brought the parties into negotiation with a view to a settlement. The high bailiff made an application to the county court judge under C. C. R., 1903–1923, Ord. 27, r. 1, for an order for payment by the judgment creditors of his fees for keeping possession from May 15 to June 12. The county ct. judge found that the high bailiff did not withdraw from possession, but was in actual possession & not in mere walking possession of the goods, & made an order for payment of the fees claimed. On appeal:—Held: (1) the possession of the sheriff did not in the circumstances prevent the high bailiff from taking & keeping such possession as would entitle him to claim fees; (2) there was evidence to support the finding of the county ct. judge that the high bailiff did not withdraw from possession, but kept actual as distinct from walking possession; & therefore the order of the county ct. judge was right.—A. SUB-SECT. 2.—CROWN PROCESS.

835. Poundage on debts collected.]—Sheriffs are not entitled to poundage on money seized in the Crown debtor's possession under an extent against him. Nor on money paid by the sureties of the Crown debtor who has been arrested on the Crown process in order to obtain the release of his person. Sheriffs have no authority, under the extent, as sheriffs to collect debts due to the Crown debtor; & if they receive such debts, they cannot make it the ground of a charge for poundage on the amount.—R. v. VILLERS (1820), 8 Price, 587; 146 E. 837. Writ of extent—On contract debt—Poundage not leviable—Payable by the Crown.]—If on an extent issuing against the acceptors of bills of exchange drawn in favour of officers of the Crown, for public money received by the drawers, & remitted by them to the acceptor, for the purpose of levying the Crown's debts, the drawers, after the execution of that process, take up & pay the bills, they are not liable to pay the sheriff's poundage on the levy. The sheriff, having retained, under an order of the ct., a sum for poundage in his hands, will be ordered to restore it to the assignees of bkpt. acceptor's estate:—Semble: whatever be due to the sheriff for poundage, in such a case, should be paid by the Crown.—R. v. FREME (1815), 2 Price, 58; 146 E. R. 21.

838. —— ——.]—A sheriff has no right to levy costs or poundage or any incidental expenses, under an extent, on a simple contract debt; neither has he, or the attorney for prosecutor of the extent, a right to receive any such costs, etc., under a compromise in consideration of staying proceedings, from deft., under duress of a seizure, if more than the precise debt be received by them under such circumstances they will be ordered to restore it, & to pay the costs of an application to the ct., for the purpose of obtaining the order.—R. v. TIDMARSH (1817), 5 Price, 189; 146 E. R. 578.

839. —— Levy of costs.]—The sheriff is entitled to levy costs under 43 Geo. 3, c. 99, on an extent against a collector of taxes; & the sheriff's poundage is included in the word charges, & may be levied; & it is payable where the money is paid in, before a venditioni exponas has issued, although that proceeding is obviated thereby. But if the agent in the country, of the solrs. for taxes, have received any money from deft. as costs under the levy, or the sheriff have taken anything for extra costs as bailiff's fees & keeping possession, the ct. will order them to refund.—R. v. COLLINGRIDGE (1816), 3 Price, 280; 146 E. 854. —— Clerical error of clerk.]—Sheriffs Act, 1887 (c. 55), s. 29, imposes a penalty on any sheriff's officer "who takes or demands any money or reward under any pretext whatever other than the fees or sums allowed by the Act or any other Act."

Owing to a clerical error made by their clerk, a firm of sheriff's officers claimed & received from an execution debtor a sum for poundage which was £3 in excess of the amount due:—Held: the sheriff's officers were not liable in a penalty under Sheriff's Act, 1887 (c. 55), s. 29, in respect of such unintentional overcharge.—SHOPPEE v. NATHAN & Co., [1892] 1 Q. B. 245; 8 T. L. R. 209.

Annotation:—Reld. Lee v. Dangar, Grant, [1892] 2 Q. B. 337.

855. —— Account greatly reduced on taxation.]—Sheriffs Act, 1887 (c. 55), s. 29 (2) (b), imposes a penalty upon a sheriff, under-sheriff, bailiff, or officer of a sheriff, if he "takes or demands any money or reward under any pretext whatever other than the fees or sums allowed by or in pursuance of this or any other Act."

The sheriff's officer having sold the goods as above mentioned was requested to send in to the official receiver an account of the sale. He sent in an account, in which he claimed to deduct from the proceeds of the sale certain amounts in respect of his charges of the execution. The official receiver thereupon requested him to bring in his charges for taxation, & he accordingly took steps to obtain taxation of such charges, which, however, was resisted by the trustee in bkpcy., who had in the meantime brought an action for the penalty. Ultimately he obtained an order for taxation of his charges, & upon such taxation a large amount of the sum claimed in his account was taxed off as excessive:—Held: (1) under the circumstances of the case the claim made by the sheriff's officer in his account must be taken to have been made subject to & in contemplation of taxation, & did not amount to a taking or demand of money within the above-mentioned enactment, so as to render the sheriff's officer liable to a penalty.

(2) I am not prepared to say that the words of sect. 29 of the Act [Sheriffs Act, 1887 (c. 55)] are confined to demands made before the execution of the writ. I am disposed to think that there might be a wrongful demand within the sect. if a fraudulent or exorbitant demand was made after the execution of the writ (ESHER, M.R.).—WOOLFORD'S ESTATE TRUSTEE v. LEVY, [1892] 1 Q. 856. —— Mistake of sheriff's officer.]—Sheriffs Act, 1887 (c. 55), s. 29, imposes a penalty of £200 upon any sheriff's officer who (inter alia) "takes or demands any money or reward under any pretext whatever, other than the fees or sums allowed by or in pursuance of this or any other Act," or "is guilty of any offence against or breach of the provisions of this Act":—Held: the penalty is inflicted for the doing of an act in the nature of a criminal offence; to constitute such an offence there must be a mens rea; & a sheriff's officer is not liable to the penalty if he makes an overcharge by mistake.

It was argued that the seizure of the property of a debtor, without sale or valuation, is a satisfaction of the debt, to the extent of the amount which the property ultimately produces. It seems to me that that proposition is almost on the face of it untenable. How property can be a satisfaction of a debt at a time when the value of the property is not ascertained, but is to be ascertained at a subsequent time, is extremely difficult for me to understand. The proposition involves still greater difficulties, for it is obvious that, if the seizure of property is a satisfaction of the debt, the sheriff can go on further, & therefore he can never realise, he can never sell, & the satisfaction would be for an amount which could never be ascertained. The proposition is, therefore, absolutely absurd as a working proposition for the business of life (FRY, L.J.).—LEE v. DANGAR, GRANT & Co., [1892] 2 Q. B. 337; 61 L. J. Q. B. 780; 66 L. It seems that the taking a remuneration by the sheriff for extra expenses incurred in dividing the property of bkpt. into lots, at his request in order that it might sell to greater advantage, does not amount to an extortion.—STEVENS v. ROTHWELL (1821), 3 Brod. & Bing. 143; 129 E. ## SECT. 1.—THE MERCHANT SHIPPING ACTS.

SUB-SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

Use of illegal colours.]—See ADMIRALTY, Vol. I., p. 156, Nos. 642–644.

Concealment of British character.] — See ADMIRALTY, Vol. I., p. 156, Nos. 646, 647.

SUB-SECT. 2.—APPLICATION TO FOREIGNERS.

1. Vessel within jurisdiction.]—(1) A foreigner cannot set up against a British vessel with which she has been in collision the British vessel's violation of British statute law on the high seas, for the foreigner could not herself be bound by it, as it is beyond the power of the legislature to make rules applicable to foreign vessels beyond British waters. The rights & merits of a case may be governed by a different law from that applicable to the form of remedy & procedure.

The Zollverein was to blame for this collision in having continued to sail too close to the other light vessel, & so occasioned the light of the Pet to be obscured (DR. LUSHINGTON).

(2) The laws of Great Britain affect her own subjects everywhere—foreigners only when within her own jurisdiction (DR. LUSHINGTON).

(3) As between a British & foreign ship on the high seas, the general maritime law must be the rule of the ct. In such a case British ship not bound by her own municipal law.—THE ZOLLVEREIN (1856), Sw. 96; 27 L. T. O. S. 160; 4 W. R.

2. —— Lien of master—Application of lex fori.]—(1) In a suit by a foreign master against the freight for his wages, the question whether the freight is liable is a question of remedy & not of contract, & is therefore to be determined by the lex fori.

(2) A statute general in terms & intended for the protection of navigation applies to foreign vessels within British waters.

Merchant Shipping Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 191, notwithstanding s. 109, extends to the masters of foreign ships, & gives them a remedy against ships & freight for their wages.—THE MILFORD (1858), Sw. 362; 31 L. T. O. S. 42; 4 Jur. N. S. 417; 6 W. R. 554; 166 E. R. 1167.

3. —— —— ——.]—In proceedings in rem by the foreign master of an Argentine vessel in an English port, the claim of the master consisted of (a) wages as supercargo, & afterwards as master; (b) disbursements whilst acting as supercargo, & afterwards as master. On the question of priority as against a mtgee. intervening:—Held: though by the lex loci the master could only claim his wages & disbursements for the last voyage as a "privileged debt" in priority to the mtgee., the question was one of remedy, & therefore the lex fori applied, under which, by reason of the maritime lien conferred by 1894 Act, s. 167, he could claim, in priority, the whole of his wages & disbursements whilst master. He was also entitled to add thereto his wages as a seaman whilst acting as supercargo, & such disbursements as he had then made by way of advances to the crew on account of their wages.—THE TAGUS, [1903] P. 44; 72 L. 6. —— —— ——.]—Where a British ship damages a foreign ship by a collision within the distance of three miles from the shore of the United Kingdom, the provisions of Merchant Shipping Act, 1854 (c. 104), limiting the liability of the owner to the value of the ship, apply.—GENERAL IRON SCREW COLLIER CO. v. SCHURMANNS (1860), 1 John. & H. 180; 29 L. J. Ch. 877; 4 L. T. 138; 6 Jur. N. S. 883; 8 W. R. 732; 1 Mar. L. C. 60; 70 E. R. 712.

7. —— Pilotage.]—The British Legislature has no authority over foreign vessels on the high seas out of British jurisdiction, but may impose any conditions on foreign vessels entering a British port, & consequently an obligation on foreign ships inward bound to take a pilot at a convenient station beyond three miles from the British shore.—THE ANNAPOLIS, THE JOHANNA STOLL (1861), Lush. 295; 30 L. 8. —— Application to vessels in Solent.]—THE SAXONIA, THE ECLIPSE, No. 13, post.

9. —— Unauthorised engagement of seamen.]—The prohibition contained in 1894 Act, s. 111, against unauthorised persons engaging seamen to be entered on board any ship in the United Kingdom, applies where the ship for which the seamen are engaged is a foreign ship.

The fine imposed by sect. 111 of that Act for its contravention is a punishment for an offence, & is not recoverable as a civil debt.—R. v. STEWART, [1899] 1 Q. B. 964; 80 L. T. 660; 63 J. 67. —— Application of Registration Acts—Registered owner holding proceeds of sale of ship as trustee.]—The policy of the Ship Registry Act, in disregarding interests not appearing on the register, is inapplicable both to the money arising from the sale of a ship & to the produce of the freight.

Where a party who appears on the registry to be the absolute owner of a ship, enters into an agreement for valuable consideration, admitting he is a trustee, & engaging to sell the ship & hand over the produce to the true owner, the ct., notwithstanding the Ship Registry Act, will enforce the agreement.

Shares in a ship purchased with A.'s money were registered in B.'s name. The comrs. purporting to act under this sect., granted a pass to pltfs.' vessel "to make one voyage as a British unregistered vessel from the Port of London to Immingham." While sailing under this pass, the vessel by her bad navigation caused three vessels, which belonged to some of defts., to come into collision whereby all three sustained damage. Pltfs. claimed to limit their liability in respect of this bad navigation of their vessel. Some of defts. alleged that the pass was invalid as no time was mentioned therein in accordance with the sect., so that the vessel could not be recognised as a British ship, & pltfs. could not limit their liability:—Held: the pass was valid, having been granted "for the time . . . therein mentioned" within the terms of the sect., namely, for the time of the voyage, & pltfs. were entitled to limit their liability.—THE WILLS No. 66 (1914), 83 L. The latter was to pay for her by four instalments: the first when the keel was laid, the second when at the light plank, & the third & fourth when the ship was launched. Before June 25, 1819, the ship was measured with the builder's privity, to the intent that B. might get her registered in his name. On June 25 the shipbuilder signed the usual certificate of her building; & on June 26 the ship was registered in B.'s name; & on the same day the third instalment was paid. On June 30 A. committed an act of bkpcy., upon which a commission afterwards issued. On July 2, the ship not being then completed, or launched, deft., & a crew hired by him, took possession of her, & a rudder & cordage, the former of which was made by the shipbuilder, & the latter bought by him, for the express purpose of completing the ship:—Held: the legal effect of the shipbuilder's having signed the certificate to enable B. to have the ship registered in his name, was to vest the general property in the ship in B. from the time the registry was completed.—WOODS v. RUSSELL (1822), 5 B. & Ald. 942; 1 Dow. & Ry. This certificate gave the gross tonnage exclusive of the double bottom, & a certificate of a French surveyor stated that the space between the inner & outer plating of the double bottom was not available for the carriage of cargo, stores, or fuel:—Held: this was a sufficient compliance with the provisions of 1894 Act, ss. 81, 84, & 503, & enabled the gross tonnage of the vessel to be calculated upon which pltf.'s statutory liability in damages was based.—THE CORDILLERAS, [1904] P. 90; 73 L. The ship was sold, by order of that Ct., & the register decreed to be given up to the purchaser. The owner became bkpt., & his assignees brought an action of trover for the register:—Held: they could not recover, as they might have appeared in the Admlty. 100. Closing the register—"Constructive total loss."]—By 1894 Act, s. 21, as amended by 1906 Act, s. 52, in the event of a registered ship being either "actually or constructively lost" the owner shall immediately on obtaining knowledge of the event, if no notice thereof has already been given to the registrar, give notice thereof to the registrar, who shall make an entry thereof in the register book, & the registry of the ship in that book shall be considered as closed. The expression "constructively lost" has no meaning as applied to a ship, except in connection with marine insurance, & a vessel which is a constructive total loss within the meaning of the term in marine insurance is "constructively lost" within 1894 Act, s. 21.

On Mar. 22, 1913, a ship of 350 tons gross measurement was sunk in the fairway of the Manchester Ship Canal & abandoned by the owners to the underwriters, who paid as on a total loss. The canal co., acting under 1894 Act, s. 530, raised the vessel at a cost of £3,600 & removed her to a pontoon at Manchester where on May 1, 1913, they sold her by auction to deft. for £1,675. The contract of sale described the vessel as a "registered ship" of a certain tonnage, & provided that on completion the seller would deliver to the purchaser a delivery order for the vessel. On May 8, the day fixed for completion, deft. required the canal co. to transfer the ship by bill of sale on the ground that she was still a registered ship. On May 22 the canal co. offered to execute a bill of sale quantam valeat, but the registry having in the meantime been closed, deft. declined to complete the purchase. In an action for specific performance of the contract:—Held: the ship was "constructively lost" within 1894 Act, s. 21, & by the operation of that sect. as amended by 1906 Act, the ship having ceased to be a registered ship, no bill of sale was necessary to transfer her to deft. The canal co. had a statutory right to sell the ship whether the registry was closed or not, &, as, before action brought they had offered to execute a bill of sale for what it was worth, deft. was bound to complete his contract.—MANCHESTER SHIP CANAL CO. v. HORLOCK, [1914] 2 Ch. 199; 83 L. 106. —— —— What amounts to warranty.]—Deft., being the owner of a ship, advertised its sale, describing it as "The fine teak built barque Intrepid, A.1, & well adapted for a passenger ship." Pltf. having read the advertisement negotiated for its purchase, & a contract was signed by pltf. & deft., whereby the former agreed to buy & the latter to sell "the barque Intrepid as she now lies in the St. Katherine Dock, agreeable to the inventory annexed." The inventory commenced by describing the ship in the same terms as the advertisement: under that was the word "Inventory," which was followed by a list of the ship's stores & tackle: & in the margin, opposite to this list, deft. signed his name. The document concluded thus: "The vessel & her stores to be taken with all faults as they now lie, without any allowance for deficiency in length, weight, quantity, quality, or any defect or error whatever." The vessel proved not to be teak built, nor of class A1, nor adapted for a passenger ship:—Held: (1) the whole of the above document was incorporated with the contract of sale, & not merely the list of stores headed "Inventory"; (2) there was no warranty of the vessel.—TAYLOR v. BULLEN (1850), 5 Exch. 779; 20 L. 107. Power to sell—Alleged breach of covenant that vendor had power.]—By deed poll, dated Oct. 21, 1836, deft. sold & assigned, etc., to pltf. "all that ship or vessel called, etc., with her masts, tackle, & appurtenances," & covenanted that he had then good right, full power, & lawful authority, to sell & assign the said premises to pltf. To a declaration on this covenant, assigning as breaches, that at the time of making the deed poll, the ship was wholly lost & destroyed, & was incapable of being assigned, etc.; that deft. had not at that time good right, etc., to assign her; deft. pleaded, that the ship was not, at the time of making the deed poll, wholly lost & destroyed, etc.; & that deft. had good right to assign her. It appeared in evidence, that at the time of the sale the ship was on a foreign voyage, that, on Oct. 13, she went aground in a storm on the coast of the Prince of Wales's Island, & was left by the crew, who, however, had access to her afterwards; that she lay aground five feet above water on one side, & with her masts standing, till Oct. 24, when the captain called a survey, &, by the surveyor's advice, sold her; that her bulk-ends were strained, but that if there had been facilities at hand, & it had been a different season of the year, she might have been got off & repaired; & that she had sustained no more damage on Oct. 21 than when she first took the ground:—Held: the covenant of deft., that he had power to transfer her as a ship, was not broken.—BARR v. GIBSON (1838), 3 M. & W. 390; 1 Horn & H. 70; 7 L. If steamer not approved of, deposit to be returned immediately." On approval of engines, boilers, etc., the vendors are to dry dock the vessel for inspection of ship's bottom, etc. Purchaser's inspectors inspected the portion of the vessel which did not require opening up, paid the deposit, & subsequently inspected the opened up portions & disapproved of her:—Held: a bonâ fide exercise of judgment on inspection entitled purchaser to disapprove, & the deposit was recoverable back by him, whether the disapproval of his inspection was based upon reasonable grounds or not.—HAEGERSTRAND v. ANNE THOMAS S.S. 113. Refusal to deliver foreign ship—Injunction to restrain removal from jurisdiction.] — A shipowner of Hamburg made at Hamburg an agreement with a domiciled Englishman for the sale to the Englishman of a Hamburg ship whenever she might return from the voyage on which she then was. The ship returned & was by the owner ordered to proceed to Sunderland. The master of the ship, who was authorised by the shipowner to act as his agent in the sale, refused to deliver the ship except on certain terms. The purchaser filed a bill against the owner & the master for specific performance. He obtained leave to substitute service on the master for the owner, & moved for an injunction to restrain defts. from removing the ship out of the jurisdiction :—Held : the ct. had jurisdiction to restrain defts. from removing the ship, & injunction granted.

120. Belief in truth of representation.]—SWIFT v. SPOOLEY (1854), 23 L. T. O. S. 300, N. P.

121. ——.]—Upon a negotiation for the sale of a ship B., the seller represented to A. the buyer that she was, so far as he knew, as sound as a ship of her age usually was. Upon the faith of this representation A. agreed to purchase the ship & proceeded to make alterations in her to fit her for a voyage to Australia for which A., at the time of the contract knew she was intended. The register proving defective A. afterwards repudiated the bargain & upon a suggestion that the representation of B., as to the ship's soundness was false, brought an action against him, charging him with a false & fraudulent representation with a view to induce A., & whereby A. was induced to expend moneys on the ship, which but for such false & fraudulent representation he would not have done. At the trial, the judge told the jury that to sustain the action, pltf. must prove that deft. made the representation alleged; that it was false; that deft. knew it to be false; & that damage had resulted to pltf. The jury returned the following verdict—"We find for plaintiff but acquit deft. of any fraudulent intention":—Held: upon this finding the verdict was properly entered for pltf.—MILNE v. MARWOOD (1855), 15 C. 122. Whether representation amounting to warranty—Representation in advertisement but not in inventory.]—The owners of a ship circulated advertisements of sale, beginning with a description of the ship, which stated her to be copper fastened; after which was a notice, that the hull, masts, yards, & rigging, were to be taken with all faults. Under this was printed the word "inventory," which was followed by a list of the ship's stores & tackle; & there was then a further announcement, that the vessel & her stores were to be taken with all faults, & without allowance for weight, length, quality, quantity, or any defect whatever. The owners, afterwards executed a written contract of sale, not stating the vessel to be copper fastened, but containing this clause, "On payment of the purchase-money, the said brig, with what belongs to her, shall be delivered according to the inventory which hath been exhibited; but the said inventory shall be made good as to quantity only; & the said brig, together with her stores, shall be taken with all faults, in the condition they now lie, without any allowance for weight, length, quality, or any defect whatsoever":—Held: assuming that the advertisement could, by words of reference, be incorporated with the contract of sale, the word "inventory" in the contract, referred only to the list of stores, etc., & not to the prior part of the advertisement; &, therefore, on the two documents taken together, no warranty appeared that the ship was copper fastened.—FREEMAN v. BAKER (1833), 5 B. & Ad. 797; 2 Nev. & M. 123. ——.] — Where it is sought to import a warranty into a contract of sale contained in letters which are ambiguous in their terms, it is competent to the party sought to be charged to give evidence of all the surrounding facts & circumstances, for the purpose of showing that a warranty was not contemplated by the parties.

In an action for the breach of warranty of a yacht sold by deft. to pltf., the case for pltf. consisted of proof that his agent having gone to examine the vessel with a view to buying her, & being unable to ascertain the state of soundness of the masts, where they passed through the decks, told the captain, who was deft.'s agent in the sale, to have them examined by a shipwright & report the result. The captain subsequently wrote, "I have had a good overhaul at the masts, & find they are all as sound as ever." An offer of £3,000 was then made by letter by pltf.'s agent, who said pltf. would have to lay out £500 in repairs. Deft. replied by letter declining to take less than £3,500, & saying, "You must, I think, be under some very great error in thinking £500 would be required to be spent. Beyond the usual painting, etc., & perhaps a little repair to the copper, I don't really think there are any necessary repairs. . . . Personally I know her sea-going qualitites, & how thoroughly sound she is & tight in every part." In a subsequent letter deft. further said, "her masts have been examined & found as sound as when put in." After some further correspondence, pltf. purchased the vessel for £3,375, & a transfer or bill of sale was made in accordance with Merchant Shipping Act, 1854 (c. 104):—Held: assuming the assertions in the letters amounted to a warranty of the soundness of the masts, it was competent to deft. to prove all the surrounding circumstances & statements of the parties, as well after as before the letters, to show that a warranty was not contemplated.

Semble: the letters did not amount to a warranty.—STUCLEY v. BAILY (1862), 1 H. & C. 405; 31 L. J. Ex. 483; 10 W. R. 720; 158 E. R. 943.

R. N., the son, received the purchase-money, but never transmitted it to the father :—Held: the sale was effected by the fraud & forgery of the son ; the misleading description of him on the certificate of registry, which enabled him to practice such deceit, was not proved to arise from any culpable neglect in the instructions given by the father to the custom house & the sale was null & void.—THE EMPRESS (1856), Sw. 160 ; 28 L. 128. —— Admissibility of Lloyd's Register.]—A party bought a ship under a representation that she was copper fastened. He ascertained, in the course of a few days, that she was not, but did not make any complaint to the seller till several months afterwards, when she had been on a voyage & returned :—Held: "Lloyd's Register of Shipping" was not admissible in evidence to show that the vessel was considered as copper-fastened. —FREEMAN v. BAKER (1833), 5 C. & P. 475 ; 172 E. R. 1060, N. P. ; subsequent proceedings, 5 B. & Ad. 797.

129. —— —— No privity of contract—Necessity for fraud.]—Defts., the trustees of Lloyd's Register of Shipping, had, on the request of the owner of the barque Midas, to have the vessel surveyed & reclassed, caused a survey of the vessel to be made by one of their surveyors and after such survey the society issued a certificate in the usual form, in which they stated that the vessel was in a good & efficient state, & that she had been classed & entered in the register with the character A1 for seven years. The fees for this classification were paid by the owner. After the date of this classification & certificate pltf. bought the Midas from the owner, & he did so in reliance upon the statement in the certificate as to the condition of the vessel. Defects were soon afterwards discovered in the condition of the vessel, by reason whereof pltf. suffered damage. It was admitted, for the purpose of the case, that the survey was negligently made, & that but for such negligence the defects in such vessel would have been discovered, & pltf. saved from the loss which he sustained. In action by pltf. against the trustees of the society to recover damages from the loss so sustained :—Held: even assuming the negligence of the classification, & the false character given to the vessel thereby, pltf. was not entitled to recover against defts. as his action could not be based upon contract, there being no privity of contract between pltf. & defts., & it could not be based upon misrepresentation, as there was no misrepresentation of a fraudulent character.—BRAGINTON v. CHAPMAN, THE MIDAS (1878), 60 L. After the owner had sold the yacht to pltf., it was discovered that she was not entitled to this classification. 131. Purchaser to take risk of requisition — Ship already under requisition.]—Pltfs. bought a steamer from first defts. through second defts., who were brokers, there being a term in the contract that pltfs. were to take the risk of the ships being requisitioned. The steamer was at the time under requisition by the Admlty., but had been temporarily released for one voyage only. In an action for damages against first defts. for breach of a contract to sell a free ship or for breach of a collateral written promise by the brokers that the ship was free, & against the brokers for breach of warranty of authority or for breach of duty in not giving pltfs. all material information : —Held: (1) the above-mentioned term of the contract did not imply that the ship was a free ship ; (2) the brokers gave pltfs. the information required ; (3) there was no collateral written promise, & therefore the action failed against both defts.—BRYS & GYLSON, LTD. v. IMPERIAL S.S. K. sold her with a warranty that she was copper bolt; but in fact she was not; & the vendee obtained a verdict against him for large damages:—Held: K. could not maintain an action against the exors. of D., for a breach of warranty, because the first instrument was void under Merchant Shipping Act, 1794 (c. 68), s. 14, because it did not contain a recital of the certificate of the registry.—KAIN v. OLD (1824), 2 B. & C. 627; 4 Dow. & Ry. 136. —— ——.]—An action of co-ownership was instituted on behalf of G. against a British vessel & against H. deft. intervening. The statement of claim alleged (inter alia), that by bill of sale duly registered in 1867, deft. as sole owner of the vessel transferred for valuable consideration a moiety of the same to one T. & that T., by a subsequent bill of sale duly registered in 1876, transferred the said moiety of the vessel to pltf. for value. Deft. in his statement for defence, denied that he had at any time signed a bill of sale transferring any shares in the vessel to T. & alleged, (inter alia), that if any such bill of sale had been registered, the same was made & registered fraudulently. At the hearing of the action the registration & execution of the bills of sale were proved. The ct. thereupon directed that the question whether the fraud alleged could affect the rights of pltf. should be raised on demurrer. Pltf. thereupon demurred to so much of the statement of defence as alleged fraud:—Held: the demurrer must be sustained on the ground that the legal ownership in the moiety of the vessel having passed to pltf. for valuable consideration by the execution & registration of a bill of sale without notice of fraud, pltf. had thereby acquired a title to the same as against deft.—THE HORLOCK (1877), 2 P. Sect. 34 provides that no instrument shall be valid to pass the property in a ship or for any other purpose, until such bill of sale shall have been registered by the proper officer & by sect. 35 it is enacted that, when & so soon as the instrument shall have been registered, it shall be valid & effectual to pass the property thereby intended to be transferred, as against all & every persons whatsoever, & to all intents & purposes, except as against such subsequent purchasers & mtgees. who shall first procure an indorsement on the certificate of registry, in the manner thereinafter mentioned.

When dispensed with — Ship unnecessarily registered—Under fifteen tons.]—If a vessel under fifteen tons' burden, navigating on the coasts of the United Kingdom, be registered by her owner, a British subject, he may transfer it to another British subject without any instrument in writing, or fresh registry ; for 8 & 9 Vict. c. 89, s. 34, does not apply, inasmuch as, under 8 & 9 Vict. c. 88, ss. 13, 14, the original registration was unnecessary.—BENYON v. CRESSWELL (1848), 12 Q. 162. —— Registered ship ceasing to be a "ship."]—A ship registered under Merchant Shipping Act, 1854 (c. 104), may be so treated & dealt with as, at any rate between the parties to a transfer thereof, to no longer a ship for the purposes of Merchant Shipping Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 53, & so to be transferable without a bill of sale like any other chattel, even, it would seem, although not becoming the subject of any of the contingencies specified in Merchant Shipping Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 53.

A vessel which had been registered was by the owners used for the space of four years as a mere coaling hulk & workshop, moored at one of their coaling stations ; she was then transferred by them under an agreement in writing to a co. to which the owners transferred their business. She was described in the agreement, & also in an invoice delivered, as a coal hulk :—Held : as a matter of fact, under the circumstances of the case she was not a ship, at any rate as between the parties, so as to be by Merchant Shipping Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 55, transferable only by bill of sale, & therefore the property in her passed to the co.—EUROPEAN & AUSTRALIAN ROYAL MAIL CO., LTD. v. PENINSULAR & ORIENTAL STEAM NAVIGATION CO. The assignment was not registered under that Act, nor under Bills of Sale Act, 1854 (c. 36), s. 7 :—Held : the vessel was not a British ship within Merchant Shipping Act, 1854 (c. 104), & therefore, the assignment was valid without registration under Merchant Shipping Act, 1854 (c. 104) ; & the assignment came within the exception in Bills of Sale Act, 1854 (c. 36), s. 7, by which transfers of ships are exempted from the provisions of Bills of Sale Act, 1854 (c. 36).—UNION BANK OF LONDON v. LENANTON (1878), 3 C. Deft. refused to carry out his part of the agreement, & pltf. brought an action against deft. for specific performance, or, in the alternative, £2,600, & for damages for breach of contract. Deft. pleaded that the agreement, if any was made, was not a bill of sale, nor was it registered, nor did it contain a sufficient description of the yacht, as required by Merchant Shipping Act, 1854 (c. 104). The debenture was one of a series protected by a trust deed. It purported to create a charge upon three ships belonging to the co. These ships had previously been mtged. by legal mtges. registered under the Merchant Shipping Acts to trustees for the debenture-holders. The trust deed contained covenants for payment of principal & interest & provisions for the maintenance & realisation of the security usual in trust deeds. The debenture provided that the holder should have the benefit pari passu with other debenture-holders of the mtge.:—Held: the debenture bond did not create any charge on the ships beyond that already in existence, & if it did create any charge its substantial object was to create not a charge but a marketable security, & it was therefore not an instrument for the disposition of a ship within clause 2 of the General Exemptions from all stamp duties contained in the above schedule, but was liable to stamp duty as a marketable security under the same schedule.—DEDDINGTON S.S. Meanwhile, as collateral security, I have executed a bill of sale of the vessel to you, which you can get duly registered; &, on the return of the vessel to this country, & the due repayment to you of the above-mentioned sum of £1,000, the vessel is to be again returned to me." A. registered the bill of sale on Aug. 2, 1851:—Held: the register was per se no evidence of ownership, but the ct. might look at all the circumstances, to see whether it was the intention of the parties, at the time of giving the bill of sale, that A. should become the absolute owner of the ship, so as to be liable for contracts entered into by the captain for the benefit of the ship, or whether he was to take her merely as security for his advance.—MYERS v. WILLIS (1856), 18 C. In Sept. 1853, the ship sailed from London on a voyage to San Francisco & thence on a seeking voyage home. In June, 1854, the captain, who was sent out by D. to take charge of the vessel, chartered it to load a cargo of flour for Sydney. Some days before the bill of exchange became due. D. Y. & co. requested pltf. to renew it, & he consented to do so on having the vessel transferred to him as a security. The vessel was accordingly transferred to him by deed of assignment which was in the form of an absolute sale. In Oct. 1854, the captain, who had no knowledge of the assignment, received £1,000 on account of freight, & remitted it to D. Y. & co. by a bill of exchange. In Nov. 1854, D. Y. & co. who had acted as ship's husband, became bkpt.:—Held: (1) though the assignment was in form absolute, yet the ct. might look to the real nature of the transaction & see that it was by way of mtge. only; (2) pltf., being only a mtgee. & not having taken any step to obtain possession, was not entitled to the freight.—GARDNER v. CAZENOVE (1856), 1 H. & N. 423; 26 L. A. becomes bkpt., & the bills are paid by C. & D., who thereupon assume the ownership of the ship, writing specific directions to the captain in command of her at the Cape, as to procuring intermediate & homeward freight, & for his general government in the prosecution of a voyage to various parts of the Indian seas, & back to London; & these directions are from time to time renewed. The ship, on her arrival, becomes lessened in value, & C. & D. have been put to expense in her necessary disbursements:—Held: C. & D. were not to be considered as mtgees., but as absolute owners of the ship; the ship's expenses, after they assumed such ownership, must fall on them; & they could only prove for the balance of the £2,600 after deducting the value of the ship at the time they first took on themselves to act as owners.—Ex p. HOWDEN (1842), 2 Mont. Subsequently the assignee received interest, & gave a receipt for it, as for interest on £100 advanced on security of the bill of sale. The registry at the custom house was of an absolute sale. The assignee sold the 8-64ths, & the bill of sale to the purchaser was duly executed; but, before its registry, a bill to redeem by the original owner was filed, & the ct. restrained the registry of the bill of sale, & made a decree for redemption on payment of the £100 & interest, with costs so far as they were increased by the dispute of pltf.'s right to redemption.—WHITFIELD v. PARFITT (1851), 4 De G. & Sm. 240; 17 L. 195. —— Transfer by owners of shares to agent for sale—Agent made registered owner—Mortgage by member of agent's firm.]—In furtherance of a project for the formation of a co. to purchase a ship, pltfs., who were owners of shares in the ship, executed transfers of their respective shares to H., the senior partner in a firm of H. & co., which managed the ship's business, as trustee for them, with power to sell the shares to the co. if formed; & H. was registered as owner of the shares in the register of shipping at the port to which the ship belonged. The project for formation of the co. proved abortive, but the above-mentioned shares were not reconveyed to pltfs. Subsequently a son of H., who acted as the manager of H. & co.'s financial business, obtained for the purposes of the firm from deft., through an agent for deft., without the knowledge or authority of pltfs., an advance of money, which was intended to be secured by a mtge. by H. of the above-mentioned shares. A document, which purported to be & was registered as such a mtge., turned out to be a nullity, never having been duly executed by H., the aforesaid manager having obtained H.'s signature to a printed form with blank spaces, which he subsequently handed to deft.'s agent for the purpose of his filling in the blank spaces with the material particulars of the proposed mtge. which he did. The money advanced by deft. was used for the purpose of the firm. Deft. had no notice of pltfs.' interest in the shares. In an action brought by pltfs., claiming that the mtge. deed should be declared void, & the entry of it expunged from the register:—Held: the fact that pltfs. had constituted H. the legal owner of the shares & allowed him to appear as such on the register, did not under the above-mentioned circumstances, give rise to an equity entitling deft. as against pltfs. to a charge upon the shares as security for the money advanced by him.—BURGIS v. CONSTANTINE, [1908] 2 K. Under this power, the agent, by deed, reciting a mtge. of the ship, & the necessity for further advance to enable the ship to set sail, & the advance of £4,000 for that purpose by pltfs., assigned all the freight, hire, & passage money, & earnings of the ship in her intended voyage from Port Jackson to Liverpool, with a proviso for redemption if within ten days after arrival the £4,000 should be repaid. The ship sailed, & arrived at Liverpool; but the £4,000 was not paid. After the ship had sailed, the agent of the owners received the passage money of certain passenger by bills on England payable at sight, which bills were remitted to the owners in England, & the amounts received by them before the arrival of the ship:—Held: the power of attorney authorised the assignment of the passage money, & gave the mtgees. an immediate right to it before they took possession of the ship; & consequently they were entitled to recover back the amount so received.—WILLIS v. PALMER (1860), 7 C. One of the trustees died & a new trustee was appointed by deed, which deed contained a declaration of transmission or transfer of interest. The co. wished to have the new trustee registered as a transferee of the mtges. For that purpose they prepared an instrument of transfer of the mtges. with the name of the new trustee as transferee, & tendered same for registration under above Act, s. 37:—Held: by above Act, s. 3, read in connection with the First Schedule thereto, fees were payable on the transfer of a mtge. of a British ship, & they were properly demanded by the registrar in this case before registration.—Re NEW ZEALAND SHIPPING CO., LTD., [1918] 1 K. The ship not having been registered in Greece, the mtgees. were unable to register their mtge. On a motion by the mtgees. for judgment in an action in rem, the shipowner did not appear, but ship repairers, who had recovered judgment & an order for sale of the ship on their necessaries claim, intervened:—Held: being unregistered, the mtge. was invalid under Greek law, but by the mtge. agreement pltfs., as against the shipowner, were to be treated as having a registered mtge. enforceable by an action in rem whenever the ship was within the jurisdiction of the English cts.—THE BYZANTION (1922), 127 L. 223. Advance made on date of receiving order—Pre-existing agreement for advance.]—A mtgor. who conveys all his property with the main object of securing further advances, does not thereby commit an act of bkpcy., even though the mtge. also secures a past debt due from the mtgor. to the mtgee. Where under a mtge. of a ship to secure further advances, an advance is made on the date of a receiving order against the mtgor., who is subsequently adjudicated bkpt. in respect of acts of bkpcy. committed prior to the execution of the mtge., the mtgee. is entitled, under Bankruptcy Act, 1883 (c. 52), s. 49, as against the trustee in bkpcy., to recover such advance, where before the date of the receiving order there was an existing contract between mtgor. & mtgee. to make future advances & a positive promise by the mtgee. to make this specific advance. A. mortgaged his shares in a ship to B., to secure further advances, & also a small part debt due from A. to B. Prior to the mtge., A. had committed acts of bkpcy. in respect of which he was subsequently to the date of the mtge. adjudicated bkpt. B. had no notice or knowledge of the acts of bkpcy., & made advances to enable A. to carry on his business. On the date of the receiving order, B. made A. an advance of £250, in consequence of a prior agreement between them to make future advances, & a positive promise to advance this specific sum. In an action by B. to establish the validity of his mtge. & recover against resp. the amount of his loans :—Held : the mtge. was valid, & B. was entitled, as against the trustee in bkpcy., to recover not only all advances prior to the date of the receiving order, but also the advance of £250 made on the date of the receiving order, as it was made in consequence of the contract & promise made before the date of the receiving order.—THE THAMES (1890), 63 L. 237. Discharge of maritime lien—Prior to obtaining possession—Right to indemnity—Against party working ship for mortgagor.]—A. being the owner of a steamship mortgaged it to B., & subsequently, under circumstances held to show acquiescence by B., entered into an agreement, in contemplation of a partnership with C., by the terms of which C. was to work the ship for A. till further notice, paying all the expenses & receiving all the profits, A. agreeing to indemnify him against loss, if any, upon a periodical statement of accounts. Subsequently to this agreement B. gave notice to C. of the mtge., & required possession of the ship. The ship was being employed in voyages at a distance from England, between S. & T., & was at that time at S., under engagements which had been entered into by C. with third parties, with respect to its next voyage to T. The ship was given up to B.'s agent at T. at the termination of its next voyage thither. At the time of such delivery C. owed to the crew of the ship a large sum for wages, which entitled them to proceed against the ship in the Admlty. Ct.; & shortly after the delivery of the ship the crew took such proceedings, & the ship was seized by the officers of the ct. B., after suffering much delay & loss, paid the wages & obtained possession of the ship. In an action of trover for the ship. & for money paid, brought by B. against C.:—Held: (1) C. was entitled to retain possession of the ship till its arrival at T., in order to fulfil the engagements incurred before notice; (2) as there had been a delivery of the ship at T., notwithstanding it was subject to a maritime lien for wages, B. was not entitled to recover on the count for trover; (3) B. was entitled to recover the wages from C. under the count for money paid.—JOHNSON v. ROYAL MAIL STEAM PACKET CO. Pltfs. then sued defts., the owners of sixteen sixty-fourth shares, to recover the amount paid to the master:—Held: as the mtgor. & the other co-owners were severally liable for the disbursements paid by the master, & as pltfs. could not obtain possession of their shares as long as the vessel was under the arrest of the ct., they were entitled to recover from defts. the amount paid by them.—THE ORCHIS (1890), 15 P. 250. Dismissal of master — Liability of mortgagee for compensation — Misconduct of master.]—A mtgee. took possession of a ship by putting a man on board & giving notice to the master. The latter, by order of the mtgor., took the vessel to sea with the man in possession on board. In an action by the master for wages, & for compensation for wrongful dismissal, the registrar awarded him a sum as compensation, being the amount of wages payable for two months after the mtgee. took possession:—Held: the master had been guilty of misconduct in taking the vessel to sea, & could not as against the mtgee. be properly awarded any sum as compensation for wrongful dismissal.—THE FAIRPORT (1884), 10 P. The addition by the owner of a mtged. ship of some equipment to the ship is a "transfer under a disposition" to the mtgee. within Factors Act, (c. 45), s. 9. Defts., to whom the shipowners were indebted for considerable sums, obtained an order of the Chilian ct. which enabled them to arrest the ship. Defts. made an offer to pltfs. to release the ship on receiving an unconditional guarantee covering the amount of the debt due to them from the owners of the ship, plus interest & expenses, but pltfs. paid the amount in question under protest, purporting to reserve the right to open up the whole question in London, & the ship was thereupon released. 266. —— ——.]—Pltfs. were the mtgees. of a vessel which had been chartered by her owners, the mtgors. for a succession of seasons on the St. Lawrence river with options for renewal which did not expire until 1932. Pltfs. brought an action in rem against the shipowners, who were in financial difficulties, claiming judgment for the validity of the mtges. & an order for the sale of the vessel by the marshal. No appearance was entered by defts. & judgment was given condemning the vessel & ordering her sale. Thereupon the charterers intervened & claimed (a) a declaration that the charterparty was binding on the mtgees. who had notice of its existence when the mtgees. were executed, & (b) an injunction to restrain pltfs. from exercising their right to an order for the sale of the vessel except subject to the terms of the charterparty. The interveners also alleged that the mtges. were invalid, whether or not the charterparty was binding on the mtgees., inasmuch as the shipowners, by reason of their financial position, were incapable of performing it, a sale at the instance of the mtgees. would not interfere with the performance of a contract which was already impossible of performance by the parties thereto; pltfs. were entitled to an order for the sale of the vessel by the marshal free from the obligations of the charterparty.—THE LORD STRATHCONA, [1925] P. 143; 95 L. 274. Sum paid to cancel charter—By vendors of ship to mortgagor—Sale by vendors with consent of mortgagee—Deduction of sum paid in accounting to mortgagee.]—The managing & majority owners of a vessel, as vendors, handed over the possession of her to a Scottish firm under a contract of sale by which the firm were to become owners of the shares in the vessel in proportion to the instalments of the purchase-money paid. The firm paid a sum on account of the purchase-money against which eight shares in the vessel were transferred to them. These shares the firm mortgaged. In working the vessel the firm incurred liabilities which, in an action in rem by the master, were held to have created maritime liens on her &, after entering into an onerous charter for the vessel, the firm became bkpt. The vendors resumed possession of the vessel, gave bail in the above-mentioned action, paid the amount subsequently adjudged to be due, paid a sum to cancel the charter, repaired the vessel, settled with the minority owners, &, with the acquiescence of the mtgees. of the eight shares, sold her to a foreign purchaser. In an action by the mtgees. against the vendors in respect of the distribution of the proceeds of the sale:—Held: as against the mtgees. the vendors could not, before dividing the purchase-money, deduct a proportion of (a) the sum paid to clear off the maritime liens, as there had been no request from the mtgees. & they were not at the time of the payment in possession; (b) the sum paid to cancel the charter, as the mtgees., not being in possession, were not liable for expenses connected with the working of the ship;

275. Intervention by charterers after order for sale—Stay of sale—Security from charterers against possible loss & expenses.]—In a mtge. action in rem pltfs., mtgees., in Jan. 1925, recovered judgment by default condemning the ship & ordering her sale by the marshal. Thereupon certain charterers, to whom the mtgors. had chartered the ship for a term of years, intervened, claiming (inter alia) a declaration that the charterparty was binding on the mtgees.; & by an order of Mar. 3, 1925, the sale of the ship stood over pending the trial of the issue, upon the interveners giving security in an amount satisfactory to the registrar for loss arising from delay & any loss on sale due to a fall in shipping values. The registrar ordered certain sums to be given, & on July 15, 1925, the judge gave judgment that pltfs. were not bound by the charterparty, that they were entitled to the judgment they had obtained, & that the costs of & occasioned by the intervention should be paid by the interveners. On Oct. 14 the ship was sold by the marshal, according to pltfs., for £20,000 less than she had been valued at nine months previously. Pltfs. accordingly took out a summons for further security:—Held: although judgment has been given against the interveners & they were not appealing against that decision, the matter was still at large, as they were contesting the pltfs.' claims before the registrar; accordingly the interveners could be ordered to give further security in respect of possible loss of capital & interest & for the marshal's expenses; & the case must be referred to the registrar to find what amount should be given & what was the amount of pltfs.' damages under each head.—THE LORD STRATHCONA (No. 2), [1926] P. 18; 95 L. (2) Where a mtgee. claimed under a special contract, which did not contemplate a sale by him until two months had elapsed after a demand for payment:—Held: upon the construction of the agreement, & especially having regard to the circumstance that the ship would otherwise remain useless in that interval, he was at liberty to use the ship. In such a case, the circumstance of the mtgee. being registered as absolute owner is not conclusive as to the rights of the parties.—EUROPEAN & AUSTRALIAN ROYAL MAIL CO. v. ROYAL MAIL STEAM PACKET CO. 278. Must act with care & prudence.] —The mtgees. of a ship took possession, & forthwith commenced employing her in a hazardous & speculative business. During the course of this employment, which was throughout a losing one, they put her up for sale under depreciating conditions, & no sale having been effected, continued to run her some weeks longer in a reckless manner till she was much depreciated in value, & then sold her for a small sum. The judge made a decree charging the mtgees. in account with the value of the ship & fittings at the time when they took possession of her, & placing matters on the same footing as if they had bought her at that time:—Held: this decree was correct.

It may be laid down . . . that if the mtgee. does take possession, he can only lawfully use the ship as a prudent man would use her, she being his own property (LORD WESTBURY, C.).—MARRIOTT v. ANCHOR REVERSIONARY CO. The vessel left in ballast for the river Plate, &, her owners having become involved in financial difficulties, mtgees. took constructive possession of her when about to return with a valuable cargo. During the homeward voyage a quantity of the coal was consumed, &, on the arrival of the vessel in this country, the freight was collected by a receiver appointed by the ct., the net proceeds, less necessary disbursements, being paid into ct. On the application of the mtgees. for payment out to them of the freight in ct., the vendor of the coal claimed a deduction in his favour on the ground that the coal had been used in earning the freight:—Held: the mtgees. in possession were entitled to an order for payment out to them of the balance of the freight in ct. without any deduction on account of the coal consumed, for, though the coal was used in earning the freight, it was coal which had been sold to & was the property of the mtgors., &, therefore, claimant, the unpaid vendor, had no interest in the coal or in the freight.—EL ARGENTINO, [1909] P. 236; 78 L. six years evidence could not be adduced to prove a surplus; but although above Act was not avoided on the ground of express trust, it was in this case void by an acknowledgment within six years of an unsettled account pending, which by itself would have sufficed, & also by a promise to pay what should be found due. 297. Improper sale—No sum due to mortgagee—Liability to account.]—A merchant of Gibraltar acted as agent for L., a merchant in Liverpool, & also for M., another merchant in the same place, L. & M. having also dealings together. The Gibraltar merchant was accustomed to send to L. monthly accounts of sales of coal which L. had sent to Gibraltar, giving him credit for the proceeds, & debiting him with commission & other expenses. In 1854 L. applied to M. to make him advances, which he agreed to do, provided L. would give orders to the Gibraltar merchant to remit him out of the proceeds of the sale of L.'s coals the sums he might advance. The Gibraltar merchant having a general account with M., instead of actually remitting these advances to him, entered to his credit the amount which he was instructed from time to time by L. to remit, & in the course of his business remitted bills to M. for collection, etc., including some drawn on L. In Mar. 1856, M. requiring further security for any future advances he might make, L. gave him a mtge. on a ship for them, he having previously given him security on the same ship for two sums, which had at different times been advanced to him. In Aug. 1856, L. assigned the equity of redemption in the ship to pltf., & on Sept. 2, following he became bkpt. On Sept. 4, pltf. sent to Gibraltar to take possession of the ship, tendering to M. £900, being the amount he thought due to him.

The ship, which had previously been advertised for sale, was sold to defts., who were registered as owners. Some of the bills drawn by the Gibraltar merchant on L. & remitted to M. were dishonoured, but the amounts credited to M. by the Gibraltar merchant remained undiminished & undisturbed. Upon pltf. filing his bill to have the sale of the ship set aside, & for an account:—Held: M. was not justified in selling the ship on Sept. 19, as nothing was due to him at that time beyond the £900; he was, therefore, liable to pay pltf. the then value of the ship beyond that sum.—M'LARTY v. MIDDLETON (1861), 4 L. 298. Sale in preference to employment of ship—Mortgagee's right to.]—A. mtgee. of a ship had a power of sale by his security. The ship subsequently arrived at Glasgow, & the mtgee. advertised her for sale by public roup in Scotland. An interdict of the Scottish ct. was obtained to suspend the sale. In the meantime the parties claiming other interests in the ship, proposed to the mtgee. to enter into a charterparty for a voyage of the ship, pending the disputes which had arisen. The mtgee. refused to enter into such charterparty. The ship afterwards arrived, & was then, at Liverpool:—Held: (1) the mtgee. had a clear right to refuse, as being a speculation which could not be imposed upon him; (2) the interdict having thrown a cloud upon the mtgee.'s title, he was entitled to a decree for a sale, & an account as against all parties claiming interests in the ship.

The master of the vessel afterwards, putting into Sidney, transhipped the oil taken in the voyage to another vessel, consigned to consignees in London, who honoured his bill of exchange on them upon having a lien on the consignment. The mtgor. induced B. to advance him £1,000 on a mtge. of the cargo so transhipped & consigned, without notice of any other charge thereon, except the lien of the consignee. B. gave notice of his mtge. to the consignee. A., as soon as he knew of the consignment, but subsequent to B.'s notice, gave notice to the consignee of the mtge. to him; & after such notice the consignee, after satisfying his own lien, paid over the balance of the proceeds of the oil to B.:—Held: A., having done all he could do towards possession, was entitled to priority over B.—FELTHAM v. CLARK (1847), 1 De G. & Sm. 307; 63 E. 306. Registered mortgage—Unregistered further charge.]—The owner of a ship mortgaged it with power of sale, to A. B., a partner of C. D. & co., for money due to the firm, & the same was duly registered under 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 55. Afterwards he executed a further charge to A. B. for money owing from himself or from him & his partners, from time to time, to the firm of C. D. & co., however that firm should be constituted, but it was not registered. He then executed a further charge in favour of other persons, who registered their security:—Held: the unregistered further charge was inoperative.—PARR v. APPLEBEE (1855), 7 De G. 307. —— Second mortgage — Further advance on freight by first mortgagee—No notice of second mortgage.]—The first registered mtgee. of a ship made a further advance on the security of a mtge. comprising the ship & the freight thereof then earned or to be earned during the continuance of the security. Prior to the date of this further advance, the mtgor. had executed a second mtge. of the ship, & had given the second mtgee. a lien on the freight for a balance due to him. The first mtgee. had no notice of this second mtge., or of the lien on the freight, at the time of making the further advance. The second mtgee. completed his title by giving the charterers notice in writing of his lien on the freight. The first mtgee. subsequently took possession of the ship before she reached her port of discharge, & continued in possession till the ship was sold:—Held: the first mtgee. was entitled to priority over the charge of the second mtgee. of the freight, not only in respect of the amount due on his first mtge., but also in respect of the whole amount of his further advance, together with interest & costs.—LIVERPOOL MARINE CREDIT CO. v. WILSON (1872), 7 Ch. App. 507; 41 L. J. Ch. 798; 26 L. T. 717; 20 W. R. 665; 1 Asp. M. L. C. 323, L. JJ.

308. —— —— —— With notice.]—On Oct. 28, 1892, S. being the registered owner of the B., executed a mtge. to the M. co., which recited that they had accepted drafts of S.'s firm for £20,000, & might make further advances from time to time to S. or on account or to order of him or his firm, & in order to secure to the M. co. payment in cash upon demand of the advances, & any renewals of same, & any further or other payments or claims of any description which might be due or growing due, by S. or his firm to them on any account, S. covenanted to pay them the sums for the time being due on the mtge. whether by way of principal or interest; & for the purpose of better securing to them "the payment of such sums as last aforesaid," he mortgaged the ship B. This mtge. was registered as a mtge. to secure an account current on the day it was executed. On the same day S., by letter, requested the M. co. to make him advances by acceptances, &, as security for same & any other advances whatsoever present or future, said he had mortgaged or would mortgage the B. It was part of the arrangement that the amount covered by the bills should be reduced at the end of every six months. On Apr. 20, 1893, S. failed to make the due reduction. On May 15, he granted a second mtge. on the B. to T., which was registered on May 30. On Sept. 1, he, in consideration of a further advance, hypothecated to the M. co. an equal amount of the freight of the ship, which was then chartered to load a general cargo. He directed his agents at the port of discharge to pay that proportion of freight to the M. co., notice being given to T. He subsequently executed an assignment of the freight to the M. co. to secure advances for necessary disbursements. T. transferred their mtge. to pltf., on whose behalf an attachment was placed upon the freight. The ship was sold by the M. co., under their power of sale, & they paid themselves their advances under the first mtge. They further claimed out of the proceeds of the sale the subsequent advances by the assignment. Before making the further advances the M. co. had notice of the second mtge.:—Held: the last advances were covered by the first mtge., but the M. co. were not entitled to payment out of the proceeds of the ship in priority to the claim of pltf. as assignee of T.

The general principle that a first mtgee. whose mtge. is taken to cover future advances cannot claim in priority over a second mtgee. the benefit of advances made after he had notice of the second mtge., applies to the registered mtges. of ships, notwithstanding Merchant Shipping Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 69. Where priorities depend, not upon the dates of the instruments, but upon a state of facts wholly independent of the dates of the instruments, that sect. does not apply.

The M. co., although they arrested the ship, did not take possession of her before the freight was paid:

Sect. 3.—Transfer and transmission of property in ships: Sub-sect. 3, K. (a) & (b) i., ii., iii. & iv.]

—Held: they were not liable to account for the freight as mtgees. in possession. Having received it as assignees of freight they were entitled to it as against the second mtgees., although the assignment was made after notice of the second mtge.

Commission of 2½ per cent. charged by the mtgees. as part of the expense of the sale of the ship disallowed; it being an established principle that a mtgee. conducting a sale under his power of sale is so far in the position of a trustee that he can make no charge for his trouble in connection with the sale. No agreement between the parties can render such a charge valid.

Commission of 2 per cent. in respect of cash advances stipulated by letter allowed, on the ground that the letters created a valid collateral agreement, which was not void because not in the statutory form, or as clogging or otherwise affecting the redemption.—THE BENWELL TOWER (1895), 72 L. T. 664; 8 Asp. M. L. C. 13.

309. —— Unregistered prior mortgage — Mortgagee with notice.]—The registry is conclusive as to the ship being in a fit state to be registered under 8 & 9 Vict. c. 89, although there may be evidence to show that the ship was not completed at the time of the registry.

The registry is conclusive evidence of the title, & an indorsement on that registry good against a prior equitable mtgee., although the party subsequently obtaining registry of his incumbrance had full notice of the prior charge.—COOMBES v. MANSFIELD (1855), 3 Drew. 193; 3 Eq. Rep. 566; 24 L. J. Ch. 513; 25 L. T. O. S. 29; 1 Jur. N. S. 270; 3 W. R. 345; 61 E. R. 877.

310. —— Prior equitable charge—Notice of charge.]—Although equitable interests in ships are recognised, a legal mtge. of a ship, in statutory form & registered, has priority over an equitable charge previously given, even where the legal mtgee. takes with notice of the charge.—BLACK v. WILLIAMS, [1895] 1 Ch. 408; 64 L. 311. Discharge of first mortgage — Purported revival by note on register—Priority as against second mortgagee.]—A. mortgaged a ship for £1,200 to B., who transferred the mtge. to C. A. then executed a second mtge. for £400. B. afterwards paid off C. & C. signed a statutory receipt, instead of a re-transfer. This receipt was produced to the registrar, who made an entry in the register book, under Merchant Shipping Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 68, to the effect that the mtge. had been discharged. C. afterwards executed a deed purporting to be a retransfer of the £1,200 mtge. to B., which was registered, & at the same time a note was made by the registrar against the entry of the receipt, stating that the receipt was signed in error, & the mtge. was afterwards again transferred to C., to secure a balance on account current, & this deed remained in C.'s hands, after satisfaction of all that was due on the account. B. then took a fresh mtge. from A. for £2,500, which included the £1,200 & £400 & had since been transferred to pltf. After the new mtge., B. agreed with C. that the mtge. for £1,200 should be a security for advances on an account current. The transfer of the mtge. to pltf. was not registered until after this agreement. Upon a question of priority between C. & pltf.:—Held: the receipt with the entry on the register operated as a discharge of the first mtge., & the same could not afterwards be revived by the note made by the registrar.—BELL v. BLYTH (1868), 4 Ch. The ship was attached in a foreign port by creditors of D., the registered owner, & proceedings were had in the ct. there for the sale of the ship. The agents of A. & B. intervened in these proceedings to protect the rights & assert the claims of A. & B. as mtgees. The ct. there refused to take notice of the claim as mtgees., as by the law of the state a mtge. of chattels was invalid. The ship was ordered to be sold. It finally arrived in a British port. Thereupon pltfs. as mtgees. filed their bill to confirm the mtge., & for the usual directions:—Held: the judgment of the foreign law ct. was not binding on the courts in England, the lex loci contractus being ignored by that ct.; pltfs. not having originated proceedings in the foreign law ct., but, on the contrary, their title being wholly denied by it, they were not estopped from proceeding here.—SIMPSON v. FOGO (1860), 1 John. & H. 18; 29 L. On arrival there the vessel & her freight were arrested by defts., British subjects, claiming as creditors of the mtgors. for necessaries supplied to the ship, & in respect of which they had rendered "executory" in France a judgment obtained by default in England. The mtgees. intervened in the proceedings in France, & for the purpose of assisting them in those proceedings they commenced separate actions against defts., the necessaries men, & defts., the mortgagors, asking, under R. S. C., 1883, Ord. XXV., r. 5, for declaratory judgments that they as mtgees. in possession were entitled to the ship & her freight in priority to the necessaries men & to the mtgors. Both defts. moved to stay the actions as vexatious:—Held: the action against defts., the necessaries men, would be allowed to proceed, for the opinions of foreign experts were conflicting as to the force to be attributed to an English judgment in a French ct., & no other sufficient evidence had been given to show that, in the proceedings in France, the declaratory judgment asked for would not be of use to pltfs. to protect their interests as mtgees. of the vessel & owners of the freight.—THE MANAR, [1903] P. 95; 72 L. In Feb. 1868, in the port of London, pltfs., by the order of the master, did work & furnished supplies to the ship necessary to put her in a seaworthy condition. In July, 1868, B. executed an instrument for the transfer of the mtge. to deft. This transfer was without valuable consideration, & was made to enable deft. to take charge of the ship for B. In July, 1868, deft. took possession of the ship. Afterwards pltfs. instituted a suit against the ship to recover the amount due to them for the work & supplies. At the time of the institution of the suit the owners of the ship were domiciled in Nova Scotia. That while C. was owner, the master, during a voyage, drew a bill on C. for necessary disbursements in favour of L. That C. indorsed the bill to defts., British subjects residing in England, without value. That the bill was duly presented to C. for acceptance, & dishonoured. That defts., knowing that the ship was about to call at Havre, in France, & that a bonâ fide holder there of the bill could attach the ship, & procure the ship to be sold for the purpose of paying such bill, fraudulently conspired with T., a French subject residing in France, to indorse the bill to him without value, that T. might attach the ship at Havre, & obtain the sale thereof, & that T. should falsely represent that he was the bonâ fide owner of the bill for valuable consideration, & so obtain the attachment of the ship. That in pursuance of the conspiracy defts. indorsed the bill to T., who, upon the arrival of the ship at Havre, took proceedings to attach the ship, & fraudulently represented that he was the bonâ fide owner of the bill for valuable consideration, & thereby obtained an attachment of the ship, & thereby pltf. lost his property in the ship:—Held: the declaration was bad, as it was consistent with the averments that pltf. had notice of the proceedings at Havre, & purposely allowed judgment to go by default, or that he might have appeared in the French ct., & been heard on the question whether T. was holder for value; & while the foreign judgment remained unreversed the action was not maintainable.—CASTRIQUE v. BEHRENS (1861), 3 E. & E. 709; 30 L. His claim, however, is postponed to that of a necessaries man. On a motion to determine priorities between English claimants, in respect of necessary repairs effected upon a French ship & claimants under a French hypotheque upon the ship:—Held: as the rights given under the hypothèque must be determined according to French law, which have greater rights than those given by English law to a necessaries man who had merely the right to sue in rem, the claim of the necessaries men, according to the lex fori by which the question of priorities must be determined, was postponed to the claim of the mtgees.—THE COLORADO, [1923] P. 102; 92 L. (2) The legal title of a mtgee. of a ship who, for the purpose of facilitating a sale by the mtgor., conceals his mtge., cannot prevail in equity against a purchaser for valuable consideration without notice.

The registered owner of an American ship, mortgaged her by a bill of sale duly recorded, as required by the American law, for making a valid mtge., but no notice of the mtge. was indorsed on the certificate of registry, such indorsement not being required by the American law, & in this case being purposely omitted in order to facilitate the sale of the ship. The ship was then, with the consent of the mtgee., sent to England, with a power of attorney authorising the captain to sell her. Afterwards the mtgor., without the knowledge of the mtgee., revoked the power of attorney authorising the captain to sell the ship, & executed a new power to another person under which the ship was sold. The shares were forthwith transferred to the purchasers by registered bill of sale. After the contract & transfer, but before the purchase-money was paid or applied the purchasers received notice of an unregistered mtge. prior in date to the contract. In an action by the mtgees. to stop the entire purchase-money:—Held: as 1894 Act, s. 56, enabled the vendor as registered owner not only "absolutely to dispose" of the shares but also "to give effectual receipts" for the purchase-money, it enabled him to enter into a valid contract as to the application of the purchase money & therefore the purchaser's contractual right to apply part of the purchase money in discharge of the vendor's debt to the ship, a right in which as part owners they were pecuniarily interested took precedence over the prior unregistered mtge.—BARCLAY & CO., LTD. v. POOLE, [1907] 2 Ch. 284; 76 L. J. Ch. 488; 97 L. T. 632; 10 Asp. M. L. C. 574.

353. —— Previous purchase without registered title.]—Where a part owner of a ship institutes a suit against the ship claiming as against his co-owner an account & a sale of the ship, a mtgee. holding a mtge., which could not be satisfied, by a sale of the ship, is entitled, on intervening, in the suit, to a release of the ship & to his costs from the time of his claiming the release.

A shipowner sold certain shares in a ship & the purchaser having neglected to register the sale, subsequently mortgaged the whole ship to a third person, who had no knowledge of the previous sale, to secure a balance exceeding the value of the ship. The purchaser subsequently registered his shares, & then finding the mtge. registered, instituted a suit against the ship claiming as against his co-owner an account & the sale of the ship. The mtgee. intervened & claimed the release of the ship & damages & costs for its detention:—Held: the mtgee. was entitled

359. The mtgor. died intestate, & the mtgees. sold the ship under their power of sale, & executed a bill of sale to the purchaser. By mistake, a receipt for the payment of the mtge. money was indorsed on the mtge. & signed by the mtgee. & produced to the registrar of shipping who recorded the same. Afterwards the bill of sale was produced to the registrar, who refused to register it, upon the ground that the property in the ship had vested in the representatives of the mtgor. In order to complete the title of the purchaser a suit in rem was instituted on behalf of the mtgee. & purchaser, & in such suit the ct. held it had jurisdiction to grant a decree declaring that the purchaser was entitled to possession of the ship.—THE ROSE (1873), L. SUB-SECT. 4.—PROHIBITION OF TRANSFER.

360. Jurisdiction to prohibit—Probate Division.]—The Ct. of Probate, as a division of the High Ct. of Justice, has vested in it the jurisdiction formerly exercised by the High Ct. of Ch., & therefore may, under Merchant Shipping Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 65, direct an order to issue prohibiting the dealing in any share of a ship for a time & on conditions to be named therein, & the registrar of shipping, on being served with such order or an official copy thereof, must obey the same.—NICHOLAS v. DRACACHIS (1875), 1 P. D. 72; 45 L. J. P. 45; 24 W. R. 461.

361. Restrain by injunction — Pending determination of rights at trial.]—Between the date of a bill of sale of shares of a ship & the entry of the transfer on the register the purchaser had notice that the vendor, though the shares were registered in his name, was a trustee. The case presenting a primâ facie appearance of fraud, the ct. granted an injunction to restrain the purchaser from dealing with the shares or indorsing the transfer on the certificate of registry, so as to insure the effective determination of the questions at the hearing.—ARMSTRONG v. ARMSTRONG (1854), 21 Beav. 71; 2 W. SUB-SECT. 5.—CERTIFICATES OF MORTGAGE AND SALE.

See 1894 Act, ss. 39–46.

362. Certificate of sale—Exercise of power not in conformity with directions in certificate—Consideration less than minimum price.]—Under Merchant Shipping Act, 1854 (c. 104), the registry of a bill of sale, which, though purporting to be valid, so that the registrar has no alternative but to register it, is in fact invalid, & gives no title, even at law, to the person thereby registered as sole owner of the ship.

Therefore, where a bill of sale, though executed by the person named for that purpose by pltf., the then owner of the ship, & purporting in all other respects to be made in conformity with the certificate of sale, was, in fact, made for less than the minimum price specified in the certificate, & the ship was registered in the name of the purchaser as sole owner:—Held: the registry was void, & the ship having been sold by arrangement pending the suit, pltf. was entitled to the net proceeds of the sale.—ORR v. DICKINSON (1859), John. 1; 28 L. SUB-SECT. 6.—TRANSMISSION OF TITLE.

See 1894 Act, ss. 27, 28, 55.

363. What amounts to transmission — Sale by licitation without conveyance by bill of sale.]—The transfer of a British ship is governed by the express provisions of Merchant Shipping Acts, which make a clear distinction between the legal estate & mere beneficial interests therein:—Held: (1) a sale by licitation of a British ship, or of a share therein, without a conveyance by bill of sale did not create such an interest in the purchasers as rendered it compulsory on the Registrar, under Merchant Shipping Act, 1854 (c. 104), to register them as owners, & the registrar was right in refusing so to do, & to erase from his books the inscriptions contained in the register against the ship in the names of the mtgees.; (2) a purchaser under a judicial sale, of a beneficial interest in a British ship, is not entitled to be registered as owner of it. There is no provision in Merchant Shipping Acts which authorises the registrar to erase entries of mtges. In case of their having been duly discharged, an entry to that effect may be made under Merchant Shipping Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 68.—CHASTEAUNEUF v. CAPEYRON

Deft., part owner of a ship, by an agreement made in June 1840, contracted for the sale of her interest therein to one V., & received the price by bill at six months, dated July 13, drawn by V. on one B., who was also a part owner, & who acted as ship's husband. By arrangement between V. & B. the bill of sale, which was dated Aug. 18, was made to B., by whom the acceptance was afterwards paid. The jury having found that the bill of sale was bonâ fide executed in pursuance of the prior contract:—Held: deft. was not responsible for repairs done to the ship upon the order of B. between June 11 & Aug. 5.—CURLING v. ROBERTSON (1844), 7 Man. & G. 336; 8 Scott, N. 378. —— Carried out under authority of stranger —Repair.]—Pltf. supplied new running rigging to the ship P., then lying in dock, on the order of T., who was on board & acting as her master. This new running rigging was necessary for her outfit. Deft. was registered as owner of the ship; & T. was registered as master. Pltf., about the time he supplied the goods, inspected the register. Deft. afterwards sent the vessel on another voyage with a different captain aboard, & carrying with her all the rope which pltf. had sent for the running rigging, most of it worked up, but some not. Pltf. made out an invoice, debiting "Captain T. & the owners," & demanded payment from deft., who denied his liability. Deft. proved, on the trial, that he had made an agreement to sell the ship to G., to be employed as an emigrant ship, deft. to repair her, so as to be approved by the Emigration Comrs., & G. to pay the price out of the freight. T. was appointed master by G.; & deft. never saw him or desired him to order anything for the ship, but there was evidence that T. was put on the register with deft.'s concurrence, & that, whilst T. was acting as master, deft. kept concurrent possession of the vessel, & executed some other repairs, & also paid the dock dues; & that the new running rigging ought, under the agreement, to have been supplied by him, the Emigration Comrs. having condemned the old running rigging. Deft. not being satisfied as to payment by G., & the agreement not being binding under Registration Acts, as it did not recite the certificate of registration, took exclusive possession of the vessel. On these facts the case was left to the jury, who found for pltf.:—Held: there was evidence, under these circumstances, to go to the jury that pltf. supplied the new running rigging on the credit of deft., & that deft. had given T. authority to pledge deft.'s credit for the rigging so supplied.

The legal title to a ship will furnish primâ facie evidence that repairs are made under the authority & for the benefit of the legal owner; but, if it appear that they were made under the authority & for the benefit of another, the legal owner will not be answerable (WIGHTMAN, J.).—FROST v. OLIVER (1853), 2 E. &. 384. —— —— —— Effect of clause making master agent of charterers.]—A charterparty contained a proviso that the captain & crew, although appointed & paid by the owners, should be the servants of the charterers, & that in signing bills of lading the captain should only do as the agent of the charterers, & that the charterers would indemnify the owners against all liabilities arising from the captain signing the bills of lading. The captain signed bills of lading in the ordinary form for goods to be delivered to the holders of the bills of lading, they paying freight & other conditions as per charterparty. The goods were misdelivered, & an action was brought by the holders of the bills of lading against the shipowners for the loss:—Held: (1) the special clause in the charterparty was binding only between the owners & the charterers, & did not affect the liability of the owners to the holders of the bills of lading, who were entitled to consider the captain as the agent of the owners; (2) the reference to the charterparty in the bills of lading did not give the holders constructive notice of the contents of the charterparty, the equitable doctrine of constructive notice of contents of documents not being applicable to mercantile transactions.—MANCHESTER TRUST v. FURNESS, [1895] 2 Q. B. was at liberty to go to any port, & take or refuse any cargo he chose, & was also to hire & pay the crew & supply the stores, A. having no control over the vessel. thirds of the gross freights, paying thereout the mate, crew, cost of provisions, & the expenses of the voyage, & handing over one-third of the gross freights, less harbour & towage dues & brokerage, to deft., the owner, who provided the barge & paid for her upkeep. Neither the charterparty nor the bill of lading contained any reference to the owner. C., described only as "of the good ship the Myrtle," signed the charterparty, but not as "master" or "for the owner," & in the bill of lading, which he signed as C., he was referred to as "the master of the ship." In an action by pltfs. against deft. to recover the amount of the lost cargo, deft. denied liability on the ground that the contract was with the master, & that there was nothing to show that he was agent of, or servant for, an undisclosed principal. It appeared from the evidence that C. usually arranged the chartering; that he was appointed by deft. to work & sail the ship; & that he was not dismissible during the continuance of the voyage except for grave misconduct:—Held: upon the true inference to be drawn from the facts as proved, there was no demise or bailment of the ship to the master; & he managed & sailed the ship for the joint benefit of himself & the owner whose servant or agent he was; & the owner was liable on the contract.—ASSOCIATED PORTLAND CEMENT MANUFACTURERS (1910), LTD. v. ASHTON, [1915] 2 K. ### SUB-SECT. 2.—RELATION OF PART OWNERS INTER SE.

A. In General.

394. Tenants in common.]—Part owners of a ship are tenants in common, not joint tenants. No lien therefore on the share of one, a bkpt. having been also managing owner, for outfit, freight, etc., due to the others.—Ex p. YOUNG (1813), 2 Ves. & B. 242; 2 Rose, 78, n.; 35 E. R. 311, L. C.

395. ——.]—The owners of a ship are not interested in it as joint tenants, but as tenants in common; upon a bkpcy., therefore, bkpt.'s share passes to creditors under bkpcy., without being liable specifically to the claims of the other part owners, in respect of their disbursements & liabilities for the ship.—Re NICHOLSON, Ex p. HARRISON (1814), 2 Rose, 76, L. C.

396. ——.]—An action is maintainable by a ship's husband, who is also part owner, against one of several other part owners, for his proportion of outfit, although there was no express promise; part owners of ships being tenants in common, & not joint tenants, & each separately liable for his proportion of outfit.

Where the dealings between the parties are on the footing of one part owner having a larger share of the ship than appears by the register, such part owner is liable to the ship's husband, in proportion of such larger share.

A part owner of a ship is not necessarily a partner.—HELME v. SMITH (1831), 7 Bing. 709; 5 Moo. & P. 744, 9 L. J. O. S. C. P. 206; 131 E. R. 274.

A ship's husband cannot, without express authority, render the owners liable for the premiums paid in insuring the ship; but slight evidence of recognition of the insurance by an owner will be sufficient to make him liable.

Generally, part owners of a ship are not partners, but tenants in common (COLERIDGE, J.).—GRIFFITHS v. HICKS (1850), 15 L. T. O. S. 349; subsequent proceedings (1851), 16 L. T. O. S. 341.

ship, whether as freight, cargo or otherwise, follows the general law of partnership.

A part owner of a ship has a right to require the gross freight to be applied, in the first place, in payment of the expense of the outfit of the ship for the voyage in which the freight was earned, notwithstanding he might sue his co-owners for their proportion of the expenses before the adventure ends.

The same rule applies to the expenses of repairs to the hull of the ship, where such repairs were done with a view to the particular adventure in which the earnings were made, & without which that adventure could not have been undertaken; & it would seem that the circumstance that such repairs are not exhausted in the adventure does not create any exception to the rule.

The term "lien" does not properly describe the right of a part owner to be reimbursed, out of the gross freight, the amount of expenses incurred in the prior repair & outfit of the ship.

In 1883 the managing owners sent V. £8 in respect of profits on his share, & subsequently sent him a statement of accounts. No bill of sale of the share was ever executed by the managing owners, & it appeared that their shares in the Bonnie Kate were mortgaged at the time of the sale to V., & that subsequently they never were in a position to redeem them. Certain of the owners having paid losses incidental to the working of the ship, now sued V. as a co-owner for his proportion of the losses:—Held: notwithstanding the receipt by V. of the £8, he was not, either in law or equity, a co-owner, the managing owners had no authority to pledge his credit, & he was not liable.—THE BONNIE KATE (1887), 57 L. D. Actions between Part Owners.

436. Jurisdiction of Court of Chancery—Construction of agreement between part owners.]—No question arises as to the jurisdiction of this ct. in enforcing the rights of some against the other part owners of a ship, with regard to the management of the ship & the possession of the certificate of registry, where those rights are regulated by an agreement entered into between all the owners of the ship.

The first clause of the agreement runs thus:—"It is agreed by the owners of the barque Deborah, that the ship shall be managed by Messrs. D. & S., who shall receive a commission of 2½ per cent. on all disbursements." I take the effect of this clause to be to place Messrs. D. & S. in the position of managing owners, or, in other words, of ship's husbands; & the powers & duties of ship's husbands are thus stated in Abbott on Shipping: "He is to see that the ship is properly repaired, equipped & manned; to procure freights or charterparties; to preserve the ship's papers; to make the necessary entries; adjust freight & averages; disburse & receive moneys; & keep & make up the accounts as between all parties interested. be considered to be the acts of all the part owners, who are liable on all contracts entered into by him for the conduct of their common concern—the employment of the ship." Deft., therefore, must, I think, be considered to have given all these powers to D. & S. by the first clause of the agreement (TURNER, V.-C.).—DARBY v. BAINES (1851), 9 Hare, 369; 21 L. J. Where a ship's accounts are rendered half-yearly, a co-owner is not entitled to recover upon accounts rendered for & at the end of the half-year in which the writ is issued.

When a co-owner acts as ship's agent, not managing owner, for a coasting steamer at one of her ports of call, he cannot in a co-ownership action for the settlement of ship's accounts recover amounts due to him as agent.—THE EIDER (1879), 40 L. T. 462; 4 Asp. M. L. C. 104.

445. —— Ordered by one part owner.]—The principle which regulates the present application I find accurately laid down by Abbott on Shipping, p. 134. Where the repairs are executed in a port in this country, the vessel, till parted with, is specifically chargeable with their amount, but the lien is lost with the possession. Where the repairs are ordered by the master, he, in the first place, incurs a personal liability, & considering him in general as the servant or agent of the owners, in the employment & management of the ship, they also become responsible for his orders, unless they are expressly excluded by the terms of the contract. The same observation applies to the case where a part owner gives the order; the liability attaches against them all, unless it be expressly provided against (LORD ELDON, C.).—Re STRICKLAND, Ex p. BLAND (1814), 2 Rose, 91, L. The necessary calculation having been made by W., the account was then paid to pltfs. through W., partly by a cheque of deft., A., payable to W.'s order, & indorsed by him for the amount of A.'s proportion, partly by cash payments from each of the other three defts. for the amount of their respective proportions, & partly by a bill at six months, drawn by W. on & accepted by B., for the amount of B.'s proportion of the said account. B.'s bill being dishonoured at maturity, pltfs. brought this action against defts. to recover from them, as joint owners of the ship, the amount of such dishonoured bill, in answer to which defts. contended that pltfs., by taking B.'s bill, & giving him time, had placed his co-debtors, defts., in a worse position, & necessarily postponed their remedy against B., & had consequently discharged defts.:—Held: giving judgment in favour of pltfs., & dismissing defts.' motion to enter a verdict or a nonsuit, deft. was bound by the mode of payment adopted, & that circumstance distinguished the case from that of principal & surety.—MOULD v. ANDREWS (1876), 35 L. 466. —— Action for freight.]—A charterparty contained stipulations (inter alia) that the captain should attend daily at the broker's office to sign bills of lading; that the ship should take on board all such lawful goods as the charterers might require; & then proceeded—"In consideration whereof the charterers agree to pay freight for the use & hire of the said ship the sum of £1,400, with a gratuity of 25 guineas to the master, payable before leaving London." Then followed this clause—"The owner further agrees, that the ship shall be ready to sail, etc., at the expiration of the said laying days, or sooner if required by the charterers. If the ship be not ready, either on the owner's or charterers' part, at the above-named dates, then demurrage to be paid by the party in default at the rate of £7 per diem. The ship to be ready on or before Nov. 10, or the charterers to have the option of cancelling this agreement." The freight was stipulated to be paid, partly by bills of lading, at the port of destination, to the extent of £800, etc., & balance of £600, in cash, less seventy days' discount from the date of clearing from London:—Held: the captain, with whom the contract was made in his own name, though only partly interested in it as part owner of the ship, was a proper party to sue on it.—SEEGER v. DUTHIE (1860), as reported in 8 C. 467. —— Damages for breach of terms of bill of lading—Part owner master of ship.]—By the terms of a bill of lading, a ship was "to take her regular turn in unloading" at the port of discharge. On the arrival of the ship the consignee refused to accept & unload the cargo, in consequence of some dispute between himself & the consignor, & the ship was kept several days without being unloaded:—Held: the bill of lading was a contract between the master & the consignor, & A., who was master & part owner, was entitled to recover damages from the consignor for his breach of contract in not allowing the ship to unload in

468. —— Action against charterers.] — In an action by one of several joint owners of a steamship against the charterers, the latter applied to have all the joint owners joined as pltfs. The names of all the persons on whose behalf pltf. sued had been already disclosed. The application was refused as satisfactory reasons must be given & none had been given in the present case.

R. S. C., Ord. 16, r. 9, applies to an action brought by one of several joint owners of a ship against the charterers.—DE HART v. STEVENSON (1876), 1 Q. B. D. 313; 45 L. J. Q. B. 575; 24 W. R. 367; 2 Char. Pr. Cas. 281.

470. —— Action to impugn bottomry bond — Though bond given by one part owner.]—(1) To justify the resort of a master of a ship to a bottomry bond, it is requisite by maritime law, that the advances should be merely to enable the ship to refit; or to pay for the repairs & despatch of the vessel for the completion of her voyage; & that the master should be unable to obtain such advances upon personal credit.

(2) The jurisdiction of the Ct. of Admlty., in cases of bottomry bond, is founded on the existence of necessity, arising from the want of personal credit.

(3) The sale of a bottomry bond, pursuant to public advertisement, by auction, to the lowest bidder, in a foreign port, by the master of a ship, is not sufficient to discharge a purchaser of the bottomry bond from making reasonable inquiries that the master is, under the circumstances, justified in granting the bond.

A bottomry bond on the ship, freight, & cargo, sold at public auction, in a foreign port, by the master & part owner of the ship, there being an agent of the charterer & sole owner of the cargo, willing to advance, on personal credit of the owner of the cargo, for the necessary repairs of the ship, under the circumstances, pronounced against.

(4) Semble: the master, though the original hypothecator of the ship, & a part owner, is not precluded, by the practice of the Ct. of Admlty., from joining his co-owners in impugning the bond.—SOARES v. RAHN, THE PRINCE OF SAXE COBOURG (1839), 3 Moo. ### SUB-SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

See 1894 Act, s. 59.

476. Managing owner — Commercial not legal expression.]—W. was the registered owner of certain shares in a ship, & had been entered on the register as managing owner. Deft. subsequently became the registered owner of other shares in the ship. Deft. was not aware in fact that W. was so registered as managing owner. W. sent the ship on a voyage without deft.'s knowledge, & contrary to the terms of an agreement made between them. Deft. did not participate in the adventure, & had previously informed W. that he did not intend to navigate the ship or take any part in her management. Pltfs. supplied necessaries for the ship previous to such voyage, upon the order of W. without the knowledge or consent of deft. Pltfs. before supplying the goods consulted the register, & found deft.'s name entered therein as part owner of the ship :—Held : the fact that deft. had allowed the entry on the register describing W. as managing owner to remain unaltered did not per se amount to a holding out of W. as his agent, so as to render deft. liable for the necessaries supplied by pltfs., & inasmuch as W. had not in fact authority to bind deft., pltfs. could not recover against the deft. for such necessaries.

The term managing owner is not defined in the Act . . . it is a commercial & not a legal expression (BOWEN, J.).—FRAZER v. CUTHBERTSON (1880), 6 Q. B. D. 93 ; 50 L. J. Q. B. 277 ; 29 W. R. 396.

SUB-SECT. 2.—APPOINTMENT.

See 1894 Act, s. 59.

481. Validity of deed continuing appointment—Founded on contract for sale of shares.]—A. & B., being owners of nine-sixteenth shares of a ship, & also husbands or managing owners, by deed, sold five-sixteenths to C. The deed contained a covenant that C. should be appointed to the command of the ship, & that A. & B. should continue to have the management, as husbands, & should elect the tradesmen & appoint all the officers ; & that if C. should relinquish the command, or die, A. & B. should appoint such fit person to succeed him as might be approved of by him or his exors., or that he or they might nominate a fit person to the command in his stead, & that A. & B. should be employed as the agent of C. in the concerns of the ship ; & if C. should be minded to sell all or any of his shares, he might do so, upon condition that the purchasers should abide by the stipulations in the deed, & not remove A. & B., or the survivor of them, from being managing owners, so long as they should perform the stipulations on their part :—Held : although the covenant to continue A. & B. as C.'s agents in the concerns of the ship might be lawful if it stood alone, yet the deed being founded on a contract for the sale of the shares, with a stipulation for the appointment to the command, & the continuance of the management, it was illegal & void.—CARD v. HOPE (1824), 2 B. & C. 661 ; 4 Dow. & Ry. 483. Evidence of appointment—Acting as ship's husband.]—Pltf., part owner of a ship, & who acted as ship's husband, being authorised by the other part owners, of whom deft. was one, to repair & lengthen the ship, gave verbal orders for the repairs, & entered into a written contract with a ship builder for lengthening the ship. Afterwards pltf. received a notice from deft. that he would not be answerable for any alterations in the ship. The work was completed & pltf. paid for it, & on telling deft. the amount, he said that "the ship had better have been sold." Pltf. having sued deft. for his proportion of the money paid :—Held : the fact of pltf. having acted as ship's husband was sufficient evidence of his appointment, without any formal proof.

An express authority is necessary from a part owner of a ship to the ship's husband to order works not necessary as repairs ; but such authority once given cannot be revoked after it has been acted upon, & it is for the part owner when sued for contribution to prove that it was revoked before the works were commenced or a contract for them entered into.—CHAPPELL v. BRAY (1860), 6 H. & N. 145 ; 30 L. 492. Right to remuneration — No fixed rate applicable.]—THE MEREDITH, No. 431, ante.

493. Right to commission—Director of company acting as ship's husband.]—H., being a director of a joint-stock co. established for the building, purchasing, hiring & employment of steam vessels, purchases a vessel for £1,340, & afterwards sells it to the co., as from a stranger, for £1,500, charging the co. with commission at 1 per cent. the broker's earnest money, & the expenses of the bill of sale to himself, there being but one bill of sale. Such a transaction cannot stand in a ct. of equity.

A ship's husband being the servant of the shipowners, holding an important office & open to the vigilant superintendence of his employers, it is primâ facie a breach of trust in any director of a co. established for the purpose of acquiring & working of vessels, especially where the directors have the exclusive management of the concern, to take upon himself the duties of ship's husband. Where, therefore, in a co. so constituted one of the directors with the consent of others forming with himself a board of directors, undertook the office of ship's husband, & in that character received out of the funds of the co. such sums for commission & brokerage as are usually allowed to the ship's husband:—Held: he must refund those moneys; & semble, the other members of the board of directors were similarly responsible in the event of any inability in the principal party implicated to refund.—BENSON v. HEATHORN (1842), 1 Y. & C. Ch. Cas. 326; 9 L. T. 118; 62 E. R. 909.

496. —— For services as ship-broker.]—The managing owner of a ship is competent to appoint himself to act as broker to the ship in collecting & distributing the freight, there being no incompatibility between those services, as, semble, there would be between the services of ship's chandler or ship's carpenter, & his fiduciary character as managing owner.

But, before allowing him a commission in respect of the services in question, the ct. directed an inquiry whether, according to the custom of shipowners or otherwise, he, being managing owner, was entitled to any & what commission in respect of duties performed by him, & which duties are ordinarily performed by shipbrokers.—SMITH v. LAY (1856), 3 K. & J. 105; 69 E. R. 1041; subsequent proceedings, sub nom. THE TUDOR, SMITH v. LAY (1858), 9 L. T. 119.

497. —— For procuring charters & freights.]—The procuring of charters & freights is one of the ordinary duties incidental to the position of a managing owner of a ship; & in the absence of a special contract he is not entitled to retain, as against the ship, commissions on the charters or freights procured, whether he is acting as shipbroker himself or employing other brokers.—WILLIAMSON v. HINE, [1891] 1 Ch. 390; 60 L. 498. Right to receive profits.]—Pltf. & deft. were partners, they were joint owners with B. of some ships, as to which B. acted as ship's husband, but the duties were principally performed for him by deft. There being no agreement on the subject between the parties:—Held: B. was entitled to the profits derived as ship's husband, & pltf. was not, as partner, entitled to participate in any share of them received by deft., by arrangement with B.—MILLER v. MACKAY (No. 2) (1865), 34 Beav. 295; 55 E. 499. A. effected a charterparty of the vessel, the charterer paying all expenses, & £130 per week for the ship, & £4 a week to A., who in the accounts he rendered to B. & C. represented the amount paid as £130 a week only:—Held: the concealment of the receipt of the £4 a week was such a fraud on B. & C., that it entitled them to put an end to the agreement.—THE PHŒBE, BRENAN v. PRESTON (1853), 9 L. SUB-SECT. 5.—AUTHORITY TO BIND OWNERS.

A. In General.

500. General rule—Authority to do all necessary acts—To enable ship to prosecute voyage.]—The ship's husband or managing owner has authority to do whatever is necessary to enable the ship to prosecute her voyage & earn freight.

Deft. was part owner, to the extent of 2-64ths in a ship which had been arrested in the Admlty. Ct. in a suit for collision. P., the other co-owner, who was also ship's husband or managing owner, in order to procure the release of the ship that she might be earning freight, induced pltf. to become bail for the ship in the Admlty. Ct., by which means the ship was released. The suit terminated in favour of the injured vessel. P. became bkpt., & the ship herself was lost. Pltf. having paid what was due from him under the bail bond, brought his action against deft. to recover back the money so paid:—Held: P., as managing owner, had, under these circumstances, authority to bind his co-owner, deft., & pltf. was therefore entitled to recover.—BARKER v. HIGHLEY (1863), 15 C. 501. —— —— In management of ship.]—A ship's husband is no doubt entitled to do all things usual in the management of the vessel, & to appoint an agent when in the ordinary sense the authority of an agent is required but not to appoint a ship's husband to act in his place (MATHEW, J.).—DOEG v. TRIST (1897), 13 T. L. R. 320; 2 Com. Cas. 153.

502. Institution of legal proceedings—Liability of co-owner for costs.]—Solr. in London brings his action against his debtor in Scotland for costs incurred in the conduct of an appeal in dom proc.

The action, in which the costs were incurred, was originally brought in the Admlty. Ct., to recover the amount insured upon salvage for a recapture made by the ship Diana, of which Y., O., & S., resp., were the owners; S. being however one of the registered owners only for security of a debt due to him from O. Pending the suit before the Judge Admiral the Diana was sold, & the debt paid to S. S.'s name was, however, continued in the subsequent proceedings in the Ct. of Session & House of Lords. Y., the ship's husband, by letter to the agent in Scotland, stated it to be S.'s request that a particular solr. named should be employed to conduct the appeal, & he was employed. To the action by the solr., S., who was the principal defender, the others being insolvent; pleaded the triennial prescription; & averred, & the averment not disproved, that Y. had no authority from him to write the letter to the agent in Scotland, that he never was consulted about the matter, & that the use of his name in the proceedings in Scotland & in dom. proc. had been entirely without his authority or knowledge. Answered that the law of Scotland & the triennial prescription did not apply, the debt having been contracted in England; & that, supposing that to be wrong, the prescription did not apply because the debt, was constituted by writ, Y., as ship's husband, having power to bind the other owners, & having bound them by his letter. Judgment below for the defender, the ct. being of opinion that it was itself the proper forum, & that a ship's husband could not bind the owners in this matter; & the grounds of judgment held in dom. proc. to be right. But the Lord Chancellor being of opinion that, by the policy of the Hawkesbury Acts, Y. might have bound S. as a co-owner, if their names appeared together as owners in the register, a copy of two registers, agreed by the parties to be a true copy produced, in one of which the name of S. appeared, in the other that of Y.; but not being together in the same register the Lord Chancellor conceived that it was too much to say that they were co-owners; & judgment affirmed.

I cannot conceive that a ship's husband has, as such, the power to pledge his owners to the expenses of a law suit (LORD ELDON, C.).—CAMPBELL v. STEIN (1818), 6 Dow, 116; 3 E. R. 1417, H. L.

503. —— —— Effect of delay in application to court.]—Where a shipowner applied to the ct. to set aside an order condemning him in the costs of unsuccessful legal proceedings taken in his behalf by the managing owner, on the ground that the proceedings had been instituted without his knowledge, consent, or ratification, & that the first intimation he had of the proceedings was a notice received by him about a month previous to the present application condemning him in the costs of such proceedings, the ct. refused to grant the application, as it did not appear that appct., though he had no knowledge of the institution of, was not aware of the pendency of the proceedings, & because he had not at once applied to the ct. on becoming aware of the proceedings, instead of delaying to take any steps for over a month.—THE BELLCAIRN (1886), 54 L. T. 544; 5 Asp. M. L. C. 582.

504. Borrowing money on security of charterparty.]—A ship's husband who had advanced for outfits & disbursements of the ship sums considerably exceeding the money received under the charterparty at the commencement of the voyage, had, before the freight was delivered, obtained a loan by deposit of the charterparty to relieve himself from his advances on account of the ship. Motion by one of the part owners to restrain the ship's husband from receiving or dealing with the freight, refused with costs, the ship's husband being entitled to receive the freight & deduct his disbursements, & his conduct not having been so improper as to justify the restraint of this right.—HARRIS v. REYNOLDS (1856), 9 L. T. 119; 4 W. R. 278.

505. —— Loan necessary to enable ship to prosecute voyage.]—A ship's husband & managing owner, as such, has no authority to borrow money on the credit of the co-owners of the ship.

Semble: a managing owner might have a right under exceptional circumstances to borrow money without express authority, if the loan were necessary to enable the ship to prosecute her voyage.—PRINGLE (ADAM) & CO. v. DIXON (1896), 2 Com. Cas. 38.

Annotation:—Reld. Doeg v. Trist (1897), 2 Com. Cas. 153.

506. —— On assignment of freight.]—S. & co. were owners of seven-eighths of an American vessel, & ship's husbands. T. was the owner of the remaining eighth, & was captain of the vessel, which was despatched on a voyage to Liverpool. Before the voyage, S. & co. spent a large sum in repairs, & for the purpose, as was alleged, of taking up bills which they had accepted on account of the repairs, they borrowed a sum of money from pltfs., & assigned the freight to them by way of security. On the arrival of the vessel in Liverpool, pltfs. obtained an injunction to prevent T. from receiving the freight:—Held: a part owner who is ship's husband has not the right as against other part owners of making an assignment of the whole freight to secure moneys advanced to him; the legal right to receive the freight was in the captain, & in the absence of any sufficient allegation & proof that he was about to misapply it, the injunction ought not to have been granted.—GUION v. TRASK (1860), 1 De G. 508. Sale of ship—Subsequent ratification by co-owners.]—D., the managing owner of a ship, through pltfs., his agents at Constantinople, sold her to the Turkish Govt., & received a bill upon the Oriental Bank in London for the amount of the purchase-money, which bill was duly paid. D. had no express authority at the time from defts., who were the owners of 23-64ths of the ship, to sell her, but the latter knew that a sale was contemplated; &, after the sale, they executed a power of attorney, reciting that they had agreed to sell the vessel to the Turkish Govt.; & had actually received the purchase-money, & empowering pltfs. to transfer their respective shares & to hand over the vessel to the purchasers. Defts. afterwards received from D., or settled in account with him, the value of their respective shares:—Held: the jury were warranted in finding that defts. had authorised the sale of the ship by D., or had by their subsequent ratification so adopted his act as to render them jointly liable to pltfs. for the commission due to the latter on the sale.—KEAY v. FENWICK (1876), 1 C. 509. —— Liability to co-owners for actual value.]—Where a person deals as owner with the property of another, so as to found an action of conversion by the owner, there is an implied covenant on the part of such person to pay for the property as if there had been a sale to him by the owner. The managing owner of a ship sold her without the consent of the owner of 2-64th shares:—Held: there was an implied covenant on the part of the managing owner to pay to the owner of shares a price representing their actual value.—NICOL v. HENNESSEY (1896), 44 W. R. 584; 12 T. L. R. 485; 40 Sol. Jo. 601; 1 Com. Cas. 410.

510. Charterparty cancelled—Liability of co-owners for compensation.]—A ship's husband, who has the authority of the owners of the ship to enter into a charterparty, & has accordingly made a charterparty by which commission on the freight, primage, & demurrage is stipulated to be due to the charterers on the execution of the charterparty, has not, without the express sanction of the owners, power to bind them by an agreement to cancel the charterparty & pay the charterers a sum in lieu of commission, although such agreement is for the benefit of the owners.—THOMAS v. LEWIS (1878), 4 Ex. D. 18; 48 L. J. Q. B. 7; 39 L. T. 669; 43 J. P. 56; 4 Asp. M. L. C. 51; sub nom. THOMAS v. OXLEY, 27 W. R. 111, D. C.

511. Authority to act on shore.] — The authority of the managing owner of a vessel extends to the conduct on shore of all that concerns the employment of the ship, so that co-owners in deputing to him the management of the vessel on their behalf thereby give him power to pledge their credit for what is necessary to repair her, so as to enable her to be employed in the ordinary course of trade suitable for the vessel, & it makes no difference in the liability of the co-owners that the managing owner has instructions to insure & has, in fact, collected the money from the underwriters to discharge a claim for heavy repairs consequent on damage sustained by the vessel.—THE HUNTSMAN, [1894] P. 214; 70 L. 515. —— By one co-owner alone.] — The managing owner of a ship is the agent of each co-owner separately, & each co-owner may retract his authority to the managing owner without consulting the other co-owners.

The managing owner of the Vindobala, with the authority of his co-owners, entered into negotiations abroad with the view of chartering the ship. These negotiations were carried on by an agent abroad. On July 17, 1884, a form of charter, signed by the managing owner, was offered to the proposed charterers. They objected to certain provisions in it, to which objections the agent, with the managing owner's authority, assented. On July 19, the charterers signed the charter, having previously introduced into it certain further alterations which had never been suggested to the managing owner's agent. On the same day certain of the co-owners gave notice to the managing owner that they refused to be bound by any charter. The managing owner, considering himself bound to sign the charterparty, signed it on July 22. The execution of the charterparty was prevented by the arrest of the Vindobala by the dissentient owners, & damages resulted therefrom:—Held: in a co-ownership's action, there was no binding contract until the managing owner signed the charter on July 22, &, as the dissenting owners had revoked their authority on July 19, they were not bound by the charter.—THE VINDOBALA (1889), 14 P. Mere delay in enforcing payment from the agent will not be sufficient for the purpose. Pltf. sold stores for a ship to T., who was ship's husband & managing owner. Deft. was part owner of the ship, & was also interested jointly with T. in the adventure for which the ship was being fitted out. Pltf. applied to T. for payment, but did not obtain it. Three months after the goods were supplied & again two years after that, deft. settled accounts with T. & gave him credit for the price of the goods, supposing that they had been paid for. 539. Forfeiture of ship—Who is liable—Bonâ fide purchaser after offence.]—A ship was arrested by the Crown in Tortola, on a charge of piracy. The affidavit which led to the warrant of arrest alleged, that the ship was bought at St. Marc, in Hayti, from a British subject by the revolutionary govt. of Hayti, & that the ship, having been equipped as a ship of war, was afterwards employed in acts of hostility. It appeared that the ship had been sold by public auction, six months before seizure, to a bonâ fide purchaser, a British subject. The Vice-Admlty. Ct. of Tortola sustained a protest to the jurisdiction of the ct. & decreed restitution of the ship, but without costs or damages:—Held: there was no authority to be derived from principle or precedent, for a ship sold by public auction to a bonâ fide innocent purchaser, before any proceedings have been taken on the part of the Crown against the ship, being afterwards arrested & condemned on account of having been engaged previously in piratical acts.—R. v. MCCLEVERTY, THE TELEGRAFO (OR THE RESTAURACION) (1871), L. 540. —— —— ——.]—A cause of forfeiture, under 17 & 18 Vict. c. 104, s. 103, was instituted on behalf of a British officer of customs against a vessel seized for an alleged infringement of the provisions of that sect. Pltf. in his statement of claim in effect alleged that on July 18, 1874, one of her owners, being a British subject, had falsely represented, contrary to the fact, & with intent to conceal the British character of such ship, that she had been sold to foreigners. An appearance in the action having been entered on behalf of a foreigner as deft., a statement of defence & counterclaim was delivered on his behalf, which in para. 7, thereof set up the defence, that on July 6, 1876, deft. became bonâ fide purchaser of the vessel proceeded against, for valuable consideration, without knowledge of any of the matters alleged in the statement of claim. Pltf. demurred to para. 7 of the statement of defence:—Held: the demurrer must be allowed; for the property in the vessel was divested out of its former owners, & vested in the Crown immediately on the commission of any of the offences in respect of which, under the provisions of the sect., the penalty of forfeiture was imposed.—THE ANNANDALE (1877), 2 P. A ship registered as a British ship was owned by a co. registered as a British co. under the Cos. Acts. Doubts having arisen as to the title of the ship to be registered as a British ship, the Comrs. of Customs & Excise, pursuant to the provisions of 1906 Act, s. 51, directed pltf., the registrar of shipping at the ship's port of registry, to require evidence to be given to his satisfaction that the ship was entitled to be so registered. The evidence adduced established that the affairs of the co. from the time the ship was bought & put upon the register were directed from Hamburg by the chairman of the board of directors, a naturalised British subject of German origin, who held the majority of the shares & resided at Hamburg both before & after the outbreak of war between Great Britain & Germany. Accordingly, proceedings for forfeiture were instituted in accordance with the provisions of 1894 Act, s. 76:—Held: the principal place of business of the co. was not within His Majesty's Dominions, & the ship, therefore, was forfeit to the Crown.—THE POLZEATH, [1916]

552. Implied contract—Contract for one voyage—Succeeding voyage performed without agreement—Presumption of continuance on former terms.]—The law will presume that the terms of a master's engagement for one voyage extend to a succeeding voyage performed without a new agreement, express or clearly implied. Deft. was sole owner of a ship which was equipped as a passenger ship, & chartered for Melbourne, Australia. Pltf., a master mariner, bought from him a small share of the ship, &, by a letter referring to the voyage then contemplated, became master, on the terms of receiving £15 a month, & half cabin passage money profits. The ship performed the voyage to Melbourne, carrying cargo only, & returned home. Deft., being managing owner, anticipating her arrival, had chartered the ship to carry goods & emigrants to New Zealand, the agreement being, that the charterers guaranteed the owners a lump sum; & if the freight & passage money, calculated as provided in the charter, should exceed that sum, the surplus should be equally divided between the charterers & the owners; & further appointing, amongst other things, that the master should keep account of the issue of all stores provided by the charterers, & account for all surplus stores, less ten per cent. This agreement was shown by deft. to pltf., who expressed his general satisfaction. No communication passed between them as to the terms on which pltf. should serve on the new voyage, except that pltf. would receive a gratuity from the charterers. Under this agreement the ship, under the command of pltf., took out to New Zealand a number of emigrants, including a number of cabin-passengers. Pltf. also received his gratuity from the charterers:—Held: the original agreement continued; & notwithstanding the altered circumstances, the master was entitled to a share of cabin passage money profits.—THE GANANOQUE (1862), 1 Lush. 448; 167 E. At the time when the crew were informed of the intention to take the ship to Holland, it is alleged that they declined to perform their duty, in pumping & in other matters requiring their exertion as sailors. Assuming the fact to be so such conduct would be insubordination, but it could not be desertion. . . . This statute does not warrant an arbitrary & unnecessary extension of terms (DR. LUSHINGTON).

PART III. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 4.—A. (a).

h. With whom agreement entered into—Delegate appointed by master.]—A master may delegate to a superintendent or foreman the duty of selecting fellow workmen or servants, & in such a case the master's obligation is limited to the exercise of reasonable care in selecting a competent person for such purpose.—WILSON v. HUME (1880), 30 C. P. 542.—CAN.

k. —— ——.]—Applt. was employed by the master of a ship to engage a seaman for the vessel, & engaged one accordingly. He was convicted of a breach of Shipping & Seamen's Act, 1903, s. 38, as not being one of the persons authorised under that sect. to engage seamen & apprentices. On appeal:—Held: applt. had been wrongly convicted, the master having power to employ any person for that purpose.—JOHNSON v. FLEMING (1907), 26 N. Z. L. R. 1272.—N.Z.

l. Agreements made abroad—Applicability of statutes.]—As the Canadian Seamen's Act, 1873, limits the effect intended to be given to its provisions to contracts made in the Dominion, it will not govern an agreement by the master of a Canadian registered vessel with a seaman entered into at Cardiff, in the United Kingdom, where such agreement was insufficient under the said Act, but sufficient under the Imperial Shipping Act.—THE WAVE QUEEN (1886), 12 Q. L. R. 218.—CAN.

m. —— ——.]—An agreement made with seamen out of Canada to serve on board a Canadian ship, is governed by the Imperial & not the Canadian Shipping Acts, & such engagement, instead of containing the nature or description of the voyage, may state its maximum period, as provided by 36 & 37 Vict. c. 85, s. 7 (Imp.).—THE COUNTY OF YARMOUTH (1886), 12 Q. L. R. 277.—CAN.

PART III. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 4.—A. (b).

568 i. What agreement must contain—Particulars of nature & duration of voyage.]—An agreement for service by a seaman was in the following words:—"From London to Plymouth & Sydney, & from thence wherever freight or employment offers, forwards & backwards, & backwards & forwards, in any rotation, & to her final port of discharge in the United Kingdom, calling at all necessary ports, the voyage not to exceed three years":—Held: the nature of the voyage (as distinguished from the course of the voyage, defined by its termini & intervening places of call), was sufficiently described, & the duration of the voyage was distinctly & unequivocally described.—Re MERCANTILE MARINE ACT, Ex p. SMITH (1852), 19 L. 568 iii. —— ——.]—A voyage was described as one to North & South America:—Held: such description was too indefinite to answer the leading purpose for which the words were framed under the heading "Nature of the Voyage" in Shipping Act, 1854.—THE MARATHON (1859), 10 L. C. R. 356; 2 S. V. A. R. 9.—CAN.

The promoter relied on Merchants' Shipping Act, 1854, s. 149 & the Act of 1873:—Held: as the intention of the Legislature evidently was to give the mariner have such a rational construction as to answer the leading purpose for which they were framed, viz. to give the mariner a fair intimation of the nature of the service in which he engages.

(3) The mere going on shore without leave to seek advice as to the effect of the articles, not a desertion under the general law.

(4) Imprisonment of the mariners for so going on shore an important ingredient in the case, as taking away all locus penitentiæ & all opportunity of returning to their duty on board the ship.—THE WESTMORLAND (1841), 1 Wm. Rob. 216; 1 Notes of Cases, 11.

571. Provision for transfer of crew — To other vessel in same employ.]—Pltf., a seaman in Mar. 1854, shipped on board a vessel of defts., called the Custos, to serve as steward, & signed arts., as required by 13 & 14 Vict. c. 93, which professed to be an agreement between the master & the several persons whose names were thereto subscribed, at £3 per month wages, for a voyage "from Liverpool to the west coast of Africa, to trade in any ports, bays, or rivers therein, & back to a final port of discharge in the United Kingdom, or for a term not to exceed three years.' The arts. contained amongst others, the following provision: "The crew, if required, to be transferred to any other ship in the same employ." After the Custos had remained some time on the African coast, pltf., at the request of the captain, was transferred to another & a larger vessel of defts. engaged in the same trade, called the Dauntless, entering into fresh arts. with the master, under which he was to receive wages at the rate of £4 per month. The Dauntless arrived in Liverpool on her return voyage in June, 1856, when pltf. claimed wages at £4 per month for the period during which he had served on board the Dauntless. Defts. refused to pay him at the increased rate, insisting that he was bound by the original articles to serve on board any ship "in the same employ"; & pltf. declined to accept the sum mentioned in the original articles: —Held: (1) the arts. were not invalid for being in the alternative, "from Liverpool to the west coast of Africa & back, or for a term not to exceed three years"; (2) the provision for the transfer of the crew to another vessel in the same employ, was not in contravention of the statute; (3) the provision for transfer was not limited to a transfer of the whole crew collectively, but the arts. constituted an agreement between the owners & each of the crew for himself, & consequently pltf. was bound to serve under the original arts. & there was therefore no consideration for the master's promise to pay the increased wages; (4) there was no neglect or refusal by defts. without sufficient cause, to pay pltf. the wages really due, so as to render them liable to the penalty imposed by the statute; (5) the circumstance of the fresh arts. not having been executed in the presence of a consular agent, was not an objection to their validity, provided they could have been set up.—FRAZER v. HATTON (1857), 2 C. B. N. S. 512; 26 L. J. C. P. 226; 30 L. T. O. S. 165; 22 J. P. 114; 3 Jur. N. S. 694; 5 W. R. 632; 140 E. R. 516.

572. Alternative stipulations — Validity.] — FRAZER v. HATTON, No. 571, ante.

573. Stipulations inconsistent with statute — Contrary to law—Deductions from wages.] — Stipulations in an agreement between the master of a ship & the crew which are inconsistent with any of the provisions of 1894 Act, as for instance where the agreement provides that for absence by a seaman from his ship without leave deductions shall be made from his wages differing in amount, & recoverable in a different manner, from the deductions provided by the Act, are "contrary to law" within sect. 114 of that Act, & are therefore not permissible.—MERCANTILE S.S. Co. v. HALL, [1909] 2 K. B. 423; 78 L. J. K. B. 812; 100 L. T. 885; 25 T. L. R. 623; 53 Sol. Jo. 562; 11 Asp. M. L. C. 273; 14 Com. Cas. 208.

(c) Construction of Agreement.

574. Meaning of words — "Or elsewhere."] — On a voyage described in a mariners' contract to be "from London to New South Wales & India, or elsewhere, & to return to a port in Europe":— Held: (1) the words "or elsewhere" composed no part of the original agreement; (2) if they were not interpolated, they were words that must receive a limitation; (3) the contract being once defeated was not subsequently reinstated; (4) the conduct of the captain justified the men in their abandonment of the ship.

They [the words "or elsewhere] are not to be taken in that indefinite latitude in which they are express; they are no description of a voyage; they are an unlimited description of the navigable globe; & are not to be admitted as a universal alibi for the whole world, including the most remote, & even pestilential shores, indefinite otherwise both in space & time; they must receive a reasonable construction, a construction which, I readily admit, must be, to a certain extent, conformable to the necessities of commerce. . . . I am of opinion, in the third place, that the contract being thus defeated, was not reinstated by any succeeding act of either party. What was a fair intimation of the nature of the services & of their length, the description from London to Quebec & back to the port of London was sufficient.—THE RED JACKET (1882), 8 Q. L. R. 205.—CAN.

n. —— Scale of provisions.] — An agreement under which a seaman was engaged on a coasting-trade ship contained a form in which the scale of provisions was intended to be set out. This form was not filled in, & merely had the words "sufficient without waste" written across it:—Held: the scale prescribed in Merchant Shipping Act, 1906, s. 25 (1), must be regarded as incorporated in the agreement, & its omission could not invalidate the whole agreement.—BARTLETT v. GORDON, Ex p. GORDON, [1912] S. R. Q. 165.—AUS.

o. —— Necessity for strict compliance with statute—Seamen engaged for fishing voyage.]—R. v. WILNEFF (N. S.) (1906), 1 E. L. R. 267.—CAN.

573 i. Stipulations inconsistent with statute—Contrary to law—Deductions from wages.]—Held: Shipping & Seamen's Act, 1877, s. 39 (7), only authorised the adoption by the parties of provisions as to fines, etc., to be contained in general regulations to be made by the Minister & applicable generally to the class of vessels referred to in sect. 39 & it was not sufficient that a clause as to fines inserted in a form of agreement in use by a particular steamship co. should have been sanctioned & approved by the Minister.

The subsequent provision of sect. 39 that such an agreement "may contain any other stipulations not contrary to law" does not authorise a provision as to forfeiture of wages for misconduct which has not been sanctioned by the Minister by regulation.—UNION S.S. CO. OF NEW ZEALAND, LTD. v. SPENDIFF (1903), 23 N. Z. L. R. 239.—N.Z.

PART III. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 4.—A. (c).

p. Construction of general terms following description of voyage.]—The description of a voyage was to the United States:—Held: a good description, & more general terms following were to be construed as subordinate to the principal voyage, in the preceeding terms, & restricted to a reasonable distance from the United States, under the terms "Nature of the Voyage" in Merchant Shipping Act, 1856.—THE ELLERSLEY (1860), done afterwards by the captain acting for the owners, was a mere continued violation of it, & the submission of the men to that violation could not divest them of that remedy which they had reserved to themselves—of a resort to the tribunals of their country for satisfaction. If even they had enjoyed the opportunity of a safe escape, it would not have recommended them to the ct. to have used it; for I will not venture to lay down so hazardous a proposition, as that sailors, when the articles are violated by their captain, are bound, at the peril of losing all their right to legal redress for such violation, to quit the ship instantly, thereby subjecting her to all the inconveniences & dangers consequent upon such a desertion, in a place where the deficiency of mariners could not be easily supplied. This ct. would not have attributed any such effect to their submission, even if it had not been compelled by necessity. They had a right to submit to the expired authority, reserving still to themselves the ultimate satisfaction which they looked to. I am of opinion, in the fourth place, that the mode of treatment, which they have received at Calcutta, justified their retiring from a service in which they had meritoriously hitherto submitted to what was, in its later stages, an usurped authority (LORD STOWELL). — THE MINERVA (1825), 1 Hag. Adm. 347; 166 E. R. 123.

575. —— Wages not payable "until arrival at port" — Meaning of "until."]—The seaman entered into articles to serve on board the ship Royalist "bound from the port of London to the South Seas to procure a cargo of sperm oil; & to return therewith to the port of London, where the voyage was to end." Instead of wages he was to receive a certain share of the net proceeds of the cargo; & it was stipulated that no one of the crew should "demand or be entitled to his share of the net proceeds of the said cargo until the arrival of the said ship or vessel at London, & her cargo should be there sold & delivered & the money for the same actually received by the owner." A cargo was procured, the ship was afterwards condemned in a foreign port, & the mariner accompanied part of the cargo on its homeward voyage, it having been transhipped into another vessel, the Alexander, but died at sea:—Held: "until" in the above articles, is a word of limitation of the mariner's right to wages, & not of postponement of payment of them merely; & consequently, that as the ship did not return to London, the administrator of the mariner was not entitled to recover his ninety-fifth share of the net proceeds of the Royalist's cargo, but only to recover on a quantum meruit for his services on board the Alexander.—JESSE v. ROY (1834), 1 Cr. 576. —— Dollar.]—If there be a doubt as to the interpretation of a seamen's contract, the contract is to be interpretated favourably to the seaman.

A seaman signed articles at New York to serve on board a British ship on a voyage to terminate either in the United States or in the United Kingdom, "amount of wages per month" to be "50 dollars." At the time of making this contract there was an inconvertible paper dollar currency in the United States, & the actual exchange value of the paper dollar in England currency was then 2*s.* 8½*d.* It afterwards depreciated in value. The voyage terminated at Liverpool in the United Kingdom, & the seaman was there discharged. Upon evidence that for twenty-five years past seamen discharged from American ships in London or Liverpool received their wages at the rate of 4*s.* 2*d.* a dollar:—Held: the parties contracted subject to this usage, & that the seaman was entitled to have the dollar reckoned at the value of 4*s.* 2*d.*—THE NONPAREIL (1864), Brown. & Lush. 355; 33 L. on board one of their vessels, & he signed arts. of agreement with the master in which his wages were stated to be £10 a month. Part of his duties was to take charge of the bar, & he was paid, in addition to the £10 a month, a commission of 5 per cent. upon the profits thereof. Subsequently it was verbally agreed between pltf. & the superintendent steward that he should receive £5 a month instead of the 5 per cent. commission. Neither the commission of 5 per cent. nor the sum of £5 a month in lieu thereof was entered in the arts. In an action to recover £10 being two months' extra payment in lieu of the commission: —Held: as it was part of pltf.'s duties as steward to take charge of the bar, the extra sum of £5 a month was payable for the performance of his duties as steward, & was therefore part of his "wages" as a "seaman," & as it was not entered in the arts., it was not recoverable.—THOMPSON v. NELSON (H. & W.), LTD., [1913] 2 K. 585. For voyage—Or prolonged period.] — A seaman's contract is usually for a voyage, or, if not, then for some prolonged period of time, & it cannot be determined by notice. From the nature of the case, interruptions of the voyage &/or the services of the seaman are frequent, & the seaman has not the opportunity of putting an end to his engagement by notice. If he leaves the ship before the end of the voyage contracted for, he is liable to be prosecuted for desertion. It may well be that under these circumstances it is still the law that a seaman is not disentitled to his wages during the time when, through some external cause for which neither he nor the shipowner is responsible, the voyage is interrupted, if the interruption is only temporary & the voyage is resumed (GREER, J.).—BROWNING v. CRUMLIN VALLEY COLLIERIES, [1926] 1 K. B. 522; 95 L. J. K. B. 711; 134 L. T. 603; 90 J. P. 201; 42 T. L. R. 323; 24 L. G. R. 302.

586. When seamen entitled to quit ship — Clause in articles—After three months if ship safely in port.]—If there be a clause in ships' articles that the seamen may leave at the end of three months if the ship is in port or in perfect safety, of which the captain is to be the sole judge, & the ship be in port in safety after three months, the seamen may leave the ship, without the permission of the captain.—NEAVE v. PRATT (1807), 2 Bos. & P. N. R. 408; 127 E. R. 687.

587. —— Whether after mooring of ship — Trade usage.]—A seaman, who has engaged to serve on board a collier, "from Shields to London, & back," quits the vessel at the port of London:—Held: he had not incurred a forfeiture of his wages; the master failing to supply him with provisions.

Seamen must be found with provisions as long as they remain on board, & are willing to do their duty. . . . Where seamen engage on board a vessel in the coal trade for the run, or voyage, to London only, there is a custom as to the time of their staying on board after the mooring of the vessel, but the same does not in any manner extend to seamen entering into contracts for a voyage to London & back to the port from whence they sailed. Where there is a great distress for coals, ships are in the habit of waiting for an advanced price; a system which is much discountenanced in the London trade (LORD STOWELL).—THE CASTILIA (1822), 1 Hag. Adm. 59; 166 E. R. 22.

Annotation:—Refd. Edward v. Trevellick (1854), 2 C. L. R. 1605.

588. —— After discharge of cargo — Where contract not superseded.]—A vessel, whose voyage was described in the articles as to Madras & Calcutta & back to London, deviated, under a new charterparty, from Madras by Prince of Wales' Island to Calcutta. The deviation, though not notified, was known to the crew, who were dissatisfied, but did not remonstrate. The mariner, who after arriving at Calcutta, soon demanded his discharge, & refused to work, was put in irons till the unloading was completed, & then quitted the ship:—Held: (1) such proposed deviation entitled him to his discharge at Madras; (2) his remaining on board subsequently was not an implied consent, nor, as the vessel was not, under the new charterparty, to return direct from Calcutta to England, a virtual renewal of his engagement. The whole wages, to the time of his quitting the ship, & costs, pronounced for; though the ct. inclined that the mariner had acted illegally in refusing to discharge the cargo.

(3) A spontaneous deviation of importance entitles mariners to their discharge by the law of England; & where by some other codes an alteration is permitted, the mariners are to be compensated.

(4) The law of England, in ordinary cases, requires the mariner to stay by the ship till the discharge of the cargo; but this is only where the other party has done nothing to supersede the contract. Deviations, proceeding from accident or overruling authority, do not amount to a breach of the mariner's contract.

If contingencies are incident to such voyages, & can be foreseen, they should be provided for in the ship's articles. If they arise unexpectedly, power should be given to the master to make compensation for any deviation that may be legally considered to affect the original contract (SIR CHRISTOPHER ROBINSON).—THE CAMBRIDGE (1829), 2 Hag. Adm. 243; 166 E. R. 233.

589. —— Termination of voyage — Circumstances showing termination.]—A seaman signed articles "for a voyage not exceeding two years' duration . . . to end at such port in the United Kingdom or Continent of Europe, within home trade limits, as may be required by the master":—Held: although under such articles the voyage may come to an end without any express election by the master, & although, if the voyage has in fact so come to an end, the master cannot prolong its continuance by requiring the seaman to go on to a further port, the mere facts that the ship has discharged her cargo, that she has arrived in a

591. Whether seaman entitled to quit ship.]—On a contract "to V. D. Land & elsewhere, & back to London":—Held: a forfeiture of wages was not incurred by the refusal of a mariner to work during a voyage to Rotterdam.

What the seamen were not bound to accede to, cannot be considered as such a desertion of their duty as to amount to any forfeiture whatever. The owners had reserved in their own minds, the final termination of the voyage, but I must say that both parties have a right to know what is the precise voyage for which they undertake to contract. It may be said that the alteration is slight, that it is a very little prolongation of the voyage, but it is perfectly clear, that the seamen are not the less entitled to know that (LORD STOWELL).—THE COUNTESS OF HARCOURT (1824), 1 Hag.
